APPENDICES
Preamble

The American states signatory to the present Convention,

Reaffirming their intention to consolidate in this hemisphere, within the framework of democratic institutions, a system of personal liberty and social justice based on respect for the essential rights of man;

Recognizing that the essential rights of man are not derived from one’s being a national of a certain state, but are based upon attributes of the human personality, and that they therefore justify international protection in the form of a convention reinforcing or complementing the protection provided by the domestic law of the American states;

Considering that these principles have been set forth in the Charter of the Organization of American States, in the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man, and in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and that they have been reaffirmed and refined in other international instruments, worldwide as well as regional in scope;

Reiterating that, in accordance with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the ideal of free men enjoying freedom from fear and want can be achieved only if conditions are created whereby everyone may enjoy his economic, social, and cultural rights, as well as his civil and political rights; and

Considering that the Third Special Inter-American Conference (Buenos Aires, 1967) approved the incorporation into the Charter of the Organization itself of broader standards with respect to economic, social, and educational rights and resolved that an inter-American convention on human rights should determine the structure, competence, and procedure of the organs responsible for these matters,

Have agreed upon the following:
PART I - STATE OBLIGATIONS AND RIGHTS PROTECTED

CHAPTER I - GENERAL OBLIGATIONS

Article 1. Obligation to Respect Rights

1. The States Parties to this Convention undertake to respect the rights and freedoms recognized herein and to ensure to all persons subject to their jurisdiction the free and full exercise of those rights and freedoms, without any discrimination for reasons of race, color, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, economic status, birth, or any other social condition.

2. For the purposes of this Convention, “person” means every human being.

Article 2. Domestic Legal Effects

Where the exercise of any of the rights or freedoms referred to in Article 1 is not already ensured by legislative or other provisions, the States Parties undertake to adopt, in accordance with their constitutional processes and the provisions of this Convention, such legislative or other measures as may be necessary to give effect to those rights or freedoms.

CHAPTER II - CIVIL AND POLITICAL RIGHTS

Article 3. Right to Juridical Personality

Every person has the right to recognition as a person before the law.

Article 4. Right to Life

1. Every person has the right to have his life respected. This right shall be protected by law and, in general, from the moment of conception. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his life.

2. In countries that have not abolished the death penalty, it may be imposed only for the most serious crimes and pursuant to a final judgment rendered by a competent court and in accordance with a law establishing such punishment, enacted prior to the commission of the crime. The application of such punishment shall not be extended to crimes to which it does not presently apply.

3. The death penalty shall not be reestablished in states that have abolished it.

4. In no case shall capital punishment be inflicted for political offenses or related common crimes.
5. Capital punishment shall not be imposed upon persons who, at the time the crime was committed, were under 18 years of age or over 70 years of age; nor shall it be applied to pregnant women.

6. Every person condemned to death shall have the right to apply for amnesty, pardon, or commutation of sentence, which may be granted in all cases. Capital punishment shall not be imposed while such a petition is pending decision by the competent authority.

Article 5. Right to Humane Treatment

1. Every person has the right to have his physical, mental, and moral integrity respected.

2. No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman, or degrading punishment or treatment. All persons deprived of their liberty shall be treated with respect for the inherent dignity of the human person.

3. Punishment shall not be extended to any person other than the criminal.

4. Accused persons shall, save in exceptional circumstances, be segregated from convicted persons, and shall be subject to separate treatment appropriate to their status as unconvicted persons.

5. Minors while subject to criminal proceedings shall be separated from adults and brought before specialized tribunals, as speedily as possible, so that they may be treated in accordance with their status as minors.

6. Punishments consisting of deprivation of liberty shall have as an essential aim the reform and social readaptation of the prisoners.

Article 6. Freedom from Slavery

1. No one shall be subject to slavery or to involuntary servitude, which are prohibited in all their forms, as are the slave trade and traffic in women.

2. No one shall be required to perform forced or compulsory labor. This provision shall not be interpreted to mean that, in those countries in which the penalty established for certain crimes is deprivation of liberty at forced labor, the carrying out of such a sentence imposed by a competent court is prohibited. Forced labor shall not adversely affect the dignity or the physical or intellectual capacity of the prisoner.

3. For the purposes of this article, the following do not constitute forced or compulsory labor:

   a. work or service normally required of a person imprisoned in execution of a sentence or formal decision passed by the competent judicial authority. Such work or service shall be carried out under the supervision and control of public authorities, and any persons performing such work or service shall not be placed at the disposal of any private party, company, or juridical person;

b. military service and, in countries in which conscientious objectors are recognized, national service that the law may provide for in lieu of military service;

c. service exacted in time of danger or calamity that threatens the existence or the well-being of the community; or

d. work or service that forms part of normal civic obligations.

Article 7. Right to Personal Liberty

1. Every person has the right to personal liberty and security.

2. No one shall be deprived of his physical liberty except for the reasons and under the conditions established beforehand by the constitution of the State Party concerned or by a law established pursuant thereto.

3. No one shall be subject to arbitrary arrest or imprisonment.

4. Anyone who is detained shall be informed of the reasons for his detention and shall be promptly notified of the charge or charges against him.

5. Any person detained shall be brought promptly before a judge or other officer authorized by law to exercise judicial power and shall be entitled to trial within a reasonable time or to be released without prejudice to the continuation of the proceedings. His release may be subject to guarantees to assure his appearance for trial.

6. Anyone who is deprived of his liberty shall be entitled to recourse to a competent court, in order that the court may decide without delay on the lawfulness of his arrest or detention and order his release if the arrest or detention is unlawful. In States Parties whose laws provide that anyone who believes himself to be threatened with deprivation of his liberty is entitled to recourse to a competent court in order that it may decide on the lawfulness of such threat, this remedy may not be restricted or abolished. The interested party or another person in his behalf is entitled to seek these remedies.

7. No one shall be detained for debt. This principle shall not limit the orders of a competent judicial authority issued for nonfulfillment of duties of support.

Article 8. Right to a Fair Trial

1. Every person has the right to a hearing, with due guarantees and within a reasonable time, by a competent, independent, and impartial tribunal, previously established by law, in the substantiation of any accusation of a criminal nature made against him or for the determination of his rights and obligations of a civil, labor, fiscal, or any other nature.

2. Every person accused of a criminal offense has the right to be presumed innocent so long as his guilt has not been proven according to law. During the proceedings, every person is entitled, with full equality, to the following minimum guarantees:

   f. the right of the defense to examine witnesses present in the court and to obtain the appearance, as witnesses, of experts or other persons who may throw light on the facts;

   g. the right not to be compelled to be a witness against himself or to plead guilty; and

   h. the right to appeal the judgment to a higher court.

3. A confession of guilt by the accused shall be valid only if it is made without coercion of any kind.

4. An accused person acquitted by a nonappealable judgment shall not be subjected to a new trial for the same cause.

5. Criminal proceedings shall be public, except insofar as may be necessary to protect the interests of justice.

Article 9. Freedom from Ex Post Facto Laws

Article 49

If a friendly settlement has been reached in accordance with paragraph 1.f of Article 48, the Commission shall draw up a report, which shall be transmitted to the petitioner and to the States Parties to this Convention, and shall then be communicated to the Secretary General of the Organization of American States for publication. This report shall contain a brief statement of the facts and of the solution reached. If any party in the case so requests, the fullest possible information shall be provided to it.

Article 50

1. If a settlement is not reached, the Commission shall, within the time limit established by its Statute, draw up a report setting forth the facts and stating its conclusions. If the report, in whole or in part, does not represent the unanimous agreement of the members of the Commission, any member may attach to it a separate opinion. The written and oral statements made by the parties in accordance with paragraph 1.e of Article 48 shall also be attached to the report.

2. The report shall be transmitted to the states concerned, which shall not be at liberty to publish it.

2. Where appropriate, the Commission shall make pertinent recommendations and shall prescribe a period within which the state is to take the measures that are incumbent upon it to remedy the situation examined.

AMERICAN DECLARATION OF THE RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF MAN

(Approved by the Ninth International Conference of American States, Bogotá, Colombia, 1948)

WHEREAS:

The American peoples have acknowledged the dignity of the individual, and their national constitutions recognize that juridical and political institutions, which regulate life in human society, have as their principal aim the protection of the essential rights of man and the creation of circumstances that will permit him to achieve spiritual and material progress and attain happiness;

The American States have on repeated occasions recognized that the essential rights of man are not derived from the fact that he is a national of a certain state, but are based upon attributes of his human personality;

The international protection of the rights of man should be the principal guide of an evolving American law;

The affirmation of essential human rights by the American States together with the guarantees given by the internal regimes of the states establish the initial system of protection considered by the American States as being suited to the present social and juridical conditions, not without a recognition on their part that they should increasingly strengthen that system in the international field as conditions become more favorable,

The Ninth International Conference of American States

AGREES:

To adopt the following

AMERICAN DECLARATION OF THE RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF MAN

Preamble

All men are born free and equal, in dignity and in rights, and, being endowed by nature with reason and conscience, they should conduct themselves as brothers one to another.
The fulfillment of duty by each individual is a prerequisite to the rights of all. Rights and duties are interrelated in every social and political activity of man. While rights exalt individual liberty, duties express the dignity of that liberty.

Duties of a juridical nature presuppose others of a moral nature which support them in principle and constitute their basis.

Inasmuch as spiritual development is the supreme end of human existence and the highest expression thereof, it is the duty of man to serve that end with all his strength and resources.

Since culture is the highest social and historical expression of that spiritual development, it is the duty of man to preserve, practice and foster culture by every means within his power.

And, since moral conduct constitutes the noblest flowering of culture, it is the duty of every man always to hold it in high respect.

In urgent cases, an absolute majority of the members may stipulate a shorter period. Once that deadline has elapsed, and no written explanation of the vote has been presented to the Secretariat, the member in question shall be deemed to have desisted from submitting an explanation of his or her vote, without prejudice to his or her dissent being recorded.

Article 20. Minutes of the Sessions

1. Summary minutes shall be taken of each session. They shall state the day and time at which it was held, the names of the members present, the matters dealt with, the decisions taken, and any statement made by a member especially for inclusion in the minutes. These minutes are confidential internal working documents.

2. The Executive Secretariat shall distribute copies of the summary minutes of each session to the members of the Commission, who may present their observations to the Secretariat prior to the period of sessions at which those minutes are to be approved. If there has been no objection as of the beginning of that period of sessions, the minutes shall be considered approved.

Article 21. Compensation for Special Services

Pursuant to the approval of an absolute majority of its members, the Commission may entrust any member with the preparation of a special study or other specific work to be carried out individually outside the sessions. Such work shall be compensated in accordance with the funds available in the budget. The amount of the fees shall be set on the basis of the number of days required for the preparation and drafting of the work.

2. Any member of the Commission may dispense with the interpretation of debates and preparation of documents in his or her language.

Article 23. Presentation of Petitions

Any person or group of persons or nongovernmental entity legally recognized in one or more of the Member States of the OAS may submit petitions to the Commission, on their own behalf or on behalf of third persons, concerning alleged violations of a human right recognized in, as the case may be, the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man, the American Convention on Human Rights, the Additional Protocol in the Area of Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Protocol to Abolish the Death Penalty, the Inter-American Convention to Prevent and Punish Torture, the Inter-American Convention on Forced Disappearance of Persons, and/or the Inter-American Convention on the Prevention, Punishment and Eradication of Violence Against Women, in accordance with their respective provisions, the Statute of the Commission, and these Rules of Procedure. the Vice-Presidents, shall consult with the other members, through the Executive Secretariat, on the application of the provision in the previous paragraph. If it is not possible to consult within a reasonable period of time under the circumstances, the President or, where appropriate, one of the Vice-President shall take the decision on behalf of the Commission and shall so inform its members.

3. The Commission may request information from the interested parties on any matter related to the adoption and observance of the precautionary measures.

4. The granting of such measures and their adoption by the State shall not constitute a prejudgment on the merits of a case.

CHAPTER II
PETITIONS REFERRING TO THE AMERICAN CONVENTION ON HUMAN RIGHTS AND OTHER APPLICABLE INSTRUMENTS

Article 26. Initial Review

1. The Executive Secretariat of the Commission shall be responsible for the study and initial processing of petitions lodged before the Commission that fulfill all the requirements set forth in the Statute and in Article 28 of these Rules of Procedure.

2. If a petition or communication does not meet the requirements called for in these Rules of Procedure, the Executive Secretariat may request that the petitioner or his or her representative satisfy those that have not been fulfilled.

3. If the Executive Secretariat has any doubt as to whether the requirements referred to have been met, it shall consult the Commission.

Article 27. Condition for Considering the Petition

The Commission shall consider petitions regarding alleged violations of the human rights enshrined in the American Convention on Human Rights and other applicable instruments, with respect to the Member States of the OAS, only when the petitions fulfill the requirements set forth in those instruments, in the Statute, and in these Rules of Procedure.

Article 28. Requirements for the Consideration of Petitions

Petitions addressed to the Commission shall contain the following information:

a. the name, nationality and signature of the person or persons making the denunciation; or in cases where the petitioner is a nongovernmental entity, the name and signature of its legal representative(s);
b. whether the petitioner wishes that his or her identity be withheld from the State;

c. the address for receiving correspondence from the Commission and, if available, a telephone number, facsimile number, and email address;

d. an account of the act or situation that is denounced, specifying the place and date of the alleged violations;

e. if possible, the name of the victim and of any public authority who has taken cognizance of the fact or situation alleged;

f. the State the petitioner considers responsible, by act or omission, for the violation of any of the human rights recognized in the American Convention on Human Rights and other applicable instruments, even if no specific reference is made to the article(s) alleged to have been violated;

g. compliance with the time period provided for in Article 32 of these Rules of Procedure;

h. any steps taken to exhaust domestic remedies, or the impossibility of doing so as provided in Article 31 of these Rules of Procedure; and,

i. an indication of whether the complaint has been submitted to another international settlement proceeding as provided in Article 33 of these Rules of Procedure.

Article 29. Initial Processing

1. The Commission, acting initially through the Executive Secretariat, shall receive and carry out the initial processing of the petitions presented as follows:

a. it shall receive the petition, register it, record the date of receipt on the petition itself and acknowledge receipt to the petitioner;

b. if the petition does not meet the requirements of these Rules of Procedure, it may request that the petitioner or his or her representative complete them in accordance with Article 26(2) of these Rules;

c. if the petition sets forth distinct facts, or if it refers to more than one person or to alleged violations not interconnected in time and place, the claims may be divided and processed separately, so long as all the requirements of Article 28 of these Rules of Procedure are met;

d. if two or more petitions address similar facts, involve the same persons, or reveal the same pattern of conduct, they may be joined and processed together;

e. in the situations provided for in subparagraphs c and d, it shall give written notification to petitioners.

2. In serious or urgent cases, the Executive Secretariat shall immediately notify the Commission.
Article 30. Admissibility Procedure

1. The Commission, through its Executive Secretariat, shall process the petitions that meet the requirements set forth in Article 28 of these Rules of Procedure.

2. For this purpose, it shall forward the relevant parts of the petition to the State in question. The identity of the petitioner shall not be revealed without his or her express authorization. The request to the State for information shall not constitute a prejudgment with regard to any decision the Commission may adopt on the admissibility of the petition.

3. The State shall submit its response within two months counted from the date the request is transmitted. The Executive Secretariat shall evaluate requests for extensions of this period that are duly founded. However, it shall not grant extensions that exceed three months from the date of the first request for information sent to the State.

4. In serious or urgent cases, or when it is believed that the life or personal integrity of a person is in real or imminent danger, the Commission shall request the promptest reply from the State, using for this purpose the means it considers most expeditious.

5. Prior to deciding upon the admissibility of the petition, the Commission may invite the parties to submit additional observations, either in writing or in a hearing, as provided for in Chapter VI of these Rules of Procedure.

6. Once the observations have been received or the period set has elapsed with no observations received, the Commission shall verify whether the grounds for the petition exist or subsist. If it considers that they do not exist or subsist, it shall order the case archived.

Article 31. Exhaustion of Domestic Remedies

1. In order to decide on the admissibility of a matter, the Commission shall verify whether the remedies of the domestic legal system have been pursued and exhausted in accordance with the generally recognized principles of international law.

2. The provisions of the preceding paragraph shall not apply when:

   a. the domestic legislation of the State concerned does not afford due process of law for protection of the right or rights that have allegedly been violated;

   b. the party alleging violation of his or her rights has been denied access to the remedies under domestic law or has been prevented from exhausting them; or,

   c. there has been unwarranted delay in rendering a final judgment under the aforementioned remedies.

3. When the petitioner contends that he or she is unable to prove compliance with the requirement indicated in this article, it shall be up to the State concerned to demonstrate to the Commission that the remedies under domestic law have not been previously exhausted, unless that is clearly evident from the record.

Article 32. Deadline for the Presentation of Petitions

1. The Commission shall consider those petitions that are lodged within a period of six months following the date on which the alleged victim has been notified of the decision that exhausted the domestic remedies.

2. In those cases in which the exceptions to the requirement of prior exhaustion of domestic remedies are applicable, the petition shall be presented within a reasonable period of time, as determined by the Commission. For this purpose, the Commission shall consider the date on which the alleged violation of rights occurred and the circumstances of each case.

Article 33. Duplication of Procedures

1. The Commission shall not consider a petition if its subject matter:

   a. is pending settlement pursuant to another procedure before an international governmental organization of which the State concerned is a member; or,

   b. essentially duplicates a petition pending or already examined and settled by the Commission or by another international governmental organization of which the State concerned is a member.

2. However, the Commission shall not refrain from considering petitions referred to in paragraph 1 when:

   a. the procedure followed before the other organization is limited to a general examination of the human rights situation in the State in question and there has been no decision on the specific facts that are the subject of the petition before the Commission, or it will not lead to an effective settlement; or,

   b. the petitioner before the Commission or a family member is the alleged victim of the violation denounced and the petitioner before the other organization is a third party or a nongovernmental entity having no mandate from the former.

Article 34. Other Grounds for Inadmissibility

The Commission shall declare any petition or case inadmissible when:

a. it does not state facts that tend to establish a violation of the rights referred to in Article 27 of these Rules of Procedure;

b. the statements of the petitioner or of the State indicate that it is manifestly groundless or out of order; or,
c. supervening information or evidence presented to the Commission reveals that a matter is inadmissible or out of order.

Article 35.  Desistance

The petitioner may at any time desist from his or her petition or case, to which effect he or she must so state in writing to the Commission. The statement by the petitioner shall be analyzed by the Commission, which may archive the petition or case if it deems this appropriate, or continue to process it in the interest of protecting a particular right.

Article 36.  Working Group on Admissibility

A working group shall meet prior to each regular session in order to study the admissibility of petitions and make recommendations to the plenary of the Commission.

Article 37.  Decision on Admissibility

1. Once it has considered the positions of the parties, the Commission shall make a decision on the admissibility of the matter. The reports on admissibility and inadmissibility shall be public and the Commission shall include them in its Annual Report to the General Assembly of the OAS.

2. When an admissibility report is adopted, the petition shall be registered as a case and the proceedings on the merits shall be initiated. The adoption of an admissibility report does not constitute a prejudgment as to the merits of the matter.

3. In exceptional circumstances, and after having requested information from the parties in keeping with the provisions of Article 30 of these Rules of Procedure, the Commission may open a case but defer its treatment of admissibility until the debate and decision on the merits. The case shall be opened by means of a written communication to both parties.

Article 38.  Procedure on the Merits

1. Upon opening the case, the Commission shall set a period of two months for the petitioners to submit additional observations on the merits. The pertinent parts of those observations shall be transmitted to the State in question so that it may submit its observations within two months.

2. Prior to making its decision on the merits of the case, the Commission shall set a time period for the parties to express whether they have an interest in initiating the friendly settlement procedure provided for in Article 41 of these Rules of Procedure. The Commission may also invite the parties to submit additional observations in writing.

3. If it deems it necessary in order to advance in its consideration of the case, the Commission may convene the parties for a hearing, as provided for in Chapter VI of these Rules of Procedure.
Article 39. Presumption

The facts alleged in the petition, the pertinent parts of which have been transmitted to the State in question, shall be presumed to be true if the State has not provided responsive information during the maximum period set by the Commission under the provisions of Article 38 of these Rules of Procedure, as long as other evidence does not lead to a different conclusion.

Article 40. Onsite Investigation

1. If it deems it necessary and advisable, the Commission may carry out an on-site investigation, for the effective conduct of which it shall request and the State concerned shall furnish all pertinent facilities.

2. However, in serious and urgent cases, only the presentation of a petition or communication that fulfills all the formal requirements of admissibility shall be necessary in order for the Commission to conduct an on-site investigation with the prior consent of the State in whose territory a violation has allegedly been committed.

Article 41. Friendly Settlement

1. On its own initiative or at the request of any of the parties, the Commission shall place itself at the disposal of the parties concerned, at any stage of the examination of a petition or case, with a view to reaching a friendly settlement of the matter on the basis of respect for the human rights recognized in the American Convention on Human Rights, the American Declaration and other applicable instruments.

2. The friendly settlement procedure shall be initiated and continue on the basis of the consent of the parties.

3. When it deems it necessary, the Commission may entrust to one or more of its members the task of facilitating negotiations between the parties.

4. The Commission may terminate its intervention in the friendly settlement procedure if it finds that the matter is not susceptible to such a resolution or any of the parties does not consent to its application, decides not to continue it, or does not display the willingness to reach a friendly settlement based on respect for human rights.

5. If a friendly settlement is reached, the Commission shall adopt a report with a brief statement of the facts and of the solution reached, shall transmit it to the parties concerned and shall publish it. Prior to adopting that report, the Commission shall verify whether the victim of the alleged violation or, as the case may be, his or her successors, have consented to the friendly settlement agreement. In all cases, the friendly settlement must be based on respect for the human rights recognized in the American Convention on Human Rights, the American Declaration and other applicable instruments.
6. If no friendly settlement is reached, the Commission shall continue to process the petition or case.

Article 42. Decision on the Merits

1. The Commission shall deliberate on the merits of the case, to which end it shall prepare a report in which it will examine the arguments, the evidence presented by the parties, and the information obtained during hearings and on-site observations. In addition, the Commission may take into account other information that is a matter of public knowledge.

2. The Commission shall deliberate in private, and all aspects of the discussions shall be confidential.

3. Any question put to a vote shall be formulated in precise terms in one of the official languages of the OAS. At the request of any member, the text shall be translated by the Secretariat into one of the other official languages and distributed prior to the vote.

4. The minutes referring to the Commission’s deliberations shall restrict themselves to the subject of the debate and the decision approved, as well as any separate opinions and any statements made for inclusion in the minutes. If the report does not represent, in whole or in part, the unanimous opinion of the members of the Commission, any of them may add his or her opinion separately, following the procedure established in Article 19.4 of these Rules of Procedure.

Article 43. Report on the Merits

After the deliberation and vote on the merits of the case, the Commission shall proceed as follows:

1. If it establishes that there was no violation in a given case, it shall so state in its report on the merits. The report shall be transmitted to the parties, and shall be published and included in the Commission’s Annual Report to the OAS General Assembly.

2. If it establishes one or more violations, it shall prepare a preliminary report with the proposals and recommendations it deems pertinent and shall transmit it to the State in question. In so doing, it shall set a deadline by which the State in question must report on the measures adopted to comply with the recommendations. The State shall not be authorized to publish the report until the Commission adopts a decision in this respect.

3. It shall notify the petitioner of the adoption of the report and its transmittal to the State. In the case of States Parties to the American Convention that have accepted the contentious jurisdiction of the Inter-American Court, upon notifying the petitioner, the Commission shall give him or her one month to present his or her position as to whether the case should be submitted to the Court. When the petitioner is interested in the submission of the case, he or she should present the following:
a. the position of the victim or the victim’s family members, if different from that of the petitioner;

b. the personal data relative to the victim and the victim’s family members;

c. the reasons he or she considers that the case should be referred to the Court;

d. the documentary, testimonial, and expert evidence available; and,

e. the claims concerning reparations and costs.

Article 44. Referral of the Case to the Court

1. If the State in question has accepted the jurisdiction of the Inter-American Court in accordance with Article 62 of the American Convention, and the Commission considers that the State has not complied with the recommendations of the report approved in accordance with Article 50 of the American Convention, it shall refer the case to the Court, unless there is a reasoned decision by an absolute majority of the members of the Commission to the contrary.

2. The Commission shall give fundamental consideration to obtaining justice in the particular case, based, among others, on the following factors:

a. the position of the petitioner;

b. the nature and seriousness of the violation;

c. the need to develop or clarify the case-law of the system;

d. the future effect of the decision within the legal systems of the Member States; and,

e. the quality of the evidence available.

Article 45. Publication of the Report

1. If within three months from the transmittal of the preliminary report to the State in question the matter has not been solved or, for those States that have accepted the jurisdiction of the Inter-American Court, has not been referred by the Commission or by the State to the Court for a decision, the Commission, by an absolute majority of votes, may issue a final report that contains its opinion and final conclusions and recommendations.

2. The final report shall be transmitted to the parties, who, within the time period set by the Commission, shall present information on compliance with the recommendations.

3. The Commission shall evaluate compliance with its recommendations based on the information available, and shall decide on the publication of the final report by the vote of an absolute majority of its members. The Commission shall also make a determination as to whether to include it in the Annual Report to the OAS General Assembly, and/or to publish it in any other manner deemed appropriate.

Article 46. Follow-Up

1. Once the Commission has published a report on a friendly settlement or on the merits in which it has made recommendations, it may adopt the follow-up measures it deems appropriate, such as requesting information from the parties and holding hearings in order to verify compliance with friendly settlement agreements and its recommendations.

2. The Commission shall report on progress in complying with those agreements and recommendations as it deems appropriate.

Article 47. Certification of Reports

The originals of the reports signed by the Commissioners who participated in their adoption shall be deposited in the files of the Commission. The reports transmitted to the parties shall be certified by the Executive Secretariat.

Article 48. Interstate Communications

1. A communication presented by a State Party to the American Convention on Human Rights that has accepted the competence of the Commission to receive and examine such communications against other States Parties shall be transmitted to the State Party in question, whether or not it has accept the Commission’s competence in this respect. If that competence has not been accepted, the communication shall be transmitted in order that the State concerned may exercise its option under Article 45, paragraph 3 of the Convention, to recognize that competence in the specific case that is the subject of the communication.

2. If the State in question has accepted the Commission’s competence to consider a communication from another State Party, the respective procedure shall be governed by the provisions of the present Chapter II, insofar as they apply.

CHAPTER III

PETITIONS CONCERNING STATES THAT ARE NOT PARTIES TO THE AMERICAN CONVENTION ON HUMAN RIGHTS

Article 49. Receipt of the Petition

Rights and Duties of Man in relation to the Member States of the Organization that are not parties to the American Convention on Human Rights.

Article 50. Applicable Procedure

The procedure applicable to petitions concerning Member States of the OAS that are not parties to the American Convention shall be that provided for in the general provisions included in Chapter I of Title II; in Articles 28 to 43 and 45 to 47 of these Rules of Procedure.

Prior to its publication in the Annual Report, the Commission shall provide a copy of said report to the respective State. That State may send the Commission the views it deems pertinent within a maximum time period of one month from the date of transmission. Article 60. Purpose

Article 61. Guarantees

The State in question shall grant the necessary guarantees to all the persons who attend a hearing or who in the course of a hearing provide information, testimony or evidence of any type to the Commission. That State may not prosecute the witnesses or experts, or carry out reprisals against them or their family members because of their statements or expert opinions given before the Commission.

Article 62. Hearings on Petitions or Cases

1. Hearings on petitions or cases shall have as their purpose the receipt of oral or written presentations by the parties relative to new facts and information additional to that which has been produced during the proceeding. The information may refer to any of the following issues: admissibility; the initiation or development of the friendly settlement procedure; the verification of the facts; the merits of the matter; follow-up on recommendations; or any other matter pertinent to the processing of the petition or case.

2. Requests for hearings must be submitted in writing at least 40 days prior to the beginning of the respective session of the Commission. Requests for hearings shall indicate their purpose and the identity of the participants.

3. If the Commission accedes to the request or decides to hold a hearing on its own initiative, it shall convocate both parties. If one party, having been duly notified, does not appear, the Commission shall proceed with the hearing. The Commission shall adopt the necessary measures to maintain in confidence the identity of the experts and witnesses if it believes that they require such protection.

4. The Executive Secretariat shall inform the parties as to the date, place and time of the hearing at least one month in advance. However, that time period may be reduced if the participants grant the Executive Secretariat prior and express consent to that effect.

Article 63. Presentation and Production of Evidence

1. During the hearing, the parties may present any document, testimony, expert report or item of evidence. At the request of a party or on its own initiative, the Commission may receive the testimony of witnesses or experts.

2. With respect to the documentary evidence submitted during the hearing, the Commission shall grant the parties a prudential time period for submitting their observations.
3. A party that proposes witnesses or experts for a hearing shall so state in its request. For this purpose, it shall identify the witness or expert and the purpose of his or her witness or expert testimony.

4. Upon deciding on the request for a hearing, the Commission shall also determine whether to receive the witness or expert testimony proposed.

5. When one party offers witness and expert testimony, the Commission shall notify the other party to that effect.

6. In extraordinary circumstances and for the purpose of safeguarding the evidence, the Commission may, at its discretion, receive testimony in hearings without satisfying the terms of the previous paragraph. The documents submitted by the parties in the hearing shall be attached as annexes to the minutes.

2. The minutes of the hearings are internal working documents of the Commission. If a party so requests, the Commission shall provide a copy, unless, in the view of the Commission, its contents could entail some risk to persons.

The World Organisation Against Torture (OMCT) coordinates the activities of the SOS-Torture Network, which is the world’s largest coalition of non-governmental organisations fighting against torture and ill-treatment, arbitrary detention, extrajudicial executions, forced disappearances, and other serious human rights violations. OMCT’s growing global network currently includes 282 local, national, and regional organisations in 92 countries spanning all regions of the world. An important aspect of OMCT’s mandate is to respond to the advocacy and capacity-building needs of its network members, including the need to develop effective international litigation strategies to assist victims of torture and ill-treatment in obtaining legal remedies where none are available domestically, and to support them in their struggle to end impunity in states where torture and ill-treatment remain endemic or tolerated practices. In furtherance of these objectives, OMCT has published a Handbook Series of four volumes, each one providing a guide to the practice, procedure, and jurisprudence of the regional and international mechanisms that are competent to examine individual complaints concerning the violation of the absolute prohibition of torture and ill-treatment. This Handbook on the prohibition of torture and ill-treatment in the Inter-American System is the second of the series.

INTER-AMERICAN CONVENTION ON THE PREVENTION, PUNISHMENT AND ERADICATION OF VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN
"CONVENTION OF BELEM DO PARA"

(Adopted in Belém do Pará, Brasil, on June 9, 1994, at the twenty fourth regular session of the General Assembly)

THE STATES PARTIES TO THIS CONVENTION,

RECOGNIZING that full respect for human rights has been enshrined in the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and reaffirmed in other international and regional instruments;

AFFIRMING that violence against women constitutes a violation of their human rights and fundamental freedoms, and impairs or nullifies the observance, enjoyment and exercise of such rights and freedoms;

CONCERNED that violence against women is an offense against human dignity and a manifestation of the historically unequal power relations between women and men;

RECALLING the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women, adopted by the Twenty-fifth Assembly of Delegates of the Inter-American Commission of Women, and affirming that violence against women pervades every sector of society regardless of class, race or ethnic group, income, culture, level of education, age or religion and strikes at its very foundations:

CONVINCED that the elimination of violence against women is essential for their individual and social development and their full and equal participation in all walks of life; and

CONVINCED that the adoption of a convention on the prevention, punishment and eradication of all forms of violence against women within the framework of the Organization of American States is a positive contribution to protecting the rights of women and eliminating violence against them,

HAVE AGREED to the following:

CHAPTER I

DEFINITION AND SCOPE OF APPLICATION

Article 1

For the purposes of this Convention, violence against women shall be understood as any act or conduct, based on gender, which causes death or physical, sexual or psychological harm or suffering to women, whether in the public or the private sphere.
Article 2

Violence against women shall be understood to include physical, sexual and psychological violence:

a. that occurs within the family or domestic unit or within any other interpersonal relationship, whether or not the perpetrator shares or has shared the same residence with the woman, including, among others, rape, battery and sexual abuse;

b. that occurs in the community and is perpetrated by any person, including, among others, rape, sexual abuse, torture, trafficking in persons, forced prostitution, kidnapping and sexual harassment in the workplace, as well as in educational institutions, health facilities or any other place; and

c. that is perpetrated or condoned by the state or its agents regardless of where it occurs.

CHAPTER II

RIGHTS PROTECTED

Article 3

Every woman has the right to be free from violence in both the public and private spheres.

Article 4

Every woman has the right to the recognition, enjoyment, exercise and protection of all human rights and freedoms embodied in regional and international human rights instruments. These rights include, among others:

a. The right to have her life respected;

b. The right to have her physical, mental and moral integrity respected;

c. The right to personal liberty and security;

d. The right not to be subjected to torture;

e. The rights to have the inherent dignity of her person respected and her family protected;

f. The right to equal protection before the law and of the law;
g. The right to simple and prompt recourse to a competent court for protection against acts that violate her rights;

h. The right to associate freely;

i. The right of freedom to profess her religion and beliefs within the law; and

j. The right to have equal access to the public service of her country and to take part in the conduct of public affairs, including decision-making.

Article 5

Every woman is entitled to the free and full exercise of her civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, and may rely on the full protection of those rights as embodied in regional and international instruments on human rights. The States Parties recognize that violence against women prevents and nullifies the exercise of these rights.

Article 6

The right of every woman to be free from violence includes, among others:

a. The right of women to be free from all forms of discrimination; and

b. The right of women to be valued and educated free of stereotyped patterns of behavior and social and cultural practices based on concepts of inferiority or subordination.

CHAPTER III

DUTIES OF THE STATES

Article 7

The States Parties condemn all forms of violence against women and agree to pursue, by all appropriate means and without delay, policies to prevent, punish and eradicate such violence and undertake to:

a. refrain from engaging in any act or practice of violence against women and to ensure that their authorities, officials, personnel, agents, and institutions act in conformity with this obligation;

b. apply due diligence to prevent, investigate and impose penalties for violence against women;

c. include in their domestic legislation penal, civil, administrative and any other type of provisions that may be needed to prevent, punish and eradicate violence against women and to adopt appropriate administrative measures where necessary;

d. adopt legal measures to require the perpetrator to refrain from harassing, intimidating or threatening the woman or using any method that harms or endangers her life or integrity, or damages her property;

e. take all appropriate measures, including legislative measures, to amend or repeal existing laws and regulations or to modify legal or customary practices which sustain the persistence and tolerance of violence against women;

f. establish fair and effective legal procedures for women who have been subjected to violence which include, among others, protective measures, a timely hearing and effective access to such procedures;

g. establish the necessary legal and administrative mechanisms to ensure that women subjected to violence have effective access to restitution, reparations or other just and effective remedies; and

h. adopt such legislative or other measures as may be necessary to give effect to this Convention.

Article 8

The States Parties agree to undertake progressively specific measures, including programs:

a. to promote awareness and observance of the right of women to be free from violence, and the right of women to have their human rights respected and protected;

b. to modify social and cultural patterns of conduct of men and women, including the development of formal and informal educational programs appropriate to every level of the educational process, to counteract prejudices, customs and all other practices which are based on the idea of the inferiority or superiority of either of the sexes or on the stereotyped roles for men and women which legitimize or exacerbate violence against women;

c. to promote the education and training of all those involved in the administration of justice, police and other law enforcement officers as well as other personnel responsible for implementing policies for the prevention, punishment and eradication of violence against women;

d. to provide appropriate specialized services for women who have been subjected to violence, through public and private sector agencies, including shelters, counseling services for all family members where appropriate, and care and custody of the affected children;
e. to promote and support governmental and private sector education designed to raise the awareness of the public with respect to the problems of and remedies for violence against women;

f. to provide women who are subjected to violence access to effective readjustment and training programs to enable them to fully participate in public, private and social life;

g. to encourage the communications media to develop appropriate media guidelines in order to contribute to the eradication of violence against women in all its forms, and to enhance respect for the dignity of women;

h. to ensure research and the gathering of statistics and other relevant information relating to the causes, consequences and frequency of violence against women, in order to assess the effectiveness of measures to prevent, punish and eradicate violence against women and to formulate and implement the necessary changes; and

i. to foster international cooperation for the exchange of ideas and experiences and the execution of programs aimed at protecting women who are subjected to violence.

Article 9

With respect to the adoption of the measures in this Chapter, the States Parties shall take special account of the vulnerability of women to violence by reason of, among others, their race or ethnic background or their status as migrants, refugees or displaced persons. Similar consideration shall be given to women subjected to violence while pregnant or who are disabled, of minor age, elderly, socioeconomically disadvantaged, affected by armed conflict or deprived of their freedom.
CHAPTER IV

INTER-AMERICAN MECHANISMS OF PROTECTION

Article 10

In order to protect the rights of every woman to be free from violence, the States Parties shall include in their national reports to the Inter-American Commission of Women information on measures adopted to prevent and prohibit violence against women, and to assist women affected by violence, as well as on any difficulties they observe in applying those measures, and the factors that contribute to violence against women.

Article 11

The States Parties to this Convention and the Inter-American Commission of Women may request of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights advisory opinions on the interpretation of this Convention.

Article 12

Any person or group of persons, or any nongovernmental entity legally recognized in one or more member states of the Organization, may lodge petitions with the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights containing denunciations or complaints of violations of Article 7 of this Convention by a State Party, and the Commission shall consider such claims in accordance with the norms and procedures established by the American Convention on Human Rights and the Statutes and Regulations of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights for lodging and considering petitions.

CHAPTER V

No part of this Convention shall be understood to restrict or limit the domestic law of any State Party that affords equal or greater protection and guarantees of the rights of women and appropriate safeguards to prevent and eradicate violence against women.

Article 14
No part of this Convention shall be understood to restrict or limit the American Convention on Human Rights or any other international convention on the subject that provides for equal or greater protection in this area.

Article 16

This Convention is subject to ratification. The instruments of ratification shall be deposited with the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States.

Article 17

This Convention is open to accession by any other state. Instruments of accession shall be deposited with the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States.

a. not incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention, and

b. not of a general nature and relate to one or more specific provisions.

Article 19

Any State Party may submit to the General Assembly, through the Inter-American Commission of Women, proposals for the amendment of this Convention.

Amendments shall enter into force for the states ratifying them on the date when two-thirds of the States Parties to this Convention have deposited their respective instruments of ratification. With respect to the other States Parties, the amendments shall enter into force on the dates on which they deposit their respective instruments of ratification.

Article 20

If a State Party has two or more territorial units in which the matters dealt with in this Convention are governed by different systems of law, it may, at the time of signature, ratification or accession, declare that this Convention shall extend to all its territorial units or to only one or more of them.

Such a declaration may be amended at any time by subsequent declarations, which shall expressly specify the territorial unit or units to which this Convention applies. Such subsequent declarations shall be transmitted to the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States, and shall enter into force thirty days after the date of their receipt.

Article 21

Article 24

This Convention shall remain in force indefinitely, but any of the States Parties may denounce it by depositing an instrument to that effect with the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States. One year after the date of deposit of the instrument of denunciation, this Convention shall cease to be in effect for the denouncing State but shall remain in force for the remaining States Parties.

Spanish texts of which are equally authentic, shall be deposited with the General

IN THE NAME OF THEIR PEOPLES, THE STATES REPRESENTED AT THE NINTH INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE OF AMERICAN STATES,

Convinced that the historic mission of America is to offer to man a land of liberty and a favorable environment for the development of his personality and the realization of his just aspirations;

Resolved to persevere in the noble undertaking that humanity has conferred upon the United Nations, whose principles and purposes they solemnly reaffirm;

Article 5

Any new political entity that arises from the union of several Member States and that, as such, ratifies the present Charter, shall become a Member of the Organization. The entry of the new political entity into the Organization shall result in the loss of membership of each one of the States which constitute it.

Article 6

Any other independent American State that desires to become a Member of the Organization should so indicate by means of a note addressed to the Secretary General, in which it declares that it is willing to sign and ratify the Charter of the Organization and to accept all the obligations inherent in membership, especially those relating to collective security expressly set forth in Articles 28 and 29 of the Charter.

Article 7

The General Assembly, upon the recommendation of the Permanent Council of the Organization, shall determine whether it is appropriate that the Secretary General be authorized to permit the applicant State to sign the Charter and to accept the deposit of the corresponding instrument of ratification. Both the recommendation of the Permanent Council and the decision of the General Assembly shall require the affirmative vote of two thirds of the Member States.

Article 8

Chapter IV

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF STATES

Article 10

States are juridically equal, enjoy equal rights and equal capacity to exercise these rights, and have equal duties. The rights of each State depend not upon its power to ensure the exercise thereof, but upon the mere fact of its existence as a person under international law.

Article 11

Every American State has the duty to respect the rights enjoyed by every other State in accordance with international law.

Article 12

The fundamental rights of States may not be impaired in any manner whatsoever.

Article 13
The political existence of the State is independent of recognition by other States. Even before being recognized, the State has the right to defend its integrity and independence, to provide for its preservation and prosperity, and consequently to organize itself as it sees fit, to legislate concerning its interests, to administer its services, and to determine the jurisdiction and competence of its courts. The exercise of these rights is limited only by the exercise of the rights of other States in accordance with international law.

Article 14

Recognition implies that the State granting it accepts the personality of the new State, with all the rights and duties that international law prescribes for the two States.

Article 15

The right of each State to protect itself and to live its own life does not authorize it to commit unjust acts against another State.

Article 16

The jurisdiction of States within the limits of their national territory is exercised equally over all the inhabitants, whether nationals or aliens.

Article 17

Each State has the right to develop its cultural, political, and economic life freely and naturally. In this free development, the State shall respect the rights of the individual and the principles of universal morality.

Article 18

Respect for and the faithful observance of treaties constitute standards for the development of peaceful relations among States. International treaties and agreements should be public.

Article 19

No State or group of States has the right to intervene, directly or indirectly, for any reason whatever, in the internal or external affairs of any other State. The foregoing principle prohibits not only armed force but also any other form of interference or attempted threat against the personality of the State or against its political, economic, and cultural elements.

Article 20

No State may use or encourage the use of coercive measures of an economic or political character in order to force the sovereign will of another State and obtain from it advantages of any kind.

Article 21
The territory of a State is inviolable; it may not be the object, even temporarily, of military occupation or of other measures of force taken by another State, directly or indirectly, on any grounds whatever. No territorial acquisitions or special advantages obtained either by force or by other means of coercion shall be recognized.

Article 22

The American States bind themselves in their international relations not to have recourse to the use of force, except in the case of self-defense in accordance with existing treaties or in fulfillment thereof.

Article 23

Measures adopted for the maintenance of peace and security in accordance with existing treaties do not constitute a violation of the principles set forth in Articles 19 and 21.

Chapter V

PACIFIC SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES

Article 24

International disputes between Member States shall be submitted to the peaceful procedures set forth in this Charter.

This provision shall not be interpreted as an impairment of the rights and obligations of the Member States under Articles 34 and 35 of the Charter of the United Nations.

Article 25

The following are peaceful procedures: direct negotiation, good offices, mediation, investigation and conciliation, judicial settlement, arbitration, and those which the parties to the dispute may especially agree upon at any time.

Article 26

In the event that a dispute arises between two or more American States which, in the opinion of one of them, cannot be settled through the usual diplomatic channels, the parties shall agree on some other peaceful procedure that will enable them to reach a solution.

Article 27

A special treaty will establish adequate means for the settlement of disputes and will determine pertinent procedures for each peaceful means such that no dispute between American States may remain without definitive settlement within a reasonable period of time.
Chapter VI

COLLECTIVE SECURITY

Article 28

Every act of aggression by a State against the territorial integrity or the inviolability of the territory or against the sovereignty or political independence of an American State shall be considered an act of aggression against the other American States.

Article 29

If the inviolability or the integrity of the territory or the sovereignty or political independence of any American State should be affected by an armed attack or by an act of aggression that is not an armed attack, or by an extracontinental conflict, or by a conflict between two or more American States, or by any other fact or situation that might endanger the peace of America, the American States, in furtherance of the principles of continental solidarity or collective self-defense, shall apply the measures and procedures established in the special treaties on the subject.

Chapter VII

Article 31

Inter-American cooperation for integral development is the common and joint responsibility of the Member States, within the framework of the democratic principles and the institutions of the inter-American system. Article 32

Inter-American cooperation for integral development should be continuous and preferably channeled through multilateral organizations, without prejudice to bilateral cooperation between Member States.
The Member States shall contribute to inter-American cooperation for integral development in accordance with their resources and capabilities and in conformity with their laws.

Article 33

Development is a primary responsibility of each country and should constitute an integral and continuous process for the establishment of a more just economic and social order that will make possible and contribute to the fulfillment of the individual.

Article 34

The Member States agree that equality of opportunity, the elimination of extreme poverty, equitable distribution of wealth and income and the full participation of their peoples in decisions relating to their own development are, among others, basic objectives of integral development. To achieve them, they likewise agree to devote their utmost efforts to accomplishing the following basic goals:

- a) Substantial and self-sustained increase of per capita national product;
- b) Equitable distribution of national income;
- c) Adequate and equitable systems of taxation;
- d) Modernization of rural life and reforms leading to equitable and efficient land-tenure systems, increased agricultural productivity, expanded use of land, diversification of production and improved processing and marketing systems for agricultural products; and the strengthening and expansion of the means to attain these ends;
- e) Accelerated and diversified industrialization, especially of capital and intermediate goods;
- f) Stability of domestic price levels, compatible with sustained economic development and the attainment of social justice;
- g) Fair wages, employment opportunities, and acceptable working conditions for all;
- h) Rapid eradication of illiteracy and expansion of educational opportunities for all;
- i) Protection of man's potential through the extension and application of modern medical science;

- k) Adequate housing for all sectors of the population;
- l) Urban conditions that offer the opportunity for a healthful, productive, and full life;
m) Promotion of private initiative and investment in harmony with action in the public sector; and

n) Expansion and diversification of exports.

Article 35

The Member States should refrain from practicing policies and adopting actions or measures that have serious adverse effects on the development of other Member States.

Article 36

Transnational enterprises and foreign private investment shall be subject to the legislation of the host countries and to the jurisdiction of their competent courts and to the international treaties and agreements to which said countries are parties, and should conform to the development policies of the recipient countries.

Article 37

The Member States agree to join together in seeking a solution to urgent or critical problems that may arise whenever the economic development or stability of any Member State is seriously affected by conditions that cannot be remedied through the efforts of that State.

Article 38

The Member States shall extend among themselves the benefits of science and technology by encouraging the exchange and utilization of scientific and technical knowledge in accordance with existing treaties and national laws.

Article 39

The Member States, recognizing the close interdependence between foreign trade and economic and social development, should make individual and united efforts to bring about the following:

a) Favorable conditions of access to world markets for the products of the developing countries of the region, particularly through the reduction or elimination, by importing countries, of tariff and nontariff barriers that affect the exports of the Member States of the Organization, except when such barriers are applied in order to diversify the economic structure, to speed up the development of the less-developed Member States, and intensify their process of economic integration, or when they are related to national security or to the needs of economic balance;

b) Continuity in their economic and social development by means of:

i. Improved conditions for trade in basic commodities through international agreements, where appropriate; orderly marketing procedures that avoid the disruption of markets, and other measures designed to promote the expansion of markets and to obtain dependable incomes for producers, adequate and dependable supplies for consumers, and stable prices that are both remunerative to producers and fair to consumers;

ii. Improved international financial cooperation and the adoption of other means for lessening the adverse impact of sharp fluctuations in export earnings experienced by the countries exporting basic commodities;

iii. Diversification of exports and expansion of export opportunities for manufactured and semimanufactured products from the developing countries; and

iv. Conditions conducive to increasing the real export earnings of the Member States, particularly the developing countries of the region, and to increasing their participation in international trade.

Article 40

The Member States reaffirm the principle that when the more developed countries grant concessions in international trade agreements that lower or eliminate tariffs or other barriers to foreign trade so that they benefit the less-developed countries, they should not expect reciprocal concessions from those countries that are incompatible with their economic development, financial, and trade needs.

Article 41

The Member States, in order to accelerate their economic development, regional integration, and the expansion and improvement of the conditions of their commerce, shall promote improvement and coordination of transportation and communication in the developing countries and among the Member States.

Article 42

The Member States recognize that integration of the developing countries of the Hemisphere is one of the objectives of the inter-American system and, therefore, shall orient their efforts and take the necessary measures to accelerate the integration process, with a view to establishing a Latin American common market in the shortest possible time.

Article 43

In order to strengthen and accelerate integration in all its aspects, the Member States agree to give adequate priority to the preparation and carrying out of multinational projects and to their financing, as well as to encourage economic and financial institutions of the inter-American system to continue giving their broadest support to regional integration institutions and programs.

Article 44

The Member States agree that technical and financial cooperation that seeks to promote regional economic integration should be based on the principle of harmonious, balanced, and efficient development, with particular attention to the relatively less-developed countries, so that it may be a decisive factor that will enable them to promote, with their own efforts, the improved development of their infrastructure programs, new lines of production, and export diversification.

Article 45

The Member States, convinced that man can only achieve the full realization of his aspirations within a just social order, along with economic development and true peace, agree to dedicate every effort to the application of the following principles and mechanisms:

a) All human beings, without distinction as to race, sex, nationality, creed, or social condition, have a right to material well-being and to their spiritual development, under circumstances of liberty, dignity, equality of opportunity, and economic security;

b) Work is a right and a social duty, it gives dignity to the one who performs it, and it should be performed under conditions, including a system of fair wages, that ensure life, health, and a decent standard of living for the worker and his family, both during his working years and in his old age, or when any circumstance deprives him of the possibility of working;

c) Employers and workers, both rural and urban, have the right to associate themselves freely for the defense and promotion of their interests, including the right to collective bargaining and the workers' right to strike, and recognition of the juridical personality of associations and the protection of their freedom and independence, all in accordance with applicable laws;

d) Fair and efficient systems and procedures for consultation and collaboration among the sectors of production, with due regard for safeguarding the interests of the entire society;

e) The operation of systems of public administration, banking and credit, enterprise, and distribution and sales, in such a way, in harmony with the private sector, as to meet the requirements and interests of the community;

f) The incorporation and increasing participation of the marginal sectors of the population, in both rural and urban areas, in the economic, social, civic, cultural, and political life of the nation, in order to achieve the full integration of the national community, acceleration of the process of social mobility, and the consolidation of the democratic system. The encouragement of all efforts of popular promotion and cooperation that have as their purpose the development and progress of the community;

The Member States recognize that, in order to facilitate the process of Latin American regional integration, it is necessary to harmonize the social legislation of the developing countries, especially in the labor and social security fields, so that the rights of the workers shall be equally protected, and they agree to make the greatest efforts possible to achieve this goal.

Article 47

The Member States will give primary importance within their development plans to the encouragement of education, science, technology, and culture, oriented toward the overall improvement of the individual, and as a foundation for democracy, social justice, and progress.

Article 48

The Member States will cooperate with one another to meet their educational needs, to promote scientific research, and to encourage technological progress for their integral development. They will consider themselves individually and jointly bound to preserve and enrich the cultural heritage of the American peoples.

The Member States will exert the greatest efforts, in accordance with their constitutional processes, to ensure the effective exercise of the right to education, on the following bases:

a) Elementary education, compulsory for children of school age, shall also be offered to all others who can benefit from it. When provided by the State it shall be without charge;

b) Middle-level education shall be extended progressively to as much of the population as possible, with a view to social improvement. It shall be diversified in such a way that it meets the development needs of each country without prejudice to providing a general education; and

c) Higher education shall be available to all, provided that, in order to maintain its high level, the corresponding regulatory or academic standards are met.

(Adopted at Belém do Pará, on June 9, 1994, at the twenty fourth regular session of the General Assembly)

PREAMBLE

The member states of the Organization of American States signatory to the present Convention, DISTURBED by the persistence of the forced disappearance of persons;

REAFFIRMING that the true meaning of American solidarity and good neighborliness can be none other than that of consolidating in this Hemisphere, in the framework of democratic institutions, a system of individual freedom and social justice based on respect for essential human rights;

CONSIDERING that the forced disappearance of persons in an affront to the conscience of the Hemisphere and a grave and abominable offense against the inherent dignity of the human being, and one that contradicts the principles and purposes enshrined in the Charter of the Organization of American States;

CONSIDERING that the forced disappearance of persons violates numerous non-derogable and essential human rights enshrined in the American Convention on Human Rights, in the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man, and in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

RECALLING that the international protection of human rights is in the form of a convention reinforcing or complementing the protection provided by domestic law and is based upon the attributes of the human personality;

REAFFIRMING that the systematic practice of the forced disappearance of persons constitutes a crime against humanity;

HOPING that this Convention may help to prevent, punish, and eliminate the forced disappearance of persons in the Hemisphere and make a decisive contribution to the protection of human rights and the rule of law,

RESOLVE to adopt the following Inter-American Convention on Forced Disappearance of Persons:

Article I

The States Parties to this Convention undertake:

a. Not to practice, permit, or tolerate the forced disappearance of persons, even in states of emergency or suspension of individual guarantees;
b. To punish within their jurisdictions, those persons who commit or attempt to commit the crime of forced disappearance of persons and their accomplices and accessories;

c. To cooperate with one another in helping to prevent, punish, and eliminate the forced disappearance of persons;

d. To take legislative, administrative, judicial, and any other measures necessary to comply with the commitments undertaken in this Convention.

Article II

For the purposes of this Convention, forced disappearance is considered to be the act of depriving a person or persons of his or their freedom, in whatever way, perpetrated by agents of the state or by persons or groups of persons acting with the authorization, support, or acquiescence of the state, followed by an absence of information or a refusal to acknowledge that deprivation of freedom or to give information on the whereabouts of that person, thereby impeding his or her recourse to the applicable legal remedies and procedural guarantees.

Article III

The States Parties undertake to adopt, in accordance with their constitutional procedures, the legislative measures that may be needed to define the forced disappearance of persons as an offense and to impose an appropriate punishment commensurate with its extreme gravity. This offense shall be deemed continuous or permanent as long as the fate or whereabouts of the victim has not been determined.

The States Parties may establish mitigating circumstances for persons who have participated in acts constituting forced disappearance when they help to cause the victim to reappear alive or provide information that sheds light on the forced disappearance of a person.

Article IV

The acts constituting the forced disappearance of persons shall be considered offenses in every State Party. Consequently, each State Party shall take measures to establish its jurisdiction over such cases in the following instances:

a. When the forced disappearance of persons or any act constituting such offense was committed within its jurisdiction;

b. When the accused is a national of that state;

c. When the victim is a national of that state and that state sees fit to do so.

Every State Party shall, moreover, take the necessary measures to establish its jurisdiction over the crime described in this Convention when the alleged criminal is within its territory and it does not proceed to extradite him.
This Convention does not authorize any State Party to undertake, in the territory of another State Party, the exercise of jurisdiction or the performance of functions that are placed within the exclusive purview of the authorities of that other Party by its domestic law.

Article V

The forced disappearance of persons shall not be considered a political offense for purposes of extradition.

The forced disappearance of persons shall be deemed to be included among the extraditable offenses in every extradition treaty entered into between States Parties.

The States Parties undertake to include the offense of forced disappearance as one which is extraditable in every extradition treaty to be concluded between them in the future.

Every State Party that makes extradition conditional on the existence of a treaty and receives a request for extradition from another State Party with which it has no extradition treaty may consider this Convention as the necessary legal basis for extradition with respect to the offense of forced disappearance.

States Parties which do not make extradition conditional on the existence of a treaty shall recognize such offense as extraditable, subject to the conditions imposed by the law of the requested state.

Extradition shall be subject to the provisions set forth in the constitution and other laws of the request state.

Article VI

When a State Party does not grant the extradition, the case shall be submitted to its competent authorities as if the offense had been committed within its jurisdiction, for the purposes of investigation and when appropriate, for criminal action, in accordance with its national law. Any decision adopted by these authorities shall be communicated to the state that has requested the extradition.

Article VII

Criminal prosecution for the forced disappearance of persons and the penalty judicially imposed on its perpetrator shall not be subject to statutes of limitations.

However, if there should be a norm of a fundamental character preventing application of the stipulation contained in the previous paragraph, the period of limitation shall be equal to that which applies to the gravest crime in the domestic laws of the corresponding State Party.

Article VIII
The defense of due obedience to superior orders or instructions that stipulate, authorize, or encourage forced disappearance shall not be admitted. All persons who receive such orders have the right and duty not to obey them.

The States Parties shall ensure that the training of public law-enforcement personnel or officials includes the necessary education on the offense of forced disappearance of persons.

Article IX

Persons alleged to be responsible for the acts constituting the offense of forced disappearance of persons may be tried only in the competent jurisdictions of ordinary law in each state, to the exclusion of all other special jurisdictions, particularly military jurisdictions.

The acts constituting forced disappearance shall not be deemed to have been committed in the course of military duties.

Privileges, immunities, or special dispensations shall not be admitted in such trials, without prejudice to the provisions set forth in the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations.

Article X

In no case may exceptional circumstances such as a state of war, the threat of war, internal political instability, or any other public emergency be invoked to justify the forced disappearance of persons. In such cases, the right to expeditious and effective judicial procedures and recourse shall be retained as a means of determining the whereabouts or state of health of a person who has been deprived of freedom, or of identifying the official who ordered or carried out such deprivation of freedom.

In pursuing such procedures or recourse, and in keeping with applicable domestic law, the competent judicial authorities shall have free and immediate access to all detention centers and to each of their units, and to all places where there is reason to believe the disappeared person might be found including places that are subject to military jurisdiction.

Article XI

Every person deprived of liberty shall be held in an officially recognized place of detention and be brought before a competent judicial authority without delay, in accordance with applicable domestic law.

The States Parties shall establish and maintain official up-to-date registries of their detainees and, in accordance with their domestic law, shall make them available to relatives, judges, attorneys, any other person having a legitimate interest, and other authorities.

Article XII
The States Parties shall give each other mutual assistance in the search for, identification, location, and return of minors who have been removed to another state or detained therein as a consequence of the forced disappearance of their parents or guardians.

Article XIII

For the purposes of this Convention, the processing of petitions or communications presented to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights alleging the forced disappearance of persons shall be subject to the procedures established in the American Convention on Human Rights and to the Statue and Regulations of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights and to the Statute and Rules of Procedure of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, including the provisions on precautionary measures.

Article XIV

Without prejudice to the provisions of the preceding article, when the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights receives a petition or communication regarding an alleged forced disappearance, its Executive Secretariat shall urgently and confidentially address the respective government, and shall request that government to provide as soon as possible information as to the whereabouts of the allegedly disappeared person together with any other information it considers pertinent, and such request shall be without prejudice as to the admissibility of the petition.

Article XV

None of the provisions of this Convention shall be interpreted as limiting other bilateral or multilateral treaties or other agreements signed by the Parties.

This Convention shall not apply to the international armed conflicts governed by the 1949 Geneva Conventions and their Protocols, concerning protection of wounded, sick, and shipwrecked members of the armed forces; and prisoners of war and civilians in time of war.

Article XVI

This Convention is open for signature by the member states of the Organization of American States.

Article XVII

Article XVIII

This Convention shall be open to accession by any other state. The instruments of accession shall be deposited with the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States.
Article XIX

The states may express reservations with respect to this Convention when adopting, signing, ratifying or acceding to it, unless such reservations are incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention and as long as they refer to one or more specific provisions.

Article XX

This Convention shall enter into force for the ratifying states on the thirtieth day from the date of deposit of the second instrument of ratification.

For each state ratifying or acceding to the Convention after the second instrument of ratification has been deposited, the Convention shall enter into force on the thirtieth day from the date on which that state deposited its instrument of ratification or accession.

Article XXI

This Convention shall remain in force indefinitely, but may be denounced by any State Party. The instrument of denunciation shall be deposited with the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States. The Convention shall cease to be in effect for the denouncing state and shall remain in force for the other States Parties one year from the date of deposit of the instrument of denunciation.

Pursuant to Article XIX of the Convention, the Republic of Guatemala, upon ratifying the Convention, formulates a reservation regarding the application of Article V thereof, since Article 27 of its Political Constitution establishes that "extradition proceedings, for political crimes shall not be instituted against Guatemalans, who shall in no case be handed over to a foreign government, except as provided in treaties and conventions concerning crimes against humanity or against international law,"

b. Mexico: Inter-American Convention on the Forced Disappearance of Persons Reservation made when depositing the instrument of ratification (April 9, 2002)

"The Government of the United Mexican States, upon ratifying the Inter-American Convention on the Forced Disappearance of Persons adopted in Belem, Brazil on June 9, 1994 makes express reservation to Article IX, inasmuch as the Political Constitution recognizes military jurisdiction when a member of the armed forces commits an illicit act while on duty. Military jurisdiction does not constitute a special jurisdiction in the sense of the Convention given that according to Article 14 of the Mexican Constitution nobody may be deprived of his life, liberty, property, possessions, or rights except as a result of a trial before previously established courts in which due process is observed in accordance with laws promulgated prior to the fact." Interpretative declaration made when depositing the instrument of ratification (April 9, 2002)

Based on Article 14 of the Political Constitution of the United Mexican States, the Government of Mexico declares, upon ratifying the Inter-American Convention on the Forced Disappearance of Persons adopted in Belem, Brazil on June 9, 1994, that it shall be understood that the provisions of said Convention shall apply to acts constituting the forced disappearance of persons ordered, executed, or committed after the entry into force of this Convention.

CONSIDERING that the Charter of the Organization of American States, in Article 3.j, establishes the principle that "social justice and social security are bases of lasting peace";

CONCERNED by the discrimination to which people are subject based on their disability;

BEARING IN MIND the agreement of the International Labour Organisation on the vocational rehabilitation and employment of disabled persons (Convention 159); the Declaration of the Rights of Mentally Retarded Persons (UN General Assembly resolution 2856 (XXVI) of December 20, 1971); the Declaration on the Rights of Disabled Persons (UN General Assembly resolution 3447 (XXX) of December 9, 1975); the World Programme of Action concerning Disabled Persons (UN General Assembly resolution 37/52 of December 3, 1982); the Additional Protocol to the American Convention on Human Rights in the area of Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights, "Protocol of San Salvador" (1988); the Principles for the Protection of Persons with Mental Illness and for the Improvement of Mental Health Care (UN General Assembly resolution 46/119 of December 17, 1991); the Declaration of Caracas of the Pan American Health Organization; resolution AG/RES. 1249 (XXIII-O/93), "Situation of Persons with Disabilities in the American Hemisphere"; the Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities (UN General Assembly resolution 48/96 of December 20, 1993); the Declaration of Managua (December 1993); the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the UN World Conference on Human Rights (157/93); resolution AG/RES. 1356 (XXV-O/95), "Situation of Persons with Disabilities in the American Hemisphere"; and AG/RES. 1369 (XXVI-O/96), "Panama Commitment to Persons with Disabilities in the American Hemisphere"; and COMMITTED to eliminating discrimination, in all its forms and manifestations, against persons with disabilities,

HAVE AGREED as follows:

Article I

For the purposes of this Convention, the following terms are defined:

1. Disability
The term "disability" means a physical, mental, or sensory impairment, whether permanent or temporary, that limits the capacity to perform one or more essential activities of daily life, and which can be caused or aggravated by the economic and social environment.

2. Discrimination against persons with disabilities

a. The term "discrimination against persons with disabilities" means any distinction, exclusion, or restriction based on a disability, record of disability, condition resulting from a previous disability, or perception of disability, whether present or past, which has the effect or objective of impairing or nullifying the recognition, enjoyment, or exercise by a person with a disability of his or her human rights and fundamental freedoms.

b. A distinction or preference adopted by a state party to promote the social integration or personal development of persons with disabilities does not constitute discrimination provided that the distinction or preference does not in itself limit the right of persons with disabilities to equality and that individuals with disabilities are not forced to accept such distinction or preference. If, under a state's internal law, a person can be declared legally incompetent, when necessary and appropriate for his or her well-being, such declaration does not constitute discrimination.

Article II

The objectives of this Convention are to prevent and eliminate all forms of discrimination against persons with disabilities and to promote their full integration into society.

Article III

To achieve the objectives of this Convention, the states parties undertake:

1. To adopt the legislative, social, educational, labor-related, or any other measures needed to eliminate discrimination against persons with disabilities and to promote their full integration into society, including, but not limited to:

a. Measures to eliminate discrimination gradually and to promote integration by government authorities and/or private entities in providing or making available goods, services, facilities, programs, and activities such as employment, transportation, communications, housing, recreation, education, sports, law enforcement and administration of justice, and political and administrative activities;

b. Measures to ensure that new buildings, vehicles, and facilities constructed or manufactured within their respective territories facilitate transportation, communications, and access by persons with disabilities;

c. Measures to eliminate, to the extent possible, architectural, transportation, and communication obstacles to facilitate access and use by persons with disabilities; and
d. Measures to ensure that persons responsible for applying this Convention and domestic law in this area are trained to do so.

2. To work on a priority basis in the following areas:
   a. Prevention of all forms of preventable disabilities;
   b. Early detection and intervention, treatment, rehabilitation, education, job training, and the provision of comprehensive services to ensure the optimal level of independence and quality of life for persons with disabilities; and
   c. Increasing of public awareness through educational campaigns aimed at eliminating prejudices, stereotypes, and other attitudes that jeopardize the right of persons to live as equals, thus promoting respect for and coexistence with persons with disabilities;

Article IV

To achieve the objectives of this Convention, the states parties undertake to:

1. Cooperate with one another in helping to prevent and eliminate discrimination against persons with disabilities;

2. Collaborate effectively in:
   a. Scientific and technological research related to the prevention of disabilities and to the treatment, rehabilitation, and integration into society of persons with disabilities; and
   b. The development of means and resources designed to facilitate or promote the independence, self-sufficiency, and total integration into society of persons with disabilities, under conditions of equality.

Article V

1. To the extent that it is consistent with their respective internal laws, the states parties shall promote participation by representatives of organizations of persons with disabilities, nongovernmental organizations working in this area, or, if such organizations do not exist, persons with disabilities, in the development, execution, and evaluation of measures and policies to implement this Convention.

2. The states parties shall create effective communication channels to disseminate among the public and private organizations working with persons with disabilities the normative and juridical advances that may be achieved in order to eliminate discrimination against persons with disabilities.

Article VI

1. To follow up on the commitments undertaken in this Convention, a Committee for the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Persons with Disabilities, composed of one representative appointed by each state party, shall be established.

2. The committee shall hold its first meeting within the 90 days following the deposit of the 11th instrument of ratification. Said meeting shall be convened by the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States and shall be held at the Organization’s headquarters, unless a state party offers to host it.

3. At the first meeting, the states parties undertake to submit a report to the Secretary General of the Organization for transmission to the Committee so that it may be examined and reviewed. Thereafter, reports shall be submitted every four years.

4. The reports prepared under the previous paragraph shall include information on measures adopted by the member states pursuant to this Convention and on any progress made by the states parties in eliminating all forms of discrimination against persons with disabilities. The reports shall indicate any circumstances or difficulties affecting the degree of fulfillment of the obligations arising from this Convention.

5. The Committee shall be the forum for assessment of progress made in the application of the Convention and for the exchange of experience among the states parties. The reports prepared by the committee shall reflect the deliberations; shall include information on any measures adopted by the states parties pursuant to this Convention, on any progress they have made in eliminating all forms of discrimination against persons with disabilities, and on any circumstances or difficulties they have encountered in the implementation of the Convention; and shall include the committee’s conclusions, its observations, and its general suggestions for the gradual fulfillment of the Convention.

6. The committee shall draft its rules of procedure and adopt them by a simple majority.

7. The Secretary General shall provide the Committee with the support it requires in order to perform its functions.

Article VII

No provision of this Convention shall be interpreted as restricting, or permitting the restriction by states parties of the enjoyment of the rights of persons with disabilities recognized by customary international law or the international instruments by which a particular state party is bound.

Article VIII

1. This Convention shall be open for signature by all member states in Guatemala City, Guatemala, on June 8, 1999, and, thereafter, shall remain open for signature by all states at the headquarters of the Organization of American States, until its entry into force.

2. This Convention is subject to ratification.
3. This Convention shall enter into force for the ratifying states on the 30th day following the date of deposit of the sixth instrument of ratification by a member state of the Organization of American States.

Article IX

After its entry into force, this Convention shall be open for accession by all states that have not signed it.

Article X

1. The instruments of ratification and accession shall be deposited with the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States.

2. For each state that ratifies or accedes to the Convention after the sixth instrument of ratification has been deposited, the Convention shall enter into force on the 30th day following deposit by that state of its instrument of ratification or accession.

Article XI

1. Any state party may make proposals for amendment of this Convention. Said proposals shall be submitted to the General Secretariat of the OAS for dissemination to the states parties.

2. Amendments shall enter into force for the states ratifying them on the date of deposit of the respective instruments of ratification by two thirds of the member states. For the remaining states parties, they shall enter into force on the date of deposit of their respective instruments of ratification.

Article XII

The states may enter reservations to this Convention when ratifying or acceding to it, provided that such reservations are not incompatible with the aim and purpose of the Convention and relate to one or more specific provisions thereof.

Article XIII

This Convention shall remain in force indefinitely, but any state party may denounce it. The instrument of denunciation shall be deposited with the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States. The Convention shall cease to have force and effect for the denouncing state one year after the date of deposit of the instrument of denunciation, and shall remain in force for the other states parties. Such denunciation shall not exempt the state party from the obligations imposed upon it under this Convention in respect of any action or omission prior to the date on which the denunciation takes effect.

Article XIV

1. The original instrument of this Convention, the English, French, Portuguese, and Spanish texts of which are equally authentic, shall be deposited with the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States, which shall send a certified copy thereof to the United Nations Secretariat for registration and publication pursuant to Article 102 of the United Nations Charter.

2. The General Secretariat of the Organization of American States shall notify the member states of that Organization and the states that have acceded to the Convention of the signatures, deposits of instruments of ratification, accession, and denunciation, and any reservations entered.

INTER-AMERICAN CONVENTION TO PREVENT AND PUNISH TORTURE

(Adopted at Cartagena de Indias, Colombia, on December 9, 1985, at the fifteenth regular session of the General Assembly)

The American States signatory to the present Convention,

Aware of the provision of the American Convention on Human Rights that no one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman, or degrading punishment or treatment;

Reaffirming that all acts of torture or any other cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment constitute an offense against human dignity and a denial of the principles set forth in the Charter of the Organization of American States and in the Charter of the United Nations and are violations of the fundamental human rights and freedoms proclaimed in the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

Noting that, in order for the pertinent rules contained in the aforementioned global and regional instruments to take effect, it is necessary to draft an Inter-American Convention that prevents and punishes torture;

Reaffirming their purpose of consolidating in this hemisphere the conditions that make for recognition of and respect for the inherent dignity of man, and ensure the full exercise of his fundamental rights and freedoms,

Have agreed upon the following:

Article 1

The State Parties undertake to prevent and punish torture in accordance with the terms of this Convention.

Article 2

For the purposes of this Convention, torture shall be understood to be any act intentionally performed whereby physical or mental pain or suffering is inflicted on a person for purposes of criminal investigation, as a means of intimidation, as personal punishment, as a preventive measure, as a penalty, or for any other purpose. Torture shall also be understood to be the use of methods upon a person intended to obliterate the personality of the victim or to diminish his physical or mental capacities, even if they do not cause physical pain or mental anguish.

The concept of torture shall not include physical or mental pain or suffering that is inherent in or solely the consequence of lawful measures, provided that they do not include the performance of the acts or use of the methods referred to in this article.

Article 3

The following shall be held guilty of the crime of torture:
a. A public servant or employee who acting in that capacity orders, instigates or induces the use of torture, or who directly commits it or who, being able to prevent it, fails to do so.

b. A person who at the instigation of a public servant or employee mentioned in subparagraph (a) orders, instigates or induces the use of torture, directly commits it or is an accomplice thereto.

Article 4

The fact of having acted under orders of a superior shall not provide exemption from the corresponding criminal liability.

Article 5

The existence of circumstances such as a state of war, threat of war, state of siege or of emergency, domestic disturbance or strife, suspension of constitutional guarantees, domestic political instability, or other public emergencies or disasters shall not be invoked or admitted as justification for the crime of torture.

Neither the dangerous character of the detainee or prisoner, nor the lack of security of the prison establishment or penitentiary shall justify torture.

Article 6

In accordance with the terms of Article 1, the States Parties shall take effective measures to prevent and punish torture within their jurisdiction.

The States Parties shall ensure that all acts of torture and attempts to commit torture are offenses under their criminal law and shall make such acts punishable by severe penalties that take into account their serious nature.

The States Parties likewise shall take effective measures to prevent and punish other cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment within their jurisdiction.

Article 7

The States Parties shall take measures so that, in the training of police officers and other public officials responsible for the custody of persons temporarily or definitively deprived of their freedom, special emphasis shall be put on the prohibition of the use of torture in interrogation, detention, or arrest.

The States Parties likewise shall take similar measures to prevent other cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 8

The States Parties shall guarantee that any person making an accusation of having been subjected to torture within their jurisdiction shall have the right to an impartial examination of his case.
Likewise, if there is an accusation or well-grounded reason to believe that an act of torture has been committed within their jurisdiction, the States Parties shall guarantee that their respective authorities will proceed properly and immediately to conduct an investigation into the case and to initiate, whenever appropriate, the corresponding criminal process.

After all the domestic legal procedures of the respective State and the corresponding appeals have been exhausted, the case may be submitted to the international fora whose competence has been recognized by that State.

Article 9

The States Parties undertake to incorporate into their national laws regulations guaranteeing suitable compensation for victims of torture.

None of the provisions of this article shall affect the right to receive compensation that the victim or other persons may have by virtue of existing national legislation.

Article 10

No statement that is verified as having been obtained through torture shall be admissible as evidence in a legal proceeding, except in a legal action taken against a person or persons accused of having elicited it through acts of torture, and only as evidence that the accused obtained such statement by such means.

Article 11

The States Parties shall take the necessary steps to extradite anyone accused of having committed the crime of torture or sentenced for commission of that crime, in accordance with their respective national laws on extradition and their international commitments on this matter.

Article 12

Every State Party shall take the necessary measures to establish its jurisdiction over the crime described in this Convention in the following cases:

a. When torture has been committed within its jurisdiction;

b. When the alleged criminal is a national of that State; or

c. When the victim is a national of that State and it so deems appropriate.

Every State Party shall also take the necessary measures to establish its jurisdiction over the crime described in this Convention when the alleged criminal is within the area under its jurisdiction and it is not appropriate to extradite him in accordance with Article 11.

This Convention does not exclude criminal jurisdiction exercised in accordance with domestic law.
Article 13

The crime referred to in Article 2 shall be deemed to be included among the extraditable crimes in every extradition treaty entered into between States Parties. The States Parties undertake to include the crime of torture as an extraditable offence in every extradition treaty to be concluded between them.

Every State Party that makes extradition conditional on the existence of a treaty may, if it receives a request for extradition from another State Party with which it has no extradition treaty, consider this Convention as the legal basis for extradition in respect of the crime of torture. Extradition shall be subject to the other conditions that may be required by the law of the requested State.

States Parties which do not make extradition conditional on the existence of a treaty shall recognize such crimes as extraditable offences between themselves, subject to the conditions required by the law of the requested State.

Extradition shall not be granted nor shall the person sought be returned when there are grounds to believe that his life is in danger, that he will be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, or that he will be tried by special or ad hoc courts in the requesting State.

Article 14

When a State Party does not grant the extradition, the case shall be submitted to its competent authorities as if the crime had been committed within its jurisdiction, for the purposes of investigation, and when appropriate, for criminal action, in accordance with its national law. Any decision adopted by these authorities shall be communicated to the State that has requested the extradition.

Article 15

No provision of this Convention may be interpreted as limiting the right of asylum, when appropriate, nor as altering the obligations of the States Parties in the matter of extradition.

Article 16

This Convention shall not limit the provisions of the American Convention on Human Rights, other conventions on the subject, or the Statutes of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, with respect to the crime of torture.

Article 17

The States Parties undertake to inform the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights of any legislative, judicial, administrative, or other measures they adopt in application of this Convention.

In keeping with its duties and responsibilities, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights will endeavor in its annual report to analyze the existing situation in the member states of the Organization of American States in regard to the prevention and elimination of torture.

Article 18

This Convention is open to signature by the member states of the Organization of American States.

Article 19

This Convention is subject to ratification. The instruments of ratification shall be deposited with the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States.

Article 20

This Convention is open to accession by any other American state. The instruments of accession shall be deposited with the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States.

Article 21

The States Parties may, at the time of approval, signature, ratification, or accession, make reservations to this Convention, provided that such reservations are not incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention and concern one or more specific provisions.

Article 22

This Convention shall enter into force on the thirtieth day following the date on which the second instrument of ratification is deposited. For each State ratifying or acceding to the Convention after the second instrument of ratification has been deposited, the Convention shall enter into force on the thirtieth day following the date on which that State deposits its instrument of ratification or accession.

Article 23

This Convention shall remain in force indefinitely, but may be denounced by any State Party. The instrument of denunciation shall be deposited with the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States. After one year from the date of deposit of the instrument of denunciation, this Convention shall cease to be in effect for the denouncing State but shall remain in force for the remaining States Parties.

Article 24

The original instrument of this Convention, the English, French, Portuguese, and Spanish texts of which are equally authentic, shall be deposited with the General Secretariat of the Organization of American States, which shall send a certified copy to the Secretariat of the United Nations for registration and publication, in accordance with the provisions of Article 102 of the United Nations Charter. The General Secretariat of the Organization of American States shall notify the member states of the Organization and the States that have acceded to the Convention of signatures and of deposits of instruments of ratification, accession, and denunciation, as well as reservations, if any.

   (Reservation made at the time of signature)

The Republic of Guatemala does not accept the application nor shall it apply the third paragraph of Article 8, because in conformance with its domestic legal procedures, when the appeals have been exhausted, the decision acquitting a defendant charged with the crime of torture becomes final and may not be submitted to any international fora.

a. Guatemala:

   Withdrawal of Reservations:

On October 1, 1990, deposited at the General Secretariat, an instrument dated August 6, 1990, withdrawing the reservation made by the Government of Guatemala at the time of signing the Convention and reiterated at the time of ratifying it on December 10, 1986.

b. Chile:

   (Reservations made at the time of ratification)

   a) To Article 4, to the effect that, inasmuch as it alters the principle of "automatic obedience" established in Chile's domestic law, the Government of Chile will enforce the provisions of that international rule in respect of subordinate personnel subject to the jurisdiction of the Code of Military Justice, provided that execution of an order whose obvious intent is the perpetration of the acts stipulated in Article 2, is not demanded by the superior over the subordinate's representation.

   b) With regard to the final paragraph of Article 13, because of the discretionary and subjective way in which the rule is drafted.
c) The Government of Chile states that in its relations with the countries of the Americas that are Parties to the present Convention, it will apply this Convention in those cases where there is incompatibility between its provisions and those of the Convention against torture and other Cruel, Inhuman, or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted by the United Nations in 1984.

d) With regard to the third paragraph of Article 8, since a case may only be submitted to the international fora whose competence has been recognized by the State of Chile.

Withdrawal of Reservations:

On August 21, 1990 deposited an instrument dated May 18, 1990, withdrawing the reservations formulated by the Government of Chile to Article 4 and to the final paragraph of Article 13 of the Convention.
ADDITIONAL PROTOCOL TO THE AMERICAN CONVENTION ON HUMAN RIGHTS IN THE AREA OF ECONOMIC, SOCIAL AND CULTURAL RIGHTS "PROTOCOL OF SAN SALVADOR"

(Adopted at San Salvador, El Salvador on November 17, 1988, at the eighteenth regular session of the General Assembly)

Preamble

The States Parties to the American Convention on Human Rights "Pact San José, Costa Rica,"

Reaffirming their intention to consolidate in this hemisphere, within the framework of democratic institutions, a system of personal liberty and social justice based on respect for the essential rights of man;

Recognizing that the essential rights of man are not derived from one's being a national of a certain State, but are based upon attributes of the human person, for which reason they merit international protection in the form of a convention reinforcing or complementing the protection provided by the domestic law of the American States;

Considering the close relationship that exists between economic, social and cultural rights, and civil and political rights, in that the different categories of rights constitute an indivisible whole based on the recognition of the dignity of the human person, for which reason both require permanent protection and promotion if they are to be fully realized, and the violation of some rights in favor of the realization of others can never be justified;

Recognizing the benefits that stem from the promotion and development of cooperation among States and international relations;

Recalling that, in accordance with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the American Convention on Human Rights, the ideal of free human beings enjoying freedom from fear and want can only be achieved if conditions are created whereby everyone may enjoy his economic, social and cultural rights as well as his civil and political rights;

Bearing in mind that, although fundamental economic, social and cultural rights have been recognized in earlier international instruments of both world and regional scope, it is essential that those rights be reaffirmed, developed, perfected and protected in order to consolidate in America, on the basis of full respect for the rights of the individual, the democratic representative form of government as well as the right of its peoples to development, self-determination, and the free disposal of their wealth and natural resources; and Considering that the American Convention on Human Rights provides that draft additional protocols to that Convention may be submitted for consideration to the States Parties, meeting together on the occasion of the General Assembly of the Organization of American States, for the purpose of gradually incorporating other rights and freedoms into the protective system thereof, Have agreed upon the following Additional Protocol to the American Convention on Human Rights "Protocol of San Salvador:"

Article 1

Obligation to Adopt Measures

The States Parties to this Additional Protocol to the American Convention on Human Rights undertake to adopt the necessary measures, both domestically and through international cooperation, especially economic and technical, to the extent allowed by their available resources, and taking into account their degree of development, for the purpose of achieving progressively and pursuant to their internal legislations, the full observance of the rights recognized in this Protocol.

Article 2

Obligation to Enact Domestic Legislation

If the exercise of the rights set forth in this Protocol is not already guaranteed by legislative or other provisions, the States Parties undertake to adopt, in accordance with their constitutional processes and the provisions of this Protocol, such legislative or other measures as may be necessary for making those rights a reality.

Article 3

Obligation of nondiscrimination

The State Parties to this Protocol undertake to guarantee the exercise of the rights set forth herein without discrimination of any kind for reasons related to race, color, sex, language, religion, political or other opinions, national or social origin, economic status, birth or any other social condition.

Article 4

Inadmissibility of Restrictions

A right which is recognized or in effect in a State by virtue of its internal legislation or international conventions may not be restricted or curtailed on the pretext that this Protocol does not recognize the right or recognizes it to a lesser degree.

Article 5

Scope of Restrictions and Limitations

The State Parties may establish restrictions and limitations on the enjoyment and exercise of the rights established herein by means of laws promulgated for the purpose of preserving the general welfare in a democratic society only to the extent that they are not incompatible with the purpose and reason underlying those rights.
Article 6

Right to Work

1. Everyone has the right to work, which includes the opportunity to secure the means for living a dignified and decent existence by performing a freely elected or accepted lawful activity.

2. The State Parties undertake to adopt measures that will make the right to work fully effective, especially with regard to the achievement of full employment, vocational guidance, and the development of technical and vocational training projects, in particular those directed to the disabled. The States Parties also undertake to implement and strengthen programs that help to ensure suitable family care, so that women may enjoy a real opportunity to exercise the right to work.

Just, Equitable, and Satisfactory Conditions of Work

The States Parties to this Protocol recognize that the right to work to which the foregoing article refers presupposes that everyone shall enjoy that right under just, equitable, and satisfactory conditions, which the States Parties undertake to guarantee in their internal legislation, particularly with respect to:

1. Remuneration which guarantees, as a minimum, to all workers dignified and decent living conditions for them and their families and fair and equal wages for equal work, without distinction;

2. The right of every worker to follow his vocation and to devote himself to the activity that best fulfills his expectations and to change employment in accordance with the pertinent national regulations;

3. The right of every worker to promotion or upward mobility in his employment, for which purpose account shall be taken of his qualifications, competence, integrity and seniority;

4. Stability of employment, subject to the nature of each industry and occupation and the causes for just separation. In cases of unjustified dismissal, the worker shall have the right to indemnity or to reinstatement on the job or any other benefits provided by domestic legislation;

5. Safety and hygiene at work;

6. The prohibition of night work or unhealthy or dangerous working conditions and, in general, of all work which jeopardizes health, safety, or morals, for persons under 18 years of age. As regards minors under the age of 16, the work day shall be subordinated to the provisions regarding compulsory education and in no case shall work constitute an impediment to school attendance or a limitation on benefiting from education received;
g. A reasonable limitation of working hours, both daily and weekly. The days shall be shorter in the case of dangerous or unhealthy work or of night work;

PROTOCOL TO THE AMERICAN CONVENTION ON HUMAN RIGHTS TO ABOLOISH THE DEATH PENALTY

(Adopted at Asunción, Paraguay, on June 8, 1990, at the twentieth regular session of the General Assembly)

PREAMBLE

THE STATES PARTIES TO THIS PROTOCOL,

CONSIDERING:

That Article 4 of the American Convention on Human Rights recognizes the right to life and restricts the application of the death penalty;

That States Parties to the American Convention on Human Rights have expressed their intention to adopt an international agreement with a view to consolidating the practice of not applying the death penalty in the Americas,

HAVE AGREED TO SIGN THE FOLLOWING PROTOCOL TO THE AMERICAN CONVENTION ON HUMAN RIGHTS TO ABOLOISH THE DEATH PENALTY

Article 1

I. INTRODUCTION

Petitioners seek the urgent intervention of this Commission in order to prevent continued unlawful acts that threaten the rights of individuals detained by the United States government at its military base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Although the United States has an obligation and right to arrest and try the perpetrators of the horrendous crimes of September 11, it must do so in compliance with fundamental principles of national, human rights and humanitarian law. It has not done so. The United States’ failure to abide by these fundamental principles is setting a precedent for the actions of other states, states that will see U.S. actions as supporting their own violations of international law and human dignity.

Petitioners, therefore, are requesting Precautionary Measures to protect the detainees’ rights to be treated as prisoners-of-war (pows), to be free from arbitrary, incommunicado, and prolonged detention, unlawful interrogations, and trials by military commission in which they could be sentenced to death. These rights are protected pursuant to Articles I, XVII, XVIII, XXV, XXVI of the American Declaration on the Rights and Duties of Man (ADRDM), which imposes binding international obligations on the United States.

II. STATEMENT OF FACTS

In the wake of the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, the United States of America planned and carried out a massive military campaign against the Taliban regime then in power in Afghanistan and an organization called al Qaida. The U.S. Congress authorized this military action by granting the President authority to “use all necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organization, or persons he determined” were either involved in the September 11 attacks, aided in their commission, or harbored others who were involved in the attacks.¹

During the course of the campaign, President Bush, Secretary of Defense Rumsfeld, and other members of the United States’ military acting at their direction repeatedly described the campaign as a “war.” On September 12, 2001, President Bush described the attacks on the World Trade Center as acts of war.² On September 20, 2001, President Bush announced the start of the “war on terror”³ and on September 25, 2001, he stated that “[w]e’re in a war we’re going to win.”⁴

On October 7, 2001, the President announced that the U.S. military had begun air strikes against al Qaida camps and Taliban installations.⁵ U.S ground troops first arrived in Afghanistan on October 20, 2001 and immediately engaged Taliban forces in battle. Following the capture of Kabul and other major cities in November, military operations focused on eliminating bastions of resistance in Kandahar and the Tora Bora caves in early December.⁶

On November 13, 2001, President Bush issued a Military Order authorizing the Secretary of Defense to detain anyone whom the President determined in writing:

i. is or was a member of the organization known as al Qaida, or

ii. has engaged in, aided or abetted, or conspired to commit, acts of international terrorism, or acts in preparation therefore, that have caused, threaten to cause, or have as their aim to cause, injury to or adverse effects on the United States, its citizens, national security, foreign policy, or economy; or

iii. has knowingly harbored any such person.7

The Military Order also provides that “if the individual is to be tried,” such trials will be held before military commissions operating in accordance with the basic rules set forth in the Order, which allows the non-unanimous imposition of death sentences. There is no requirement that a detained individual be brought to trial. The Military Order also states that persons detained or tried under its provisions “shall not be privileged to seek any remedy or maintain any proceeding, directly or indirectly, or to have any such remedy or proceeding sought on the individual’s behalf, in (i) any court of the United States, or any State thereof, (ii) any court of any foreign nation, or (iii) any international tribunal.” 8

On November 16, the Special Rapporteur on the Independence of Judges and Lawyers of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights sent an urgent appeal to the United States government regarding the Military Order signed by President George W. Bush. In his appeal, the Special Rapporteur expressed concern about, among other things, the setting up of military tribunals to try those subject to the Order; the absence of a guarantee of the right to legal representation and advice while in detention; the establishment of an executive review process to replace the right to appeal the conviction and sentence to a higher tribunal; and the exclusion of jurisdiction of any other courts and international tribunals.9

Subsequent to the issuance of the Military Order, thousands of prisoners were captured by U.S. and Northern Alliance forces in Afghanistan. On or about January 11, 2002, the United States military began transporting prisoners captured in Afghanistan to Camp X-Ray at the U.S. Naval Station in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. It was reported that the transferred prisoners could face trials by military commission under the Military Order and possibly the death penalty. There have been allegations of ill-treatment of the prisoners in transit and at Guantanamo, including reports that they were shackled, hooded and sedated during the 25-hour flight from Afghanistan, their beards and heads forcibly shaved, and that upon arrival at Guantanamo they are housed in small cells that fail to protect against the elements.

As more shipments of prisoners began arriving at Guantanamo, international bodies such as the European Union, the International Committee of the Red Cross and a number of foreign governments expressed grave concerns over the treatment of the detainees, their confinement conditions and the refusal of the United States to afford them status under the Geneva Conventions.

On January 16, 2002, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights issued a statement regarding the Guantanamo detentions, noting that:

“All persons detained in this context are entitled to the protection of international human rights law and humanitarian law, in particular the relevant provisions of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR) and the Geneva Conventions of 1949.

The legal status of the detainees, and their entitlement to prisoner-of-war (POW) status, if disputed, must be determined by a competent tribunal, in accordance with the provisions of Article 5 of the Third Geneva Convention.

All detainees must at all times be treated humanely, consistent with the provisions of the ICCPR and the Third Geneva Convention.

Any possible trials should be guided by the principles of fair trial, including the presumption of innocence, provided for in the ICCPR and the Third Geneva Convention.”

It is the official position of the United States’ government that none of the detainees are pows. Instead, officials have repeatedly described the prisoners as “unlawful combatants” who are not subject to the Geneva Conventions. In its most recent statement on the status of those detained at Guantanamo, the government announced that although it would apply the Geneva Conventions to the Taliban prisoners, it would not extend them to members of al Qaida. In addition, the Government stated that the Taliban prisoners did not meet the criteria for pows set forth in the Conventions and that they were therefore not entitled to the protections of the Conventions. This determination was made without the convening of a competent tribunal required by Article 5 of the Third Geneva Convention.

16 Geneva Convention (III) Relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War, 12 August 1949 (ratified by the United States without reservation on 2 August 1955) (Geneva III), Article 5.
Although the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) rarely acknowledges publicly differences with governments, it did so with regard to the United States’ refusal to treat the Taliban and al Quida detainees as pows. On February 8, the day after announcement of the United States’ position, Darcy Christen, a spokesperson for the ICRC, said of the detainees: “They were captured in combat [and] we consider them prisoners of war.”\textsuperscript{17} The ICRC emphasized that it was up to a court to decide if a detainee was not a pow:

\begin{quote}
You cannot simply... decide what applies to one person and what applies to another. This has to go to a court because it is a legal decision not a political one.\textsuperscript{18} \end{quote}

In its Press Release of February 9, the ICRC again stated that captured “members of armed forces and militias associated to them” are protected by Geneva III and that there “are divergent views between the United States and the ICRC” as to the procedures “on how to determine that the persons detained are not entitled to prisoner of war status.”\textsuperscript{19}

United States’ authorities are now detaining 254 male prisoners representing 25 nationalities at the Guantanamo compound.\textsuperscript{20} Although the authorities have refused to divulge the identities or nationalities of the detainees, media reports indicate that they include nationals of the United Kingdom, Australia, France, Belgium, Sweden, Algeria, Yemen, Afghanistan,

Interrogation of the Guantanamo prisoners began on January 23; none of the detainees were allowed to have lawyers present during questioning by officers from several United States’ civilian and military agencies.\textsuperscript{23} The U.S. military has reportedly built several windowless plywood structures on the outskirts of the detention center for the purpose of obtaining information from the 254 detainees held there.\textsuperscript{24}

The ranks of the prisoners already held incommunicado at Guantánamo are expected to increase in the near future now that more open-air cells have been constructed.\textsuperscript{25} There are no indications that the detainees have been informed of their rights under the Geneva Conventions, the ICCPR, the ADRDM, the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations, or any other international instrument which safeguards the fundamental human rights of detainees.\textsuperscript{26} As a

In published statements, both the Secretary of Defense and other officials recently indicated the United States may hold the detainees under these conditions indefinitely. 27

III. REQUEST FOR PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES

Petitioners seek the urgent intervention of this Commission, in order to prevent continued unlawful acts by the United States that threaten the Guantanamo detainees’ rights under the ADRDM. Under Article 25 of its regulations, the Commission may intercede in “serious and urgent cases, and whenever necessary according to the information available. . . to prevent irreparable harm to persons.” This is such an urgent case.

A. The Geneva Convention Violations

The United States has repeatedly refused the entreaties of the international community to treat the detainees under the procedures established under the Geneva Conventions. Geneva III applies to the treatment and legal status of pows. The convention requires that persons captured during an international armed conflict are presumed to be pows until a competent tribunal determines otherwise. 28 Instead of following these procedures, which require individual determinations as to whether or not a combatant is a pow, the United States has simply decided en masse that none of the Taliban or al Qaeda detainees is a pow. This non-individualized 27 See, e.g Time Magazine, Welcome to Camp X-Ray, February 3, 2002. See: Appendix, Doc. 27 (p.104) Rumsfeld has laid out four options: a military trial, a trial in U.S. criminal courts, return to their home countries for prosecution, or continued detention “while additional intelligence is gathered.” A recent “knowledgeable source” stated that “It’s become clear that some of the al-Qaida detainees, even if they’re not convicted of anything, will have to remain in detention for quite some time.” Washington Post, February 13, 2002, Supra. n.19. determination made by United States’ officials is contrary to the procedures established by the clear commands of Geneva III.

As a result none of the detainees are receiving the protections afforded pows – protections to which they are entitled-- until the United States convenes a competent tribunal to determine their status.29 These include a prisoner’s right under Articles 70 and 71 of Geneva III to write directly to his family “informing his relatives of his capture, address and state of health” and to send and receive correspondence. Pows are also entitled to treatment and housing similar to that of U.S. soldiers, issuance of identity cards, protection from interrogation camps (which is what Guantanamo appears to be) and the use of coercion during interrogation. A pow also has the right to engage in hostilities without criminal penalty and valuable procedural protections in any prosecution for war crimes-- protections equivalent to those given to a U.S. soldier during a court-martial.30 As military commisions cannot try U.S. soldiers, neither can they try the detainees at Guantanamo.

B. Human Rights Violations Relating To the Arbitrary, Incommunicado, and Prolonged Detention of the Guantanamo Prisoners

As described above, the United States’ treatment of the Guantanamo detainees violates norms of international humanitarian law relating to the treatment of individuals detained during times of international armed conflict. United States’ actions violate international human rights norms as well. As this Commission has observed, the application of international humanitarian law does not “exclude or displace” the application of international human rights law, since both share a

29 Id. Article 5

“common nucleus of non-derogable rights and a common purpose of protecting human life and dignity.”

The United States’ detention of the Guantanamo prisoners is arbitrary. The prohibition against arbitrary detention is a norm of customary international law, and has the status of jus cogens. In determining what constitutes an “arbitrary” detention, this Commission should consider several factors, beginning with the text of Article XXV, which provides:

1. No person may be deprived of his liberty except in the cases and according to the procedures established by pre-existing law;
2. Each individual who has been deprived of his liberty has the right to have the legality of his detention ascertained without delay by a court; and
3. All detainees have the right to be tried without undue delay or released.

The provisions of Article XXV indicate the minimal procedural guarantees that must be followed. They are not, however, the exclusive source of international norms relating to this inquiry. In evaluating whether the incommunicado and prolonged detention of the Guantanamo prisoners violates international law, this Commission should also consider whether the United States has observed other norms of international law relating to pre-trial detention.

authorized by law, and be allowed access to a court that will decide without delay the lawfulness of their detentions, must also be considered. An individual’s detention is arbitrary if she or he is denied these procedural guarantees.

The United States’ treatment of the Guantanamo detainees violates virtually every human rights norm relating to preventive detention. As described in the statement of facts above the United States has denied the detainees access to counsel, consular representatives, and family members, has failed to notify them of the charges they are facing, has refused to allow for judicial review of the detentions, and has expressed its intent to hold the detainees indefinitely. Meanwhile, the United States has continued to interrogate the prisoners.

C. Violations Relating to Trial Before Military Commissions

The United States intends to subject certain detainees to trial before military commissions, in which they could face the death penalty. The commissions could begin processing cases at any time. Meanwhile, the detainees have been given no facilities to begin preparing their defense, and no court has reviewed the validity of their prolonged detention.

As noted above, the United States has cited the Military Order as justification for the detention of the Guantanamo prisoners. This same Order authorizes the trial by military commission for certain detainees. The military commissions authorized by the Order violate several established principles of international law, including Articles I, XVII, XVIII, XXV, and XXVI of the ADRDM.

First, the military commissions fail to provide minimal guarantees of due process. Instead, the commissions are designed to ensure swift convictions and possible death sentences based on secret evidence. Only the executive branch of the United States’ government would review the convictions and death sentences, with no right to judicial review, and no right to appeal. In short, trials before military commissions would be skewed in favor of the government, would fail to provide adequate due process protections, and would violate established canons of due process.

Second, the military commissions do not constitute “courts previously established in accordance with pre-existing laws” as required pursuant to Article XXVI of the ADRDM.

Finally, as this Commission is well aware, the United States has reserved the right to execute those convicted by the military commissions. There can be no question that capital proceedings before military commission would violate the most fundamental human rights of the detainees, including the right to life. Because of these myriad defects, petitioners are requesting that the Commission issue Precautionary Measures, directing the United States to refrain from subjecting any detainee to trial by military commission.

Based on these facts, petitioners have amply demonstrated the detainees will suffer irreparable harm, if this Commission fails to issue Precautionary Measures.

IV. PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES ARE NECESSARY TO AVERT “IRREPARABLE HARM”

Although Precautionary Measures are warranted when an individual’s liberty or her or his life is at risk, this Commission has also found Precautionary Measures justified where the rights at stake involve the protection of an individual’s property.34

In determining the meaning of “irreparable harm,” this Commission should take into consideration not only its previous decisions on Precautionary Measures but also the jurisprudence of the Inter-American Court on Human Rights on the grant of Provisional 34 Mary and Carrie Dann v. United States (Dann Band of the Western Shoshone Nation), Case 11.140, No. 99/99.

Precautionary Measures are warranted whenever a petitioner faces a serious threat to his or her physical, psychological or moral integrity. In the Loayza Tamayo case, the Court issued Provisional Measures to end solitary confinement and incommunicado detention imposed on a person who had been committed for the crime of terrorism against Peru.

Although “irreparable harm” may be shown by demonstrating the existence of a serious risk to life or personal integrity, neither the wording nor the spirit of Article 25 of the Commission’s Rules of Procedure require such a showing. To the contrary, the Court has held that an imminent risk to freedom of expression and democratic values can constitute “irreparable harm.”

35 Although the United States is not a party to the Convention, and thus Article 25 of the Rules of Procedure of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights applies rather than Article 63 of the Inter-American Convention on Human Rights, due to the similarity between these two provisions, jurisprudence interpreting Article 63(2) is relevant in interpreting the meaning of the term “irreparable harm.”

36 Article 63 of that Convention relevantly provides that: “In cases of extreme gravity and urgency, and when necessary to avoid irreparable damage to persons, the Court shall adopt such provisional measures as it deems pertinent in matters it has under consideration. With respect to a case not submitted to the Court, it may act at the request of the Commission.”

40 The La Nación Newspaper case, Provisional Measures, Inter-Am. Ct. H.R., May 23, 2001. In this case, the Court held that if a libel judgment was executed against a journalist, it might cause effects that could never be eliminated retroactively and/or cause unnecessary prolongation of a harmful situation. It also considered that these effects could include impingement on the journalist’s freedom of expression as well as the freedom of expression of Costa Rican society generally, that the petitioner’s name would be registered in the Judicial Register of Offenders, Restrictions on access to counsel and other impingements on due process rights can also constitute “irreparable harm.” Thus, in Manriquez v. Mexico, when the Mexican authorities denied a prisoner’s attorney access to her client because she refused to subject herself to a strip search, the Commission asked Mexico to adopt Precautionary Measures to allow the full exercise of the prisoner’s due process rights and judicial guarantees, including allowing his attorney to visit him to prepare his defense, to ensure confidentiality in attorney-client conversations and to afford his attorney dignified and non-discriminatory treatment.

In addition to their essentially preventive nature, the purpose of Provisional Measures is to provide effective protection for fundamental rights, inasmuch as they seek to avoid irreparable damage to persons. Thus, in the Ivcher Bronstein case, the Court ordered Provisional Measures to protect the petitioners’ physical, psychological and moral integrity, and preserve their right to due process. In that case, the Peruvian government stripped one of the petitioners of his naturalized Peruvian citizenship and divested him of his ownership of a television station ostensibly because that station had broadcast programs critical of influential government officials. The Court concluded that the damage one of the petitioners had sustained, in part due to the failure to accord due process, was of enormous magnitude, would be very difficult to redress in full and was being aggravated on a daily basis.

42 Provisional Measures, Inter-Am. Ct. H.R., November 23, 2000

43 See also Paniagua Morales case, Provisional Measures, Inter-Am. Ct. H.R., January 29, 2001 (provisional measures warranted because of risk to the life and personal safety of a witness).
When seeking Precautionary Measures, there is usually a need to identify individually the people who are in danger of suffering irreparable harm. \(^{44}\) This does not always have to be the case, however. In the Peace Community of San José de Apartadó case, the Court did not require that each individual be identified since they formed part of an organized community, located in a determined geographic place, whose members could be identified and individualized and who, due to their membership in the community, faced a similar risk of suffering acts of aggression against their personal integrity and lives. Thus, the community could be dealt with collectively. In the present case, the Guantanamo detainees are located in a determined geographic place and, by virtue of their detention their identities are known to the United States. In addition, they are all in a situation of similar risk of continuing injury to their fundamental rights. Precautionary Measures may therefore be issued for them as a group. This is especially important given the continuing refusal of the United States to release the names and nationalities of the detainees.

The Guantanamo detainees will suffer irreparable harm if the Precautionary Measures requested are not ordered. The requested Measures are directed and narrowly tailored toward the avoidance of that harm. Among other things, the United States is failing to provide access to any judicial procedures to determine the legality of their continued detention and is taking advantage of the detainees’ isolation from legal counsel, family, and consular representatives to subject them to prolonged interrogations.

The facts set forth in this Request for Precautionary Measures establish prima facie violations of Articles I, XVII, XVIII, XXV and XXVI of the ADRDM and the risk of irreparable harm.

V. THE COMMISSION SHOULD TAKE PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES TO ASSIST THE GUANTANAMO DETAINEES

Petitioners respectfully seek the Commission’s intervention and the issuance of the following Precautionary Measures, requesting that the United States’ government:

1. Adopt those measures necessary to protect the right to personal integrity and fair trial of the detainees at Guantanamo.

2. Treat each detainee as a pow until any doubt regarding such status is determined by a competent tribunal pursuant to Article 5 of Geneva III, as mandated by pre-existing law, including international humanitarian law.

3. Afford each detainee the right and liberties guaranteed by the ADRDM as mandated by pre-existing law, including international humanitarian law. These guarantees should include the following:
   a. Notification in writing of the charges faced by each detainee;
   b. Access to legal counsel, and confidentiality of attorney-client communications;
   c. Access to judicial review of those determinations affecting their rights and status.

4. Identify the detainees by name, nationality, and address, where known.

5. Notify all detainees of their rights under Article 36 of the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations, and grant them access to consular representatives.

6. Suspend the interrogation of the detainees until the rights of the detainees are fully guaranteed.
7. Stay any proceeding before military commissions, pending resolution of the prisoners’ status and until such commissions comply with pre-existing law and due process.

8. Permit the Commission to conduct an on-site investigation, through a Special Commission named under Articles 40 and 51-55 of its Regulations.

9. Petitioners further urge this Commission to find that any order of Precautionary Measures is binding on the United States. See: LaGrand Case (Germany v. United States), 2001 ICJ 104, (Judgment) paras. 109, 128(5).

RE: PETITIONERS’ SUBMISSION FOR OCTOBER 20, 2005, HEARING REGARDING REQUEST TO EXPAND PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES NO. 259

Dear Mr. Canton:

Petitioners submit these observations for the October 20, 2005, hearing regarding Precautionary Measures No. 259, in which Petitioners will update the Commission since our February 22, 2005 submission, and seek to extend Precautionary Measures No. 259 to prevent the United States Government from transferring Guantánamo detainees to countries where they are likely to be tortured, and from continuing to violate the detainees’ essential religious rights and rights to adequate medical care, especially with regard to the detainees’ ongoing hunger strike. Petitioners also further update the Commission on the status of the military tribunals and the habeas corpus petitions, including the Government’s continued denial of and interference with the detainees’ rights to counsel. Petitioners regret that we are required to once again seek an extension of Precautionary Measures No. 259,¹ which the U.S. Government has refused to comply with, but the situation at Guantánamo grows increasingly dire.

I. Introduction

More than four years since September 11, 2001, the United States continues to detain over 500 men at Guantánamo without having properly determined their legal status or trying any of them for a crime. Despite the tremendous obstacles, approximately 280 of those men have obtained counsel to represent them on habeas corpus petitions in the United States District Court

to challenge their detentions, but the substance of their claims has yet to be heard by any court. Since the U.S. Supreme Court’s decision in Rasul v. Bush confirming that Guantánamo detainees can challenge their detentions in U.S. courts, the U.S. Government continues to argue that the detainees have no rights, domestic or international, to be enforced. On September 8, 2005, the United States Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit heard argument regarding whether the detainees have common-law rights to challenge their detention, due process rights under the U.S. Constitution (because they are non-citizens held at a base on Cuba), or rights under international law, including the Geneva Conventions. The Appellate Court has not yet issued a decision, and a petition for review by the Supreme Court is expected regardless of the outcome. As Petitioners noted in their February 2005 submission, the Government’s refusal to address the merits of the Guantánamo detainees’ claims through delaying the habeas petitions, which were originally brought in 2002, is tantamount to denying them any remedy at all.

While private habeas counsel is currently representing over 225 detainees, an additional 54 detainees have pro se petitions on file in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. Pro se petitions were filed, at a lengthy delay, when detainees in Guantánamo wrote directly to the Court seeking representation and due process rights. On October 14, 2005, the Court appointed the Federal Public Defender offices to represent these pro se petitioners. In one case, petitioner wrote a handwritten note to the Court on February 22, 2005 seeking to challenge his detention, yet his pro se petition was not filed and docketed until June 22, 2005, and now that counsel is appointed he will have awaited for representation for nearly eight months from the time he first wrote to the Court.

Even though these represented detainees are supposed to have access to their counsel, such access has been interfered with in numerous ways, as discussed below in Section II. Meanwhile there are still approximately 270 detainees who have been completely denied any right to access counsel because no one except the Government knows who they are. CCR brought a habeas petition on behalf of these unknown, unrepresented detainees being held incommunicado, but that case has been stayed pending resolution of the habeas appeal described above.

The Combatant Status Review Tribunals set up to determine whether detainees were enemy combatants have now been completed, and have ruled that 558 of the 596 detainees are enemy combatants not entitled to prisoner-of-war protections. The Military Commissions trying some detainees are scheduled to proceed following the lifting of a court-ordered stay, and the Government has implemented procedural changes in the commissions, none of which address Petitioners’ concerns. See Section III, below.

2 The Center for Constitutional Rights (CCR) is coordinating all of the habeas representation for the Guantánamo detainees, and is co-counsel on many of the petitions. See Petitioners’ February 22, 2005, submission, pp. 3-4 for a more detailed discussion of the lower court rulings.

4 The Government continues to argue it has the power to seize individuals and send them to Guantánamo for unreviewable detention, claiming that it could do so without giving the detainees any due process at all, even going so far as to claim that the much belated Combatant Status Review Tribunal (CSRT) proceedings determining whether they were enemy combatants were unnecessary.

Almost 250 detainees once held at Guantánamo have been transferred to other countries, including Egypt, Iran, Yemen, and Tajikistan. Upon news that the Government was planning on transferring potentially hundreds of detainees from Guantánamo, habeas counsel have been seeking temporary restraining orders from the courts requiring 30 days notice of a transfer to try to ensure that detainees will not be sent to countries for torture or indefinite imprisonment without due process. Habeas counsel generally requested advance notice to be able to contest any such removal from Guantánamo and preserve the jurisdiction of the Court. Not all of these motions have been granted, so that at least approximately 300 detainees remain without any judicial protection from being sent to countries where they will likely be tortured. See Section IV.

To protest their indefinite detention and mistreatment, the Guantánamo detainees have engaged in widespread and often life-threatening hunger strikes, including one that began on August 8, 2005 and is still ongoing. The Red Cross reported that 200 detainees were participating as of October 7, 2005, and that twenty-one participants were being force fed through nasal tubes. The hunger strikes and the Government’s failure to provide effective medical care are discussed below, at Section V.

Finally, the Commission is well aware of the widespread reports of torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment at U.S. detention facilities around the world, including at Guantánamo, as discussed in Petitioners’ February 2005 submission. In July 2005, documents were released revealing that the Pentagon continues to conceal its use of torture against Guantánamo detainees. Just recently, President Bush threatened to veto a bill passed by the United States Senate banning cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment of prisoners held by the military, saying it would bind the President's hands in wartime. The Bush administration continues to block a true investigation of the abuse, torture and murder of people held by the U.S. at Guantánamo, Abu Ghraib and other detention camps around the world.

The devastating long-term psychological effects of the detainees’ indefinite detention, torture, and other mistreatment have been recently documented. Physicians for Human Rights has documented these effects, often referred to as post-traumatic stress disorder, which include “depression, thoughts of suicide and nightmares, memory loss, emotional problems” and “incoherent speech, disorientation, hallucination, irritability, anger, delusions, and sometimes paranoia.” A former Guantánamo chaplain also recently noted the regressive behaviors of detainees as a result of being “so traumatized by prolonged stress” that they lost their “sense of themselves and revert[ed] to the mindset of a child”: detainees responded in child-like voices, talked complete nonsense, and acted out childishly while standing atop their beds.\footnote{For God and Country: Faith and Patriotism Under Fire, 2005, a passage read by Juan Gonzalez during a radio interview on Democracy Now!, October 6, 2005, available at: http://www.democracynow.org/print.pl?sid=05/10/06/1316240.}

The Government also regularly violates the Muslim detainees’ religious rights under Article III of the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man (American Declaration). Moreover, it fails to recognize these violations as “abuse” and therefore fails to punish perpetrators of religious discrimination. Petitioners request that the Commission expand the scope of Precautionary Measures No. 259 against the Government to prevent the Government from continuing to violate its detainees’ essential religious rights, particularly in the context of interrogations and approved interrogation techniques. See Section VI.

II. Denial of and Interference with Access to Counsel

In addition to the fact that approximately 225 detainees still have no access to counsel at all, various barriers to accessing legal counsel remain for the approximately 275 detainees who do have representation.

a. Interference with Attorney-Client Relationship

The U.S. military interferes on multiple levels with the Guantánamo detainees’ right to a confidential attorney-client relationship, the first of which is to diminish trust between the detainee and counsel. Interrogators have told detainees that those who seek or retain a lawyer will not be released and that the lawyers are liars and cannot be trusted.\footnote{Charlie Savage, Guantanamo Detainees Find Fault with Lawyers: Inmate Frustration Breeds Mistrust, Boston Globe, Aug. 10, 2005. Available at: http://www.boston.com/news/nation/washington/articles/2005/08/10/guantanamo_detainees_find_fault_with_lawyers/.} Interrogators have also told detainees that their lawyers are Jewish and therefore will not act in their client’s best interest.\footnote{Declaration of Clive A. Stafford Smith (“Smith Declaration”), ¶ 104, Sept. 12, 2005, submitted in Sadar Doe v. Bush, Petitioners’ opposition to respondents’ motion to show cause why case should not be dismissed for lack of proper “next friend” standing and opposition to motion to stay proceedings, Civil Action No. 05-CV-1704-JR (D.D.C. Sept. 12, 2005); Charlie Savage, Guantanamo Detainees Find Fault with Lawyers: Inmate Frustration Breeds Mistrust, Boston Globe, Aug. 10, 2005. Available at: http://www.boston.com/news/nation/washington/articles/2005/08/10/guantanamo_detainees_find_fault_with_lawyers/.} Interrogators have even gone so far as to impersonate lawyers in order to interview detainees, only to reveal their true identity to detainees later.\footnote{Savage, Aug. 10, 2005.} All of these tactics foster distrust among detainees towards their attorneys.

In October 2004, a U.S. Federal District court ordered the Government to cease its monitoring of meetings between detainees and their lawyers—both real time monitoring and review of attorney notes—finding that it “inappropriately burden[ed]” the attorney-client
Although the court’s ruling was specific to the case of the Kuwaiti Detainee Petitioners, the Government’s practice of monitoring attorney-client meetings was deemed impermissible. However, while the government has officially ceased monitoring of attorney-client conversations since the court’s ruling, reports from detainees reveal that the Government continues informal monitoring of such communications. Interrogators make comments to detainees after meetings that include information discussed with their lawyers. In addition, interrogation of detainees after meetings include probing into what was discussed with their lawyers; detainees report that the more information they gave to their lawyer, the more abuse they suffered.

The military also imposes harsh restrictions on detainees’ communication with their lawyers. The government prohibits phone calls to detainees; in order to see their lawyers the detainees must obtain special written authorization, and these meetings are subject to strict time limits. The military has also frequently punished detainees for receiving attorney visits, placing detainees in solitary confinement several days before and after a visit by their lawyer. Finally, the government has also prevented the prompt receipt of mail from detainees, sometimes delaying correspondence to lawyers for months.

The aforementioned examples of the Government’s deceitful and restrictive tactics used to erode trust and undermine detainees’ communication with counsel elucidate the need for expanded precautionary measures to ensure confidential attorney-client communications as previously requested in Petitioner’s February 2005 submission.

b. Denial of Access to Counsel

In many cases, the U.S. military has actively prevented or deterred detainees’ access to counsel. In the case of Saadiq Doe, the government refused to provide information or access to his lawyer, despite knowing that Saadiq had counsel with whom he wanted to meet, had been determined to be a non-enemy combatant, and despite receiving several specific requests for meetings from his lawyer. In Al Odah, a lawyer was denied access to his clients who had been hospitalized as a result of a hunger strike. Although the military finally allowed counsel to meet the detainees, the military forcibly brought the detainees from the hospital in an inhumane manner rather than allow the lawyer to visit them in the hospital. The Government failed to inform the detainees’ counsel of their clients’ life-threatening condition, and to this day refuses to provide counsel with the medical records of the detainees.\textsuperscript{25}

Despite having blocked all reasonable forms of obtaining legal representation, the government has also challenged the legality of certain forms of “next-friend” habeas corpus petitions. The government has argued that the court has no jurisdiction unless it can be demonstrated that petitioner himself cannot file the petition on his own behalf, and that the “friend” has a significant relationship with petitioner, such as a parent or spouse.\textsuperscript{26} This would prevent a fellow prisoner from serving as a “next friend” in order to obtain a lawyer for an unnamed detainee—a method by which a large number of Doe detainees have obtained access to a lawyer, and for some the only method by which to obtain representation.

c. Other restrictions on access to counsel

The Government denies the detainees Arabic-English dictionaries, without which they cannot understand court filings and government notices, and thus cannot competently defend themselves.\textsuperscript{27} To make matters worse, counsel’s requests for security clearance forms for experts have been repeatedly denied, making it impossible for the experts to evaluate classified information regarding the detainee’s determination as an “enemy combatant.”\textsuperscript{28} The Government has also denied the use of either of two expeditious methods approved by the Defense Department for the transmission of presumptively classified counsel notes from Guantánamo, delaying by several weeks or a month counsel’s receipt of such mail. Finally, the government has denied counsel access to the internet while in Guantánamo, despite making such services available to the press.\textsuperscript{29} The multiple methods by which the government has interfered with detainees’ access to counsel seriously undermines their ability to receive competent representation. The government has failed to provide legitimate reasons for such destructive barriers.

III. Update on the Military Tribunals

Petitioners detailed in their February 22, 2005, submission to the Commission the many ways in which the different military tribunals at Guantánamo violate the detainees’ rights. The Combatant Status Review Tribunals (CSRTs) established to determine whether detainees were enemy combatants have now been completed, and have ruled that all but 38 of 596 detainees are enemy combatants not entitled to prisoner-of-war protections.\textsuperscript{30} Several of the 38 men determined to no longer be enemy combatants since March 29, 2005, are still being held at Guantánamo purportedly because the Government does not know where to send them. The Annual Review Boards (ARBs), an annual proceeding following each detainee’s CSRT determination conducted to evaluate the detainees’ “dangerousness”, and whether to release, transfer or continue to detain them. There have been 309 ARB proceedings thus far, through which only 8 people have been released, 55 have been transferred, and decisions to continue to detain were made for 111 of the detainees, leaving 135 awaiting determination.

The military commissions, the only tribunals that will actually “try” the detainees for any “offense”, had been temporarily stayed by a federal district court upon a challenge by one of the men identified to go before them. Only four Guantánamo detainees have been charged and are therefore currently scheduled to be tried by the military commissions, and apparently charges are being prepared against eight other detainees. On July 15, 2005, the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the lower court, deciding that it did not have the power to rule on much of the case, because many of the detainee’s claims could be raised on appeal if and when he is convicted, and because the Geneva Conventions do not create privately enforceable rights. The Court went on to decide, gratuitously, that the Geneva Conventions do not apply to the detainee in question or any member of al-Qaeda. Review of the decision has been sought in the Supreme Court, which has not yet issued a decision on whether it will hear the case. Meanwhile, the military commissions are scheduled to resume the week of November 17, 2005.

The Government has claimed that it has unsuccessfully tried numerous countries for the Uighurs, but attempts by habeas counsel to work with the Government to secure a place for these individuals were rejected outright, and collaboration does not appear to be possible.

36 The Court of Appeals’ opinion was joined in full by then-Judge John Roberts, now Supreme Court Chief Justice Roberts. Subsequently, the Court refused to allow another detainee to intervene to challenge the validity of the decision because Judge Roberts participated in making the ruling during the time he was meeting with Bush Administration officials about a possible nomination to the Supreme Court. On August 31, 2005, Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld approved changes to “improve military commission procedures.” None of these changes resolve Petitioners’ original complaints regarding the military commissions. First, commission officers still have discretion to exclude a detainee from his own commission proceeding. Second, Military Commissions still reserve the right to withhold information or evidence from the detainees and their civilian defense counsel. While now the presiding officer must exclude protected information from trial if the admission of such evidence “would result in the denial a full and fair trial,” the military commission, not an independent judicial body, determines in each case what “full and fair” trial means. The detainees therefore remain vulnerable to being charged and convicted with evidence to which they have no access. Additionally, charges and convictions under the commissions may still be supported by evidence the Government has acquired through the application of torture or cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment. Third, the detainees still lack access to meaningful judicial review. As the case was before, only Executive panels or personnel (including the Secretary of Defense and the President) review the commissions’ decisions. A detainee never has access to an independent civilian court. Finally, the commissions may still try a detainee for offenses not recognized under international law, and could implement terms so broad that no individual would be able to ascertain from them proscribed behavior.

Besides failing to resolve the military commissions’ original faults, the new commission rules present new problems. For example, the Government now reserves the right to monitor communications between detainees and their defense counsel (military or civilian). This rule effectively destroys attorney-client confidentiality and privilege, and will likely inhibit detainees from fully participating in their own defenses. Another new, problematic rule is that both the Presiding Officer and commission members may be present for evidentiary hearings. Consequently, debates over evidence that result in a ruling of inadmissibility will take place before commission members who are subsequently intended not to have seen or heard that evidence. To further the absurdity: if the commission disagrees with a Presiding Officer’s ruling regarding the admissibility of that evidence, the Presiding Officer then joins the commission to vote on whether his decision should be overturned.

41 Petitioners’ Observations to U.S. Government’s 2004 Response, February 22nd, 2005 (arguing that the Government’s military commission procedures violated the detainees’ due process rights on five grounds. First, commission officers had the discretion to exclude a detainee from his own commission proceeding. Second, detainees could be convicted by evidence to which they had no access. Third, the Executive ultimately determined the outcome of each trial. Fourth, the commissions could try a detainee for an offense not recognized or valid under international law. Fifth, the commissions could implement terms so broad that no individual would be able to understand and anticipate proscribed behavior.)

Ultimately, the military commissions remain a charade; this is confirmed by Section 10 of the Military Commission Order which explicitly states that the order does not create any enforceable rights or privileges, whether substantive or procedural. The detainees, trapped by Executive fiat, have yet to be granted due process.

IV. Transfers to Countries Where Detainees Are Likely to Suffer Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment

In Petitioners’ February 13, 2003, request to the Commission, we discussed the Government’s practice of “rendering” persons under its control to countries where it is aware torture occurs, in violation of Articles I, XXV, XXVI and XXVII of the American Declaration as well as Article 3 of the U.N. Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment (CAT). Since that submission, more light has been shed on this U.S. practice of refoulement, or the “extraordinary rendition” of individuals to countries and under circumstances in which the Government must know that detainees will be tortured, or at least that they will likely be held without charges, and interrogated through torture. U.S. officials pick up people in foreign countries, including Sweden, Germany, and Italy, and take them to other countries known to torture suspects, like Egypt, Jordan, Syria, Saudi Arabia, and Afghanistan. Some have then ended up at Guantánamo. It is not publicly known how many people the Government has rendered to be tortured, although estimates range from 150 to the thousands.

The Government claims that 247 detainees have already been released from detainees Guantánamo. As pressure to close the facility mounts, and as the detainees’ habeas petitions slowly make their way back up to the Supreme Court, the use of extra-legal and illegal transfers 53 Department of Defense Press Release, 10/01/2005, available at http://www.defenselink.mil/releases/2005/nr20051001-4826.html. DoD has transferred or released 246 detainees from Guantánamo - 178 for release, and 68 transferred to other governments (29 to Pakistan, five to Morocco, seven to France, seven to Russia, four to Saudi Arabia, two to Spain, one to Sweden, one to Kuwait, one to Australia, nine to Great Britain and two to Belgium). There are approximately 505 detainees currently at Guantánamo.

from Guantánamo is likely to increase. In March 2005, U.S. officials announced that they were intending to transfer most of the 110 Afghan nationals in Guantánamo to Kabul’s exclusive control.

Two months ago, the United States government announced that it had commenced negotiating agreements for the transfer of Guantánamo detainees to ten Muslim countries. The terms of the agreements have not yet been made public, however a draft of one such agreement that was provided to a news agency, CNN, indicated that the United States would seek a commitment from each of these countries to: treat detainees “humanely and in a manner consistent with applicable international obligations”; refrain from torture; allow the United States or a third party such as the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) access to the detainees to ‘verify the assurances’; “investigate, detain and prosecute” the detainee to the fullest extent possible; and provide the United States with “advance notice” and place the detainee on “watch lists” should a country decide to release a detainee. Despite these potential agreements, great concern remains that many of those transferred will be subjected to indefinite detention without trial, torture and other abuse. In fact, the three or four countries to which the majority of the detainees will be transferred – Saudi Arabia, Yemen, and Afghanistan – have deplorable human rights records, a fact documented by the U.S. government’s own State Department Country Reports for many years.

It is thought that similar agreements are being pursued with Saudi Arabia and Yemen; there are purportedly approximately 121 Saudis and over 100 Yemeni detainees at Guantánamo. The U.S. State Department reports that the Saudi Arabia Government’s human rights record is poor, and that security forces torture and abuse prisoners. There have also been credible reports of torture in Yemeni prisons, including beating with cudgels and immersing in water. One Yemeni national, Walid al-Qadasi, was returned to Yemen from Guantánamo in April 2004, and alleges that he was drugged prior to and during the transfer. More than a year later he was still being held in the Political Security Prison at Sana’a, without charge, although a lawyer was finally allowed to meet with him in June 2005. The head of the Political Security Prison reported that al-Qadasi and other Yemeni prisoners were being held at the behest of the U.S. government and would remain in detention in Yemen until the U.S. provided information on them, whereupon they would be investigated further.

Recently, habeas counsel for some of the represented detainees have obtained preliminary injunctions prohibiting the Government from removing them from Guantánamo without first giving both counsel and the court 30 days notice of the intended transfer. Some of these petitions are pending, some have been denied, and the unrepresented detainees also have no protection, leaving at least approximately 300 detainees without any judicial protection from illegal transfers. This month, a wheelchair-bound Egyptian detainee, Sami al-Laithi, who had a petition for injunctive relief pending, was transferred to Egypt, a country known to torture detainees. He was transferred months after he was cleared of being an enemy combatant, without any notice being given to his lawyer.

The Government claims that prior to a transfer from Guantánamo it makes a determination as to whether it is more likely than not that a detainee will be tortured. There is no evidence, however, that the detainees are consulted before the decision is made, or permitted to challenge it afterwards. The U.S. Government also claims to get “diplomatic assurances” from the foreign government that the detainees will not be tortured - but these are obviously ineffective, as they are unenforceable and not monitored. Moreover, the process of obtaining diplomatic assurances is not open to public scrutiny, so it is not possible to verify the Government’s claim. Even Attorney General Alberto Gonzales has admitted that the U.S. cannot control what countries do someone once they have them, and that he didn't know if countries actually comply with diplomatic assurances. There is also no opportunity for potential transferees to challenge the credibility or reliability of these assurances before an independent judicial body, and there is no requirement for the Government to take the past human rights history of the country into account.

66 The U.N. Special Rapporteur on Torture reported to the U.N. In addition to the rights protected under the American Declaration, the U.S. is party to several international treaties which prohibit both the use of torture and the transfer of individuals to countries where they are in danger or at risk of torture. Article 3 of the U.N. Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment (CAT) prohibits refoulement where there is a “substantial likelihood” that an individual “may be in danger of” torture.\(^69\) Article 7 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR) prohibits refoulement where individuals may be “at risk” of either torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment.\(^70\) The Refugee Convention affords protection against refoulement to individuals with a “well-founded fear of persecution”.\(^71\) Transfers must also take into account the principle of non-refoulement as reflected in Article 13 of the Inter-American Convention to Prevent and Punish Torture, which prohibits extradition of an individual where his life is in danger, there is reason to believe that he may be subject to torture or CID, or tried by special or ad hoc courts.\(^72\) Article 22(8) of the American Convention on Human Rights provides that no person may be returned to any country, even their country of origin if in that country there is a danger that his right to life or personal freedom is in danger of being violated because of his race, nationality, religion, social status or political opinions.\(^73\)

In situations of armed conflict, both international human rights law and humanitarian law apply.\(^74\) A person captured in the zone of military hostilities “must have some status under international law; he is either a prisoner of war and, as such, covered by the Third Convention, [or] a civilian covered by the Fourth Convention….There is no intermediate status; nobody in enemy hands can be outside the law.”\(^75\) Although the state is obligated to repatriate Prisoners of War as soon as hostilities cease,\(^76\) the ICRC’s commentary on the 1949 Conventions states that prisoners should not be repatriated where there are serious reasons for fearing that repatriating the individual would be contrary to general principles of established international law for the protection of human beings. Thus, the Guantánamo detainees are protected by international human rights protections and humanitarian law.

Another problem highlighted by the Government’s Extraordinary Renditions Policy is its practice of secrecy in the name of protecting national security and foreign relations. Not only are the renditions conducted secretly and completely outside of the law, but the Government is also using secrecy to prevent judicial review of the policy and claims for compensation. Canadian citizen Maher Arar sued U.S. Government officials for detaining him in New York on his way home to Canada, interfering with his access to counsel and the courts, and sending him to Syria where he was tortured and detained for nearly a year. The U.S. Government has argued that the bulk of Mr. Arar's case, which essentially challenges the Government’s Extraordinary Renditions practice, cannot be litigated because the reason he was sent to Syria instead of Canada is a state secret, which if disclosed would harm national security and foreign relations. If the Court accepts the Government's position, not only would the Government's practice of sending people to countries to be detained, interrogated and tortured be beyond judicial review, but so could any of the Government's illegal acts done in the name of “national security”. Even the issue of whether diplomatic assurances were obtained can be deemed a “state secret”. This restriction on information by the Government serves no legitimate purpose in violation of the Commission’s Recommendations in its Report on Terrorism and Human Rights.

V. Hunger Strikes at Guantánamo Bay

The Guantánamo detainees have engaged in several widespread, serious and often life-threatening hunger strikes. As of October 7, 2005, the Red Cross reported that 200 detainees were participating in a hunger strike. Twenty-one of those participants are in the hospital and are being force fed through nasal tubes. The hunger strike is well into its second month and the U.S. military’s ability to effectively end the strike without subjecting the detainees to further harm or indignity is in serious doubt.

The prevalence of hunger strikes in prisons is primarily because prisoners do not have other means of protest. In the past, the Commission has requested a government to adopt requires parties to “endeavour, upon the close of hostilities or occupation, to ensure the return of all internees to their last place of residence, or to facilitate their repatriation. Fourth Geneva Convention, supra note 15, Art. 134. Thus, repatriation of detainees upon cessation of hostilities is mandated by the Geneva Conventions.

precautionary measures to protect a petitioner who was participating in a hunger strike. Most recently, the Commission asked the government of Haiti to take urgent measures to guarantee the life and physical integrity of a detainee on hunger strike. The United States Military, in its management of detainees on hunger strike at Guantánamo Bay, has proven itself to be incapable of effective and just treatment.

a. June-July 2005 Hunger Strike

The current wave of hunger strikes began in June 2005 with a brief respite in late July. It began again in early August after the military broke its promises to the detainees. According to statements by Omar Deghayes, a British detainee in Guantánamo, the hunger strike started on June 21, 2005. However, the strike was not publicized until July 20, 2005 when it was announced by two Afghan citizens who had recently been released from Guantánamo. The men stated that about 180 prisoners had been on a hunger strike for two weeks. At first, the Pentagon denied being aware of the strike and when it finally acknowledged the strike it stated that only 52 detainees had been participating for a week.

The hunger strike reportedly called for starvation until death or until the detainees’ demands were met. The prisoners demanded: respect of religion, fair trials and proper legal representation, proper food and clean water, sunlight, contact with families, abandonment of the “level system” by which prisoners are treated differently depending on the color of their jumpsuits, a neutral body to oversee the conditions at Guantánamo, and effective medical treatment.

The DOD’s method of dealing with the hunger strike was first to ignore and deny it, second to admit it but to assert that it was more limited than in fact it was, and third to force feed those detainees whose physical health was threatened. Reportedly, men who refused food for 20 days were placed on intravenous drips. At least 50 detainees were force fed during the June-July hunger strike. Prisoners were vomiting blood, collapsing in their cells, and falling unconscious.

The June-July hunger strike led the DOD to make several promises to the detainees, including a representation committee for the prisoners. Apparently, because of the committee’s work, the detainees were given bottled water with each meal and promised that the “level system” would end. The prisoners decided to end the strike on July 28th when the Government promised them that within 10 days the prison would be brought to Geneva Convention’s standards. The DOD did not keep its promises to the detainees and has since stated that a committee did not exist and that the camp was already complying with the Geneva Conventions.

b. The August-October 2005 Hunger Strike

After the detainees realized their demands had not been met and that they had been tricked into ending the strike, they began another strike on August 8, 2005. News of the current strike came when a lawyer representing detainees released a statement by one of his clients: “They have betrayed our trust. I do not plan to stop until I either die or we are respected.” The Government denied the existence of the hunger strikes until two weeks after it had started. Since acknowledging the hunger strike, it has downplayed the number of detainees involved and the gravity of the situation. In late August, the military spokesperson called this hunger strike a “fast” and stated that the Government was monitoring some detainees who missed nine meals over a 72-hour period. On September 2, the DOD claimed that there were only 76 detainees on strike with only nine hospitalized. Only a week later, Major Jeff Weir stated that there were 89 prisoners on a hunger strike with 15 hospitalized, of whom 13 were being fed through tubes.

According to Amnesty International, 210 people were taking part in the hunger strike while the government had put the numbers as low as 36. Unrecognized participation in a hunger strike could mean that detainees are not receiving adequate medical care or attention. Amnesty International also declared that several of the detainees on strike were critically ill. By the end of September, a month and a half into the strike, the detainees were reported to be reduced to “skeletal status” and were “being force fed” to stay alive. Lawyers who went to see the detainees were denied access to their clients who had been hospitalized and could not assess the health and status of their clients. At the time, 128 detainees were reportedly participating in the hunger strike with 18 whose conditions were so critical that they were hospitalized and force fed.\textsuperscript{107}

The situation is so dire that lawyers for several detainees have asked federal judges to intervene and help end the hunger strike. The petitioners argued that detainees were given poor medical treatment or denied treatment altogether during the hunger strike.\textsuperscript{108} The Court relied on U.S. Army Major General Jay W. Hood’s statement that the military would “prevent unnecessary loss of life by the detainees through standard medical intervention, including involuntary medical intervention,” as proof that the detainees were given adequate medical attention and denied the petitioner’s request for preliminary injunction.\textsuperscript{109} However, the Court did not question the quality and medical soundness of the Army’s method of “medical intervention.”\textsuperscript{110} As demonstrated above, the Army’s method of “medical intervention” has been to force feed detainees who are hospitalized.

At the same time as these requests, a military spokesperson stated that within a week, the number of strikers had dropped from 128 to 36. The spokesperson did not give an adequate reason for the sharp decline. Lawyers for the detainees contend that the military has repeatedly “concealed and misrepresented facts about the hunger strike and the detainees’ medical condition.”\textsuperscript{111} According to lawyers, one detainee was “skin and bones and looked like one of the victims of starvation in the Sudan” with feeding tubes dangling from his nose.\textsuperscript{112} The other detainee could not even maintain his balance without a walker. He had to have six soldiers assist him to a chair so he could be interviewed by his attorney. Another detainee had not eaten for fifteen days when his lawyer saw him, but the government had not included him in the list of hunger strikers or given him medical attention.\textsuperscript{113}

Of particular concern was Fawzi Al Odah who was “emaciated” and bleeding from his nostrils where large feeding tubes dangled. The detainee claimed that the doctors had inserted the tubes without an anesthetic, which caused him “such pain that the nurses had to avert their eyes.” He also stated that he suffers constant vomiting and diarrhea from the force feedings.\textsuperscript{114} Other lawyers have described their clients as looking “gaunt and unwell” and fear that the conditions have deteriorated further.\textsuperscript{115} Even more recently, an emergency hearing was held at the United Stated District Court regarding the condition and treatment of striking detainees.\textsuperscript{116} The DOD still did not reveal the names of detainees being force fed and lawyers for CCR expressed concern that men would definitely die. The Court gave the United States until October 19, 2005 to respond.

c. The Government’s Failure to Provide Effective Medical Care to the Detainees

The United States government, through its spokesperson, has stated that it would not allow the detainees to die. In late September, the DOD said its “policy is to preserve the life of detainees. Detailed policy and procedures are in place to avert death from fasting and from failure to drink. The health status of detainees who are voluntary fasting is closely monitored.” It is apparent from its practices that the DOD’s method of keeping the detainees alive is to feed them against their will through nasal tubes rather than to provide the detainees with religious counseling or family access to persuade them to cease their strike. Lawyers for the detainees have also stated that the medical personnel at Guantanamo are perpetuating the detainees’ physical and mental anguish through medical mistreatment during the force-feeding. The DOD has repeatedly tried to persuade the detainees to sign waiver forms which would allow it to intravenously feed the detainees if they were to go on a hunger strike, but the detainees have refused to sign the forms. Senior U.S. officials have anonymously expressed concern over their ability to cope with the current hunger strike and have gone against the official statements of the military, stating that the situation is greatly troublesome and that they have tried several methods to end the strike without success.

The World Medical Association has also passed two declarations that address physician’s duties to striking prisoners. Of particular relevance is the Malta Declaration which states that a physician must notify the family of a hunger strike of the prisoner's participation in the protest. Complaints have already been made by the detainees and their lawyers that the DOD has refused to reveal even the names of those detainees who are hospitalized, much less the identities of those participating in the strike. Fundamentally, the hunger strikers should be given a fair hearing rather than be allowed to suffer from potentially permanent physical and mental problems or ultimately death as a result of the strike. Finally, the conditions of the striking detainees, as demonstrated above, show the inhumane actions of the military in its attempts to keep detainees alive and to keep lawyers from finding out the degree of the problem.

The proper method of dealing with this strike is not force-feeding but hearing and honestly responding to the detainee grievances and complying with international standards.

122 CRC Report at 12.

The United States Government regularly violates Guantánamo detainees’ religious rights. Article III of the American Declaration states that “every person has the right freely to profess a religious faith, and to manifest and practice it both in public and in private.”¹²⁵ Article XX of The Statute of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights states that the Commission must “pay particular attention to the observance of the human rights referred to in Article[...].”¹²⁶ The American Declaration’s preamble explains, in part, why religious freedom is so “essential”: legal duties presuppose moral duties, which express and derive from spirituality and spiritual development.¹²⁷

The Inter-American Convention Against Terrorism (IACT) reaffirms that the “fight against terrorism” in the Americas must respect both international law and human rights.¹²⁸ In particular, Article 15 of the IACT demands that “the measures carried out by the states parties under this Convention shall take place with full respect for the rule of law, human rights, and fundamental freedoms.”¹²⁹ The Inter-American human rights system’s jurisprudence also recognizes that “the international human rights law applies at all times, in peacetime and in situations of armed conflict.”¹³⁰ Specifically, both the Inter-American Court and Commission may consider international humanitarian law to interpret the human rights obligations created by the American Declaration.¹³¹ In its Report on Terrorism and Human Rights, the Commission explains that this approach is “mandated by the international instruments to which states are legally bound, including the [American Declaration].”¹³²

The United States Government asserts that it respects the religious rights of the Guantánamo detainees.¹³³ But the Government’s actions belie its claims. First, US military personnel frequently violate the religious rights the Government claims to offer its Muslim detainees. Second, the Government created and executes an interrogation policy that attacks precisely the religious freedoms Article III is meant to protect. Third, the Government fails to recognize religious discrimination as abuse and consequently fails to punish the individuals who perpetrate it. Consequently, the Government has caused and continues to cause irreparable moral injury to its Muslim detainees.

a. United States Military Personnel Frequently Violate the Religious Rights the Government Claims to Offer the Guantánamo Detainees.

United States military personnel frequently violate the religious rights the Government claims to offer its detainees. For example, while the Government claims to provide Muslim detainees with Qur’ans, detainees, former detainees, and government officials have reported numerous incidences in which military personnel have kicked, thrown or stomped on those holy books; hosed them with water; written obscenities in them; or simply disallowed detainees from having them. Although in January of 2003 the Government instituted a policy essentially prohibiting military personnel from handling the Qur’an (after an MP stomped on a Qu’ran, causing the first hunger strike), according to one former detainee “the rule was repeatedly and systematically infringed by the establishment itself.” Another detainee corroborated this statement, claiming that “years [after he first arrived at Guantánamo], incidents [of Qur’an desecration] still took place and occurred with frequency.”

Similarly, while the Government purports to broadcast the Muslim call to prayer five times per day, detainees and former detainees complain that military personnel frequently obstruct the call by playing music, broadcasting unrelated English messages, or speaking over it, sometimes sarcastically mimicking its message. Additionally, detainees complain that military personnel play the call to prayer too infrequently or not at all.

Finally, although the Government purports to give detainees sufficient time to pray every day, detainees complain that military personnel regularly desecrate the prayer time. One

b. The United States Government Created and Executes an Interrogation Policy that Attacks the Religious Rights Article III Protects.

A memo issued by Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld on April 16, 2003, currently delimits the behavior of Government interrogators at Guantánamo.\textsuperscript{150} The memo authorizes interrogators to employ the “Futility” technique.\textsuperscript{151} An act under the “Futility” technique aims to undermine the subject’s confidence in the structures that support his cause, thereby “convincing the source that resistance is futile.”\textsuperscript{152}

Under the “Futility” technique, female military interrogators may “perform acts designed to take advantage of their gender in relation to Muslim males.”\textsuperscript{153} This policy permits interrogators to degrade the moral infrastructure of Islam, which strictly forbids adultery, sex between unmarried men and women, and promiscuity, among other things. The “Futility” interrogation policy authorizes female interrogators to remove their [Battle Dress Uniform] tops and rub themselves against the detainees; make lewd sexual comments, noises, and gestures to the detainees; and fondle [the detainees’] genitalia.\textsuperscript{154} It permits male or female interrogators to force detainees to stand naked while females are present.\textsuperscript{155} One detainee complained that he frequently heard crying and screaming from an interrogation room “along with a female laughing.” He said he could also hear these interrogators “making derogatory statements about God, including saying--presumably pursuant to the “Futility” technique--‘where is God now?’”\textsuperscript{156}

Any Government-sanctioned degradation of Islam violates Article III of the American Declaration. However, examined as part of the “Futility” interrogation technique, the Government’s discrimination against Muslims is particularly disturbing. Even the Government has acknowledged that to some extent, “sexually suggestive behavior by interrogators... raises problematic issues concerning... religious sensitivities.”\(^{157}\) As mentioned earlier, the “Futility” technique aims to undermine the subject’s confidence in the structures that support his cause. Therefore, when the Government admits it targets the “Muslim” aspect of its detainees’ personalities during “Futility” interrogations, it necessarily admits that it seeks to persuade Muslim men that their religion, Islam, is a futile cause; that Islam and Islamic aspirations no longer have meaning or efficacy. The Government could not discriminate more against the detainees’ religious freedom: were interrogators’ techniques successful, the detainees would abandon their spiritual beliefs altogether as vain. Today, as reports emerge of detainees starving themselves to gain respect for Islam\(^{158}\) or throwing their Qur’ans and renouncing their faiths in despair,\(^{159}\) the Commission must act immediately to address Government policies meant to degrade Islam, particularly those informing interrogation techniques.

Government-initiated investigative reports regarding detention operations reaffirm that religious discrimination at Guantánamo is not considered “abuse.” They simultaneously reveal that the Government fails to punish military personnel who violate the detainees’ Article III religious freedoms. For example, in 2004, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld appointed Vice Admiral Albert T. Church to conduct a “comprehensive review of Department of Defense [DoD] interrogation operations.”\(^{160}\) Reviewing over two years of interrogations at Guantánamo, Admiral Church ultimately found only “three cases of closed, substantiated interrogation-related abuse,” and stated that all three cases resulted in “disciplinary action” against the interrogators.\(^{161}\)

In pertinent part, Church stated these cases “included those of two female interrogators who, on their own initiative, touched and spoke to detainees in a sexually suggestive manner in order to incur stress based on the detainees’ religious beliefs.”\(^{162}\) Church’s statement implies that it is wrong for interrogators to “touch[] and [speak] to detainees in a sexually suggestive manner in order to incur stress based on the detainees’ religious beliefs” and that those who do are punished. Neither implication is true. As previously discussed, female interrogators are authorized to perform “acts designed to take advantage of their gender in relation to Muslim males.”\(^{163}\) The Government “disciplined” the military personnel Church references merely for “failure to document the techniques to be implemented by the interrogator prior to the interrogation” and for “using a technique that was not approved in advance.”\textsuperscript{164} That this investigation uncovered only three instances of “abuse” at Guantánamo, despite the detainees’ numerous complaints of religious discrimination (and other mistreatment), reaffirms several of Petitioner’s beliefs: first, the Government permits interrogators to attack the sexual mores of Islam; second, the Government does not consider religious discrimination “abuse”—at least not in the context of interrogations; third, Government procedures designed to receive and address detainees’ complaints lack efficacy; fourth, the Government defines “abuse” too narrowly; fifth, the Government refuses to meaningfully investigate and punish those responsible for abusing the detainees.

Two other Government investigations regarding Guantánamo have produced similarly empty results. One found that only three interrogation acts since 2002 violated the DoD’s authorized interrogation techniques, and that none of these acts constituted inhumane treatment.\textsuperscript{165} Another found five instances since 2002 where military personnel mistreated prisoners, but recommended--without explanation--that four of the cases be “closed” and merited “no further investigation.”\textsuperscript{166} Ultimately, all reports reaffirm that Government investigations regarding Guantánamo are little more than smoke and mirrors obscuring the simple truth that the Government persistently violates its detainees’ most fundamental rights.

d. Conclusion

The Government regularly violates its Muslim detainees’ Article III religious rights. Additionally, it fails to recognize these violations as “abuse” and therefore fails to punish perpetrators of religious discrimination. Consequently, the Government has caused and continues to cause irreparable moral injury to its Muslim detainees. As the “right to religious freedom and worship” is “essential” under the American Declaration, and as the Commission may authorize Precautionary Measures to prevent irreparable moral injury, Petitioners request that the Commission expand the scope of Precautionary Measures No. 259 against the Government to prevent the Government from continuing to violate its detainees’ essential religious rights, particularly in the context of interrogations and approved interrogation techniques.

VII. Conclusion and Requested Relief

Accordingly, Petitioners renew the requests made in their February 2005 submission, and further seek an expansion of Precautionary Measures No. 259 to request the United States to:

Petitioners respectfully seek the Commission’s intervention and the issuance of the following Precautionary Measures, requesting that the United States Government:

1. Cease sending persons under its control to third countries where they may be at risk of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment;

2. Give individuals facing transfer from Guantánamo, and their lawyers, including CCR as coordinating counsel for the unknown detainees, 30 days notice before they are transferred;

3. Give individuals facing transfer a real opportunity to contest the transfer, including access to counsel and an independent hearing;

4. Ensure honest, confidential, and prompt communication between detainees and their counsel, including ending the practice of monitoring attorney-client meetings or threatening or punishing detainees for meeting with their lawyers;

5. Refrain from exploiting detainees’ Islamic faith or practice in order to torture or otherwise persecute them, specifically refrain from confiscating, withholding, or desecrating religious objects, including the Qu’ran;

6. Allow detainees to observe Islamic dietary practices in accordance with their faith, particularly during their observance of the Ramadan holiday and provide detainees with access to religious counseling;

7. Notify consulate, families, and attorneys of prisoners participating in hunger strikes and ensure that appropriate, medical attention is provided to hunger-striking prisoners with their consent by an independent medical team;

8. Allow family members to contact hospitalized hunger-striking prisoners and ensure legal counsel can make regular and timely contact with ill prisoners;

Petitioners look forward to addressing these matters at the October 20, 2005 hearing.

Respectfully submitted,

Precautionary Measures Precautionary Measures Nº 259
United States

Dear Ms. LaHood:

On behalf of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, I write in order to acknowledge receipt of your observations dated October 20, 2005 concerning the precautionary measures noted above.

I also wish to inform you that during the Commission’s 123rd Regular Period of Sessions, the Commission considered the information provided by the parties in this matter since the Commission’s last reiteration of the precautionary measures on July 29, 2004. This information included the written submissions of the United States dated December 15, 2004 and October 19, 2005, the written observations of the Petitioners dated February 22, 2005 and October 20, 2005, and the oral submissions made by the parties during the hearings convened before the Commission on March 3, 2005 during the Commission’s 122nd Regular Period of Session and on October 20, 2005 during the Commission’s 123rd Regular Period of Sessions. Based upon the information provided, the Commission decided to reiterate and extend the precautionary measures, and accordingly, in a note of today’s date, addressed the government of the United States in the following terms:

As Your Excellency is aware, in the precautionary measures granted on March 12, 2002, which were maintained and expanded in communications dated July 23, 2002, March 18, 2003, and July 29, 2004, the Commission asked the United States to:

1. take the urgent measures necessary to have the legal status of the detainees at Guantanamo Bay determined by a competent tribunal.

2. to conduct thorough and impartial investigations into all allegations of torture and other ill treatment of detainees under its authority and control and to prosecute individuals who may be responsible for such conduct, including those who may be implicated through the doctrine of superior responsibility, in light of the State’s obligation to ensure that detainees are not subjected to treatment that may amount to torture or may otherwise be cruel, inhuman or degrading as defined under applicable international norms.

In its communications, the Commission also requested that the United States provide information concerning the location, status and treatment of individual detained by the United States in other facilities in connection with its post-September 11, 2001 anti-terrorist initiatives, including information as to the United States’ policies and practices governing the prohibition of any form of treatment that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading in nature in the detention or interrogation of such persons. In addition, the Commission asked for information concerning the Petitioners’ allegation that children under the age of 18 continued to be held by the United States at Guantanamo Bay and that they have not been segregated from the adult population or provided with education or rehabilitation assistance.

Additional Observations of the United States

In its written and oral representations to the Commission, Your Excellency’s government has made several submissions. First, the United States has argued that the Petitioners’ request is inadmissible for failure to exhaust domestic remedies. In particular, the State contends that there are ongoing and timely federal habeas corpus proceedings arising out the June 28, 2004 decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of Rasul v. Bush, in which that Court held that United States courts have jurisdiction to consider challenges to the legality of detention of foreign nationals captured abroad in connection with hostilities and incarcerated at Guantanamo Bay. According to the United States, as of September 27, 2005, 180 habeas lawsuits involving 292 detainee petitions have been filed with US courts. These proceedings are said to include Hamdan v. Rumsfeld and In re Guantanamo Detainees, in which the US District Court reached conflicting conclusions on the question of whether non-resident aliens have any cognizable constitutional rights or any viable claims either under treaties or customary international law, and in respect of which a decision on a consolidated appeal to the US Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia is said to be pending. Your Excellency’s government also indicates that in the course of these habeas corpus proceedings, the federal courts have reviewed or are reviewing numerous motions and other requests including motions to dismiss the petition, motions for a restraining order, motions regarding transfer of a detainee from Guantanamo, requests for discovery, and motions relating to procedures regulating access of attorneys to individuals, and that the government has filed extensive submissions in these proceedings.

The State also referred in this connection to certain administrative proceedings established at Guantanamo Bay, including proceedings before Combatant Status Review Tribunals that began in July 2004 and are comprised of officials of the US armed forces who determine whether detainees are properly classified as “enemy combatants.” In addition, the Commission was informed of Administrative Review Boards, which are also comprised of members of the US armed forces and are said to provide an opportunity for the detainee to explain “why he or she no longer presents a threat to the United States or its allies in the ongoing armed conflict with al Qaida and its affiliates or supporters or to explain why release would otherwise be appropriate.” The State argues that these proceedings constitute additional domestic proceedings available to the detainees, and further, that these proceedings address satisfactorily the principal concerns raised by the Commission in its request for precautionary measures.

In addition to its submissions on the admissibility of the precautionary measures request, the United States reiterated its previous argument that the Commission’s jurisdiction and competence do not extend to the laws and customs of war or to issuing requests for precautionary measures against non-States Parties to the American Convention.

With respect to the issue of the treatment of detainees, the State has contended that the US President and the Department of Defense have confirmed that the United States remains committed to complying with its obligations under the Convention against Torture and other Cruel, inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. In this regard, the Department of Defense denies any allegations of torture at Guantanamo and restates its commitment to treating detainees humanely. It has also indicated that there have been several official reviews of conditions of detention at Guantanamo and elsewhere, and that allegations of detainee abuse are investigated and those who commit wrongdoing will be punished. According to Your Excellency’s government, as of December 2004 major independent investigations at Guantanamo have documented eight instances of infractions which have resulted in action ranging from admonishment to court-martial.\(^9\) In addition, the State indicates that detainees are provided with excellent medical care, including mental health treatment, that they receive adequate food, shelter and clothing, and that they are permitted to receive and send mail to family and friends via petitions and postcards.\(^10\) Regarding interrogation techniques at Guantanamo, the State referred the Commission to a June 22, 2004 US Department of Defense press release explaining the various interrogation techniques approved and disapproved at Guantanamo from the period beginning January 2002, and indicated that the facility at Guantanamo is continually open to the ICRC, chaplain staff and legal staff, and foreign and domestic media, and that official reviews have been conducted by the Department of Defense into conditions at Guantanamo as well as individual allegations of abuse.\(^11\) These are said to have included an investigation at the direction of the Secretary of Defense in response to a request by the Australian Government following claims of mistreatment of two Australian detainees at Guantanamo, where the investigation ultimately revealed no information to support the allegation.\(^12\)

With respect to interrogation techniques in particular, the United States has indicated that the Department of Defense has taken several actions in an attempt to address allegations of any prisoner abuse by US military personnel abroad, including the establishment of an Independent Panel to review operations and provide independent advice on the treatment of detainees. The State has also indicated that more than 50 individuals have been referred for court-martial and that new guidelines have been issued by the Secretary of Defense on procedures for investigations into deaths of any person held as a detainee in the custody of the US armed forces.\(^13\)

Further, the State contends that there are no juveniles currently detained at Guantanamo and that the three juveniles under the age of sixteen previously held there were treated appropriately and were transferred to Afghanistan under conditions intended to provide for their safety and rehabilitation.\(^14\)

Finally, with regard to its actions involving the possible repatriation of detainees, the United States indicates that it takes seriously the principle of non-refoulement. It states in this respect that its policy is to obtain specific assurances from a receiving country that it will not torture the individual being transferred to that country, that it would take steps to investigate credible allegations of torture and take appropriate action if there were reasons to believe that those assurances were not being honored, and that it would not transfer a detainee where those assurances are not sufficient when balanced against an individual’s specific claim.\(^15\)

\(^12\) State’s observations of December 15, 2004, pp. 26-27.
Additional Observations of the Petitioners

In their additional observations to the Commission, the Petitioners have contested the jurisdictional objections raised by the State as well as observations on the merits of the precautionary measures. With respect to the proceedings pending before US courts and administrative tribunals, the Petitioners state that as of October 2005, more than 500 men continue to be detained at Guantanamo Bay. They also claim that of these, approximately 280 have obtained counsel to represent them on habeas corpus petitions in the US District Court to challenge their detentions, but the substance of their claims has yet to be determined by any court. Accordingly, the Petitioners state that there are still approximately 225 detainees who have been completely denied any right to access counsel because no one except the government knows who they are. In addition, for those detainees with counsel, the Petitioners contend that the US military has interfered on multiple levels with the Guantanamo detainees’ right to a confidential attorney-client relationship, including measures to diminish trust between detainees and their lawyers and monitoring attorney-client meetings.

Further, the Petitioners indicated in their October 20, 2005 observations that reviews by the Combatant Status Review Tribunal, which determine whether a detainee is an “enemy combatant,” had been completed and that 553 of the 598 detainees were determined to be “enemy combatants not entitled to prisoner of war protections,” but that several of the 38 men determined not to be enemy combatants since March 29, 2005 are still being held at Guantanamo purportedly because the Government does not know where to send them. The Petitioners also state that there have been 309 Administrative Review Board proceedings to date, which are to assess annually the need to continue to detain each enemy combatant during the course of ongoing hostilities, through which 8 people have been released, 55 have been transferred, and decisions to continue to detain were made for 111 of the detainees, leaving 135 awaiting determination. In addition, according to the Petitioners, Military Commissions that have been set up to try detainees for crimes arising out of the armed conflict detainees are scheduled to proceed in respect of four detainees who have been charged following the lifting of a court-ordered stay. The Petitioners also claim that procedural changes implemented by the government to the Commissions do not address the Petitioners’ concerns regarding the fairness of the process.

In this regard, the Petitioners claim that none of the tribunals established at Guantanamo Bay, including the Combatant Status Review Tribunals, the Administrative Review Boards, or the Military Commissions, fulfill international standards of due process, in part because they apply an overbroad notion of “enemy combatant,” the detainees do not have access to classified material and, in the case of the first two bodies, they are presided over by US military personnel and do not provide for the right to independent counsel for the detainee. Moreover, according to the 19 Petitioners’ observations of October 20, 2005, pp. 6-7, citing, inter alia, J. White and R. Wright, U.S. holding talks on return of detainees, Washington Post, August 9, 2005 (indicating that in August, the US government stated that 15 Uighurs and 2 Uzbeks could not be returned to their home countries because of fears of torture, but could be released into the custody of another government).

Petitioners, detainees have reported that they have given false information because of torture and the Combatant Status Review Tribunals have relied on such statements in determining whether detainees should be classified as enemy combatants, contrary to the obligations of the United States under international law. Accordingly, the Petitioners have requested the Commission to further expand its precautionary measures by urging the US government to comply with its obligation not to use torture or other abusive tactics when it determines the legal status of individuals in US detention or other proceedings.

With respect to the conditions and treatment of detainees, the Petitioners have argued that assurances by the U.S. government that it is treating the detainees humanely have been proven to be unreliable based upon recent sources indicating that detainees have been subjected to treatment including beatings, sleep deprivation, exposure to extreme temperatures, sensory deprivation, and prolonged isolation and that such treatment has been approved at the highest levels of authority in the United States. Alleged sources for this information include media reports, statements by U.S. government officials, government legal memoranda leaked to the media, reports by the International Committee of the Red Cross, and first-hand accounts provided by at least 17 individuals who had since been released from Guantanamo. In their October 20, 2005 observations, the Petitioners noted that Guantanamo Bay detainees engaged in widespread and often life-threatening hunger strikes in June to July 2005 and from August to October 2005 in order to protest their detention and treatment, that 200 detainees were participating as of October 7, 2005 and that 21 participants were being force fed through nasal tubes but without effective medical care. Further, the Petitioners state that US authorities regularly violate the Muslim detainees’ religious rights through interrogation policies such as the “Futility” technique that aim to undermine the subject’s confidence in the structure that support his cause by degrading his religion, as well as by failing to recognize religious discrimination as abuse and punish individuals who perpetrate it, among other means. Finally, the Petitioners allege that the US government has failed to investigate high-level officials for torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment in US detention facilities, but rather has rewarded and promoted such officials.

With respect to the transfer of detainees, the Petitioners have claimed that 247 detainees once held at Guantanamo have been transferred to other countries, including Egypt, Iran, Yemen and Tajikistan, in circumstances that do not adequately protect against the possibility that the transferees may be subjected to torture or other inhuman treatment. The Petitioners note in this respect that the countries to whom the detainees have been transferred have deplorable human rights records as documented for many years by the U.S. State Department’s Country Reports, and that although the U.S. government has negotiated transfer agreements with some Muslim countries that would seek assurances that they would refrain from torture and that transferees would be treated humanely, great concerns remain that many of those transferred will be subjected to indefinite detention without trial, torture and other abuse. Further, the Petitioners note that the United States has no means of enforcing or monitoring compliance with assurances given by the receiving state. The Petitioners note that habeas counsel for some of the represented detainees have obtained preliminary injunctions from the US courts prohibiting the Government from removing them from Guantanamo without first giving both counsel and the court 30 days notice of the intended transfer. According to the Petitioners, some of these petitions are pending, some have been denied, and unrepresented detainees are left with no judicial protection from illegal transfers. Based upon these submissions, the Petitioners have asked the Commission to expand its precautionary measures to cease sending persons under US control to third countries where they may be at risk of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, give individuals facing transfer from Guantanamo and their lawyers, including the Center for Constitutional Rights as coordinating counsel for the unknown detainees, 30 days notice before they are transferred, and give individuals facing transfer a real opportunity to contest the transfer including access to counsel and an independent hearing.

Findings of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights

After considering the observations of the parties, the Commission has made the following findings concerning its precautionary measures granted in favor of the detainees at Guantanamo Bay.

With regard to the jurisdictional objections raised by the United States, the Commission has already considered and rejected the State’s claims based upon the Commission’s authority to adopt precautionary measures in respect of non-states parties to the American Convention and to consider and apply international humanitarian law and does not consider it necessary to deliberate further on these points.

With respect to the State’s objection to the precautionary measures based upon non-exhaustion of domestic remedies, which was first raised in the State’s observations of December 17, 2004, the Commission acknowledges the international principle according to which the international jurisdiction of human rights is intended to reinforce and complement, rather than replace, domestic jurisdiction. It is for this reason that the rule of prior exhaustion of domestic remedies is applied to petitions filed before the Inter-American human rights system, in order to allow the State to resolve the problem under its internal law before being confronted with an international proceeding. At the same time, it has been recognized by this Commission and other international adjudicative bodies that the effective exercise of their mandates requires the ability, in certain circumstances, to request a state to act or refrain from acting in situations of extreme gravity or urgency where application of the usual rule of exhaustion of domestic remedies may not be appropriate or practicable. This arises most frequently where urgent measures are 35 See, e.g., Commission’s Rules of Procedure, Article 25(1) providing that “In serious and urgent cases, and whenever necessary according to the information available, the Commission may, on its own initiative or at the request of a party, request that the State concerned adopt precautionary measures to prevent irreparable harm to persons”; American Convention on Human Rights, Art. 83(2) (providing that “[i]n cases of extreme gravity and urgency, and when necessary to avoid irreparable damage to persons, the Court shall adopt such provisional measures as it deems pertinent in matters it has under consideration. With respect to a case not yet submitted to the Court, it may act at the request of the Commission”); Statute of the International Court of Justice, Article 41(1) providing that “[t]he Court shall have the power to indicate, if it considers that circumstances so require, any provisional measures which ought to be taken to preserve the respective rights of either party”); European Court of Human Rights, Rules of Court (October 2005), Rule 39(1) (providing that “[t]he Chamber or, where

In light of the inherently urgent and vital nature of such measures, the Commission, like other international bodies, has not considered establishment of the exhaustion of domestic remedies requirement to be a precondition for its longstanding authority to grant precautionary measures. At the same time, the Commission may take into account the possible existence and invocation of protective measures at the domestic level in determining whether to grant or maintain precautionary measures. Consequently, in the present case, the Commission cannot accept the State’s submission that alleged non-exhaustion of domestic remedies per se deprives the Commission of jurisdiction to grant or maintain the precautionary measures in this matter.

39 The Commission’s authority to request precautionary measures was first included in Article 25(2) of the Commission’s Regulations adopted in 1980, which provided that “[i]f an urgent case when it becomes necessary to avoid irreparable damage to persons, the Commission may request that provisional measures be taken to avoid irreparable damages in cases where the denounced facts are true.” See (Current) Regulations of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, approved by the Commission at its 560th Meeting, 49th Session, held on April 18, 1980, in Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, Ten Years of Activities, 1971-1981 (1982) at p. 82. The Commission began reporting on precautionary measures granted by it beginning in its 1997 Annual Report. For past summaries of precautionary measures granted by the Commission, see Annual Report of the IACHR 1997, 1998, Chapters III(2)(A), Annual Reports of the IACHR 1999-2004, Chapters III(C)(1).
competent tribunal, the State has argued that the actions of the various tribunals established at Guantanamo Bay as well as the federal courts of the United States are addressing the concern raised by the Commission and therefore that it is "wholly unnecessary and improper for the Commission to retain jurisdiction over this proceeding." In this respect, the Commission observes that when it first adopted these precautionary measures in March 2002, the urgency of the matter arose from the fact that according to available information, the detainees at Guantanamo Bay remained entirely at the unfettered discretion of the United States government. As no person under the authority and control of a state, regardless of his or her circumstances, is devoid of legal protection for his or her fundamental and non-derogable human rights, the Commission considered that the rights and protections to which the detainees may be entitled under international or domestic law could not be said to be the subject of effective legal protection by the State absent clarification of the legal status of the detainees. Over two years later, the U.S. Supreme Court reached essentially the same conclusion in its judgment in the case of Rasul v. Bush, in which a majority of the Court held that United States courts have jurisdiction to consider challenges to the legality of detention of foreign nationals captured abroad in connection with hostilities and incarcerated at Guantanamo Bay. The Court's finding in this respect was based upon, inter alia, the longstanding and fundamental role that the writ of habeas corpus plays as a means of reviewing Executive detention. In this respect, Mr. Justice Stevens, writing for the majority, quoted Justice Jackson's statement from his dissenting opinion in the case of Shaughnessy v. United States ex rel. Mezei, that "Executive imprisonment has long been considered oppressive and lawless since John, at Runnymede, pledged that no free man should be imprisoned, dispossessed, outlawed, or exiled save by the judgment of his peers or by the law of the land. The judges of England developed the writ of habeas corpus largely to preserve these immunities from executive restraint." 41

Notwithstanding the Supreme Court's pronouncement, the information before the Commission indicates that over one year since the decision, nearly half of the detainees at Guantanamo Bay have not been given effective access to counsel or otherwise provided with a fair opportunity to pursue a habeas corpus proceeding in accordance with the Supreme Court's ruling, despite the fact that the purpose of habeas is intended to be a timely remedy aimed at guaranteeing personal liberty and humane treatment. Moreover, in those habeas petitions that have been filed, no final determinations have yet been reached as to the legal status of the detainees or the rights to which they are entitled under domestic or international law. While the State argues that the procedures before the Combatant Status Review Board and the Administrative Review Boards likewise satisfy the Commission's request, it remains entirely unclear from the outcome of those proceedings what the legal status of the detainees is or what rights they are entitled to under international or domestic law. The information available only indicates that 558 of the 596 detainees have been found by the Combatant Status Review Tribunal to be "enemy combatants not entitled to prisoner of war protections." Accordingly, the Commission does not consider that these procedures have adequately responded to the concerns at the base of the Commission's request for precautionary measures.

In these circumstances, the Commission considers that the urgent situation at Guantanamo Bay continues to exist and, moreover, has been exacerbated by the fact that some detainees have been subjected to additional processes and proceedings, including removal to third countries and trial by military commission, while their legal status remains unclear. Based upon these considerations, the Commission finds that the State has not complied with this aspect of the Commission's request for precautionary measures, that a serious and urgent situation of irreparable harm to persons remains at Guantanamo Bay, and therefore reiterates its request that the State take the immediate measures necessary to have the legal status of the detainees at Guantanamo Bay effectively determined by a competent tribunal.

42 See I/A Court H.R., Castillo Peñãe Case, Judgment of November 3, 1997, Ser. C No. 34, para. 83 (holding that "[t]he purpose of habeas corpus is not only to guarantee personal liberty and humane treatment, but also to prevent disappearance or failure to determine the place of detention, and, ultimately, to ensure the right to life").
The Commission has also requested that the State conduct thorough and impartial investigations into all allegations of torture and other ill treatment of detainees under its authority and control and to prosecute individuals who may be responsible for such conduct, including those who may be implicated through the doctrine of superior responsibility. In this regard, it has long been emphasized within the inter-American human rights system that states must use the means at their disposal to prevent human rights violations and to provide effective remedies for any violations that do occur, including undertaking thorough and effective investigations capable of identifying and punishing persons responsible for human rights infringements.\(^{43}\) In response to the Commission’s request, the State has indicated, without significant detail, that several official reviews of conditions of detention at Guantanamo and elsewhere have been undertaken and that allegations of detainee abuse are investigated and those who commit wrongdoing are punished. The State has also indicated that as of December 2004 major independent investigations at Guantanamo have documented eight instances of infractions which have resulted in action ranging from admonishment to court-marshals.

The Commission is encouraged by indications that the State has taken some measures to investigate and prosecute allegations of mistreatment at Guantanamo Bay. At the same time, the Commission remains concerned by the information presented by the Petitioners and available through the media more generally which suggests that instances of abuse and other inhumane treatment may be continuing at Guantanamo and that these instances may include the denial of proper medical treatment to detainees who have participated in hunger strikes as well as methods of interrogation directed at the religious affiliations of certain detainees. The Commission is also concerned that, according to the State’s submissions, all of the investigations of abuse at Guantanamo have been undertaken internally by the Department of Defense, which is the very institution alleged to be responsible for the instances of abuse, which may call into question the impartiality of the measures taken. As the Commission has previously found, notwithstanding the threat or gravity of a situation of terrorist violence, and regardless of whether it arises in the context of armed conflict, the right to humane treatment is a non-derogable right, and the prohibition against torture constitutes a peremptory norm of international law and therefore may not be suspended or restricted under any circumstances.\(^{44}\) In light of the serious nature of these allegations, the Commission reiterates its request that the State take all measures necessary to thoroughly and impartially investigate, prosecute and punish all instances of torture and other mistreatment that may be perpetrated against the detainees at Guantanamo Bay, whether through any legal proceeding of statements obtained through torture, except against a person accused of torture as evidence that the statement was made.\(^{45}\)

With respect to the Petitioners’ allegations concerning the transfer or removal of detainees to third countries in circumstances which do not adequately protect against the possibility that the transferees may be subjected to torture or other inhuman treatment, the State has indicated that it takes seriously the principle of non-refoulement, and that its policy is to obtain specific assurances from a receiving country that it will not torture the individual being transferred to that country and would not transfer a detainee where those assurances are not sufficient when balanced against an individual’s specific claim. The submissions of the Petitioners concerning transfer agreements allegedly entered into between the United States and certain Muslim governments appear to support the State’s claims in this regard.

On this issue, the Commission has previously stated that the obligation of non-refoulement under applicable international instruments is absolute and does not depend upon a claimant’s status as a refugee. This obligation also necessarily requires that persons who may face a risk of torture cannot be rejected at the border or expelled without an adequate, individualized examination of their circumstances even if they do not qualify as refugees, and that the process requires the strictest adherence to all applicable safeguards, including the right to have one’s eligibility to enter the process decided by a competent, independent and impartial decision-maker, through a process which is fair and transparent. The Commission has also specifically stated that

For persons who have been subject to certain forms of persecution, such as torture, return to their home country would place them at a risk which is impermissible under international law. As noted above, the prohibition of torture as a norm of jus cogens—as codified in the American Declaration generally, and Article 3 of the UN Convention against Torture in the context of expulsion—applies beyond the terms of the 1961 Convention. The fact that a person is suspected of or deemed to have some relation to terrorism does not modify the obligation of the State to refrain from return where substantial grounds of a real risk of inhuman treatment are at issue.

There is no question that transferring or removing a detainee to a country where he or she may face a real risk of torture or other mistreatment can give rise to a serious and urgent risk of irreparable harm warranting precautionary measures from this Commission.

From the information available to the Commission, which includes judicial decisions from courts in the United States and findings by the U.S. government itself, at least some of the detainees at Guantanamo face real risks of torture and other mistreatment if removed or transferred to other governments. Further, the information presented indicates that although the United States government may request assurances from the receiving state, it has no method of enforcing or monitoring compliance with these assurances once the detainee is removed, a defect that has been criticized by other international human rights authorities.

Given the absolute nature of the non-refoulement principle and the serious nature of the consequences if it is not fully respected and enforced, the Commission respectfully requests that the United States take the measures necessary to ensure that any detainees who may face a risk of torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment if transferred, removed or expelled from Guantanamo Bay are provided an adequate, individualized examination of their circumstances through a fair and transparent process before a competent, independent and impartial decision-maker. Where there are substantial grounds for believing that he or she would be in danger of being subjected to torture or other mistreatment, the State should ensure that the detainee is not transferred or removed and that diplomatic assurances are not used to circumvent the State's non-refoulement obligation.

Finally, the Commission respectfully requests that the United States provide information concerning the Petitioners' allegation that juveniles under the age of 18 continue to be held by the United States at Guantanamo Bay and that they have not been segregated from the adult population or provided with education or rehabilitation assistance.

A/55/324 (July 2, 2002), para. 37 (mentioning a number instances in which there were strong indications that diplomatic assurances were not respected and indicating that, as a baseline, in circumstances where a person would be returned to a place where torture is systematic, "the principle of non-refoulement must be strictly observed and diplomatic assurances should not be resorted to"); Report of the UN Independent Expert on the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism, Robert K. Goldman, UN Doc. E/CN.4/2005/103 (February 7, 2005), paras. 56-61 (noting that unlike assurances on the use of the death penalty or trial by a military court which are readily verifiable, assurances against torture and other abuse require constant vigilance by competent and independent personnel and that the mere fact that such assurances are sought is a tacit admission by the sending State that the transferred person is indeed at risk of being tortured or ill-treated, and concluding that "[g]iven the absolute obligation of States not to expose any person to the danger of torture by way of extradition, expulsion, deportation, or other transfer, diplomatic assurances should not be used to circumvent that non-refoulement obligation"). See also Human Rights Committee, UN Doc. CCPR/C/SWE, para. 12.
Summary of Precautionary Measures Request

Based upon the foregoing findings, the Commission respectfully request that Your Excellency's Government:

1. take the immediate measures necessary to have the legal status of the detainees at Guantanamo Bay effectively determined by a competent tribunal;

2. take all measures necessary to thoroughly and impartially investigate, prosecute and punish all instances of torture and other mistreatment that may be perpetrated against the detainees at Guantanamo Bay, whether through methods of interrogation of otherwise, and to ensure respect for the prohibition against the use in any legal proceeding of statements obtained through torture, except against a person accused of torture as evidence that the statement was made;

3. take the measures necessary to ensure that any detainees who may face a risk of torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment if transferred, removed or expelled from Guantanamo Bay are provided an adequate, individualized examination of their circumstances through a fair and transparent process before a competent, independent and impartial decision-maker. Where there are substantial grounds for believing that he or she would be in danger of being subjected to torture or other mistreatment, the State should ensure that the detainee is not transferred or removed and that diplomatic assurances are not used to circumvent the State's non-refoulement obligation.

The Commission notes that during its last hearing on these measures on October 20, 2005, your government's representative declined to make any oral representations, and that the State indicated in its October 19, 2005 written representations that it intends to defer further formal participation in the matter until the international law requirement of exhaustion of domestic remedies has been fulfilled. The Commission regrets the stance taken by the United States and hopes that it will reconsider its position in light of the Commission's findings in this matter and the important role that the State's participation in this and other proceedings before the Commission plays in reinforcing the protection of fundamental rights in our Hemisphere.

In its communication to the United States, the Commission asked that the State provide information concerning compliance with its precautionary measures, together with the additional information requested, within 30 days.

The Global Justice Center supports increased use of international mechanisms through intensive courses, on-site training and joint actions at the international level with local NGOs.

Due to the significance of the issues raised in Winston Caesar v. The Republic of Trinidad and Tobago (12.147) for people throughout the Americas, HLS Advocates and the Global Justice Center submit this brief in support of the Application of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights Before the Inter-American Court of Human Rights (the “Commission Application”) filed by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (the “Commission”) on February 26, 2003.

B. Summary of Argument

This brief amici curiae addresses and expands upon certain issues set forth in the Commission Application. Specifically, after discussing certain jurisdictional issues, this brief examines the numerous abuses suffered by Mr. Caesar and identifies seven distinct violations by Trinidad and Tobago (“Trinidad” or the “State”) of Article 5 of the American Convention on Human Rights (the “American Convention”). This brief further contends that Mr. Caesar’s flogging with a cat-o-nine tails, either standing alone or combined with the other abuses suffered, constitutes “torture” under the American Convention and under international law more generally.

Part II of this brief analyzes the issue of jurisdiction and demonstrates that the Inter-American Court of Human Rights (“this Court” or the “Inter-American Court”) has jurisdiction to hear the present case pursuant to Articles 62(3) and 78(2) of the American Convention. Neither the attempts by Trinidad to limit mandatory jurisdiction through its instrument of acceptance in 1991, nor its denunciation of the American Convention in 1998, impedes the Court’s jurisdiction over this case.

Part III explores the abuses suffered by Mr. Caesar and demonstrates that at least seven instances of abuse by Trinidad constitute individual and discrete occurrences of “cruel, inhuman, or degrading punishment or treatment” in violation of Article 5 of the American Convention, and that cumulatively, these abuses unquestionably constitute a violation of Article 5. The abuses by Trinidad include the following: (1) subjecting Mr. Caesar to degrading and inhumane detention conditions; (2) failing to provide Mr. Caesar with adequate medical treatment for his ailments, independent of those resulting from his flogging; (3) prolonging the duration of Mr. Caesar’s confinement pending his flogging and repeatedly leading him to believe that his flogging was imminent; (4) deliberately exposing Mr. Caesar, prior to his own flogging, to the anguish of those persons who had recently been flogged; (5) subjecting Mr. Caesar to flogging with the cat-o-nine tails; (6) humiliating Mr. Caesar during the administration of his flogging; and (7) failing to provide Mr. Caesar with adequate medical treatment for injuries sustained through the flogging. By addressing each of these abuses separately and finding that each violates Article 5 of the American Convention, this Court can provide clear guidelines governing proper and improper treatment of prisoners, for the benefit of states parties to the American Convention as well as individuals living in those states.

Part IV demonstrates that Trinidad’s flogging of Mr. Caesar with a cat-o-nine tails constitutes “torture” under international law, either as a single occurrence or combined with the other abuses suffered by Mr. Caesar.

The Commission Application asserts additional arguments and presents claims for remedy and restitution. This brief joins in those positions, but does duplicate such efforts.
C. Summary of Relevant Facts

On November 11, 1983 authorities in Trinidad arrested Mr. Caesar and charged him with rape. On February 21, 1986, judicial officials committed him to stand trial but the trial was deferred. Several months later Mr. Caesar went to the Hall of Justice to inquire about his case. He was first told by authorities that his case had not been called, but later informed that a warrant had been issued for his arrest. Unsure of his status, Mr. Caesar continued living normally at the same address. Authorities again arrested Mr. Caesar on September 10, 1991, for failure to appear in court; they incarcerated him at Golden Grove Prison pending his trial.

At his trial on January 10, 1992, Mr. Caesar was convicted of attempted rape and sentenced to 20 years in prison with hard labor, as well as 15 lashes of the cat-o-nine tails under Trinidad’s Corporal Punishment (Offenders Over Sixteen) Act of 1953. Mr. Caesar filed an application for leave to appeal this ruling on November 26, 1993, and on February 28, 1996, the Court of Appeal of Trinidad and Tobago refused this application without explanation.

Between September 10, 1991 and February 28, 1996, Mr. Caesar was incarcerated at Golden Grove Prison and subjected to substandard conditions. Prison officials placed him in a hot and crowded cell with four to five men; he slept on the floor on a thin mat, had no toilet facilities and had to use a common “slop pail.” Shortly after the Court of Appeal refused his application, Mr. Caesar was transferred to the Port of Spain Prison and spent 1-2 months in that prison’s infirmary because he was bleeding heavily and in severe pain as he had developed chronic hemorrhoids. In June 1996, Mr. Caesar was sent to Carrera Convict Prison, where he remained until November 1999. Authorities at Carrera imposed similar hardships upon Mr.

This section summarizes the facts pertinent to the arguments set forth in this brief, using information provided in the Commission Application at pages 10 to 17 and in the affidavit of Winston Caesar which accompanies the Application as Annex 4. A more complete statement of the facts in this case is set forth in the Commission Application, and in the affidavit of Mr. Caesar.
Caesar to those he had endured at Golden Grove Prison, forcing him to share a small, hot, and unventilated cell with four men, sleep on a piece of old carpet, and use a common slop pail. Mr. Caesar’s health deteriorated significantly during the course of his incarceration. He contracted tuberculosis, and developed hemorrhoids that caused him to bleed so severely that he refrained from using the slop pail for fear of losing consciousness. Although prison officials were aware of his condition, they did not provide him with timely medical attention. In 1992, a doctor told Mr. Caesar that his hemorrhoids required surgery, but the procedure was postponed for almost six years, until January 1998.

In addition to these substandard prison conditions, prison officials subjected Mr. Caesar to severe psychological abuse. On four separate occasions during a period of more than one year prior to his flogging, authorities placed Mr. Caesar in a special cell designated for inmates that were awaiting their punishments. After being taken one-by-one to endure corporal punishment, the inmates were returned to the cell severely injured. As such, Mr. Caesar was forced to witness firsthand the adverse effects the flogging had on the inmates, who often suffered bleeding from their wounds and cried openly. As the only inmate not to be subjected to the punishment, Mr. Caesar would then be returned to his cell without explanation.

On February 5, 1998, almost two years after the confirmation of his sentence and just a few weeks after his hemorrhoids operation, Mr. Caesar received his sentence of 15 lashes of the cat-o-nine tails. This prolonged delay violated Trinidadian law, which specifies that corporal punishment sentences must be carried out within six months of the date of the sentence.

4 Corporal Punishment (Offenders Over Sixteen) Act of 1953 of Trinidad and Tobago, Chapter 13:04 Laws of Trinidad and Tobago, art. 6 states, “A sentence of flogging shall be carried out as soon as may be practicable and shall in no case be carried out after the expiration of six months from the passing of the sentence.”
told him to take off his clothes. The prison doctor then examined him and told the other officials that Mr. Caesar could be flogged, ignoring Mr. Caesar’s attempts to remind the doctor that he had just had surgery. Mr. Caesar was made to lie spread-eagled on a metal contraption known to prisoners as the “Merry Sandy.” Prison officials then bound his hands and feet to the contraption and covered his head with a sheet, before whipping him with 15 strokes of the cat-o-nine tails.

The cat-o-nine tails is an instrument consisting of a plaited rope made up of nine knotted thongs of cotton cord approximately 30 inches long. It is designed to bruise and lacerate the skin of the person being whipped, and to cause intense pain. Mr. Caesar’s flogging took place in the presence of at least seven men: the prison doctor, the Chief Infirmary Officer at the Port of Spain Prison, a Prison Supervisor, two other men who Mr. Caesar believed to be from the Ministry of National Security, and two prison officers. Mr. Caesar lost consciousness during the course of the flogging, and afterwards required hospitalization for two months. In the infirmary he received painkillers, but no other medication, for the injuries he sustained, and he continues to suffer pain in his shoulders as a result of the flogging. Following his hospitalization he returned to prison, where he remained at least until the taking of his affidavit on October 23, 2002.
II. PRELIMINARY OBJECTIONS

A. This Court Properly Has Jurisdiction Over this Case.

This Court has jurisdiction over the case at bar. Trinidad ratified the American Convention on Human Rights (the “American Convention”) on May 28, 1991, and recognized the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court on the same day. Mr. Caesar was first imprisoned after this date.

B. Trinidad’s Denunciation of the American Convention Does Not Preclude Jurisdiction.

Trinidad’s denunciation of the American Convention effective May 26, 1999, does not preclude this Court’s jurisdiction over this case because all of the violations at issue occurred before the effective date of Trinidad’s denunciation.

In the Hilaire case, this Court rejected Trinidad’s preliminary objection to the jurisdiction of the Court, holding:

> The facts, to which the instant case refers, occurred prior to the effective date of the State’s denunciation. Consequently, the Court has jurisdiction, under the terms of Articles 78(2) and 62(3) of the Convention, to entertain the present case and render a judgment.⁵

Similarly, the facts giving rise to Mr. Caesar’s petition pre-date the entry into force of Trinidad’s denunciation on May 26, 1999.⁶ Mr. Caesar was convicted on January 10, 1992, and his conviction and sentence were affirmed on February 28, 1996. All four incidences of Mr. Caesar’s forced witness of the impact of flogging and the unjustified, malicious stay of his own corporal punishment (in violation of domestic law) occurred prior to February 5, 1998. He was flogged on February 5, 1998, and he received inadequate medical treatment while hospitalized.

⁶ On May 26, 1998, Trinidad notified the Secretary General of the Organization of American States of its denunciation of the American Convention. According to the terms of Article 78 of the Convention, a denunciation by a state party shall have effect one year after the date of notification of the denunciation. See Commission Application at p. 7.
during the two months thereafter. The improper conditions of confinement and the failure to provide proper medical attention all date back to the commencement of the criminal proceedings against Mr. Caesar on January 10, 1992. In sum, all of the abuses addressed in this brief occurred prior to May 26, 1999, the date on which Trinidad’s denunciation of the American Convention entered into force.

C. Trinidad’s Attempt to Impose Limits on its Instrument of Acceptance Does Not Preclude Jurisdiction.

Trinidad’s instrument of acceptance attempted to limit the compulsory jurisdiction of this Court by including an addendum stating that Trinidad only recognized jurisdiction “consistent with the relevant sections of the Constitution of the Republic of Trinidad and Tobago; and provided that Judgment of the Court does not infringe, create or abolish any existing rights or duties of any private citizen.” However, this limitation has been deemed ineffective. The Inter-American Court is empowered by Articles 78(2) and 62(3) of the American Convention to exercise compulsory jurisdiction over States Parties with respect to any act that may constitute a violation of the obligations specified therein, when the act occurred prior to the effective date of denunciation. In the Hilaire case, this Court made clear that Trinidad cannot limit this Court’s jurisdiction by way of limitations that are “incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention.” The Court refused to subordinate the provisions of the Convention to restrictions

7 Hilaire, Inter-Am. Ct. H.R. (Ser. C) No. 80 at para. 44.

8 American Convention on Human Rights, supra note 2, art. 62(3): “The jurisdiction of the Court shall comprise all cases concerning the interpretation and application of the provisions of this Convention that are submitted to it, provided that the States Parties to the case recognize or have recognized such jurisdiction.”

9 American Convention on Human Rights, supra, art. 78(2): “Such denunciation shall not have the effect of releasing the State Party concerned from the obligations contained in this convention with respect to any act that may constitute a violation of those obligations and that has been taken by that state prior to the effective date of denunciation.”

that would render inoperative the Court’s jurisdictional role, and consequently, the human rights protection system established in the Convention.\textsuperscript{11} To hold that the State’s Constitution as the Court’s first point of reference, and the American Convention only as a subsidiary parameter, “would cause a fragmentation of the international legal order for the protection of human rights, and which would render illusory the object and purpose of the Convention.”\textsuperscript{12} The same reasoning applies to Mr. Caesar’s case, and this Court is therefore competent according to the terms of Articles 62(3) and 78(2) of the American Convention to hear the present case and to render its judgment.

III. TRINIDAD SUBJECTED MR. CAESAR TO AT LEAST SEVEN SEPARATE FORMS OF ABUSE, EACH OF WHICH CONSTITUTES AN INDEPENDENT, DISCRETE VIOLATION OF ARTICLE 5 OF THE AMERICAN CONVENTION.

A. For the Benefit of Both States and Prisoners, this Court Should Specifically Identify Each of the Abuses Suffered by Mr. Caesar that Violates Article 5 of the American Convention.

Due to the wide range of abuses committed against Mr. Caesar by Trinidad, the present case affords this Court an opportunity to substantially clarify the scope of Article 5 of the American Convention, ruling on whether certain discrete actions by a state party to the American Convention constitute cruel, inhuman, or degrading punishment. In so doing, the Court can both clarify states’ obligations under the Convention and grant prisoners in the Americas (as well as their advocates) a better understanding of detainees’ rights under the Convention. Hereafter, for example, both State authorities and prisoners would know whether it is permissible for detained persons to be subjected to, inter alia, substandard physical conditions, inadequate medical care, severe psychological suffering, or corporal punishment. Addressing the abuses suffered by Mr. Caesar at this level of detail would mark a significant advance in international jurisprudence regarding the treatment of prisoners, and would lend a valuable degree of transparency to the notion of “humane treatment” guaranteed to detained persons under Article 5 of the American Convention. For these reasons, amici curiae strongly urge this Court to individually address the many abuses suffered by Mr. Caesar as potential violations of Article 5, rather than folding these abuses into a totality-of-the-circumstances standard.

B. At Least Seven Separate Forms of Abuse Endured by Mr. Caesar Violated His Right to Humane Treatment Under Article 5 of the American Convention.

As demonstrated by the facts set forth in the Commission Application and its accompanying Affidavit of Winston Caesar, Trinidad is responsible for a series of abuses against Mr. Caesar while he was in detention. In the Neira Alegria et al. case, this Court found that:
[E]very person deprived of her or his liberty has the right to live in detention conditions compatible with her or his personal dignity, and the State must guarantee to that person the right to life and to humane treatment. Consequently, since the State is the institution responsible for detention establishments, it is the guarantor of these rights of the prisoners.\textsuperscript{13}

Considering the treatment Mr. Caesar endured while in detention, it is clear that Trinidad has flagrantly violated its duty to guarantee his rights under Article 5 of the American Convention. Article 5, the “Right to Humane Treatment” provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

1. Every person has the right to have his physical, mental, and moral integrity respected.
2. No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman, or degrading punishment or treatment. All persons deprived of their liberty shall be treated with respect for the inherent dignity of the human person.

6. Punishments consisting of deprivation of liberty shall have as an essential aim the reform and social readaptation of the prisoners.\textsuperscript{14}

There can be little argument that the abuses suffered by Mr. Caesar, taken together, constitute cruel, inhuman, or degrading punishment in violation of Article 5 of the American Convention.\textsuperscript{15}

We further contend, however, that under international law and this Court’s jurisprudence, each of the seven autonomous instances of abuse suffered by Mr. Caesar constitutes an independent, cognizable violation of his right to humane treatment.

\textsuperscript{14} American Convention on Human Rights, supra note 2, art. 5.
\textsuperscript{15} Id.
1. Trinidad Violated Mr. Caesar’s Article 5 Rights by Subjecting Him to Physical Conditions of Detention that were Degrading and Inhuman.

   The physical prison conditions to which Trinidadian authorities subjected Mr. Caesar constitute a violation of the right to humane treatment under Article 5 of the American Convention. In assessing the severity of prison conditions, this Court, the European Court of Human Rights (“ECHR” or “the European Court”), and the Human Rights Committee (the body charged with interpreting and applying the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the “ICCPR Committee”) have considered the cumulative effects of treatment and facilities, paying particular attention to overcrowding, lack of bedding and unsanitary hygienic facilities. Based on such criteria, both this Court and the ICCPR Committee have condemned Trinidad for its consistently poor treatment of prisoners. The physical conditions under which Mr. Caesar was detained are remarkably similar to those for which Trinidad has previously been called to account, and these circumstances of incarceration clearly violated Mr. Caesar’s rights under Article 5 of the American Convention.

   This Court recently concluded, on the basis of the evidence offered in the Hilaire, Constantine and Benjamin et al. case, that overcrowded, unsanitary conditions and other deficiencies are typical of Trinidad’s prison system.\(^\text{16}\) This Court found that such conditions “compel the victims to live under circumstances that impinge on their physical and psychological integrity and therefore constitute cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment”\(^\text{17}\) in violation of Article 5. The victims in the Hilaire, Constantine and Benjamin et al. case were subjected to grossly overpopulated and unsanitary conditions for sustained periods of time, ranging from four years to nearly twelve years.\textsuperscript{18} Cells measuring 90 square feet held up to 14 prisoners who were sometimes forced to sleep sitting or standing up.\textsuperscript{19} The cells were hot and unventilated, and lacked adequate toilets, requiring everyone in the cell to use a single bucket, or “slop pail,” that was emptied only twice a day.\textsuperscript{20}

Similarly, Mr. Caesar for nearly eight years slept on a carpet or thin mat, in a hot, unventilated, and overcrowded cell, and shared a slop pail with several other inmates. Though his cell was not as overcrowded as the almost unimaginable conditions described in the \textit{Hilaire, Constantine and Benjamin et al.} case, Trinidadian authorities nonetheless subjected Mr. Caesar to detention conditions that qualify as inhuman and degrading under the standard articulated in that case. Namely, he was compelled him to live under circumstances that impinged on his physical and psychological integrity and therefore constituted cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment\textsuperscript{21} in violation of Article 5.

This Court’s condemnation of degrading detention facilities in the \textit{Hilaire, Constantine and Benjamin et al.} case is only its most recent statement concerning deficient detention conditions. This Court previously found violations of the right to humane treatment in the \textit{Suárez Rosero} Case, where a detainee was held in a 15-square-meter cell shared with 16 others, obliged to sleep on newspaper, and lacked necessary hygiene facilities. The Court concluded that, “For all those reasons, the treatment to which Mr. Suárez Rosero was subjected may be described as cruel, inhuman and degrading” in violation of Article 5(2).\textsuperscript{22}

Like Mr. Suárez Rosero, Mr. Caesar was subjected to overpopulated, unsanitary facilities and lacked bedding or a mattress. He slept on a mat on the floor or on a thin carpet in two different prisons over a period of nearly eight years. Prison officials deprived him of even rudimentary toilet facilities, forcing him to endure unhygienic conditions that created significant risks of the spread of disease as well as the constant stench of human feces, thus further contributing to the violation of his right to humane treatment. Like the conditions to which Mr. Suárez Rosero was subjected, Mr. Caesar’s detention conditions may accurately be described as cruel, inhuman and degrading in violation of Article 5.

The European Court has found that “[w]hen assessing conditions of detention, account has to be taken of the cumulative effects of these conditions, as well as of specific allegations made by the applicant.” In Dougoz v. Greece the ECHR found that “[t]he serious overcrowding and absence of sleeping facilities, combined with the inordinate length of the period during which he was detained in such conditions, amounted to degrading treatment contrary to Article 3.” The conditions of detention to which Trinidad subjected Mr. Caesar are quite similar to those at the Alexandras police headquarters where the applicant in Dougoz was confined from April 1998 to December 1998, except that Mr. Caesar endured such conditions for a much longer period, spending almost eight years without bedding in overpopulated cells at Golden Grove Prison and Carrera Convict Prison. Under the European Court’s standards, Mr. Caesar’s conditions of confinement clearly qualify as degrading treatment.

The ICCPR Committee has classified such prison conditions as inhuman in several individual communications concerning Trinidad, concluding that the conditions of confinement in various sites of detention and imprisonment in Trinidad violate Articles 10 and 7 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (“ICCPR”), to which Trinidad acceded on December 21, 1978. For instance, in Neptune v. Trinidad and Tobago, the Committee noted that:

[T]he author’s claims that he is sharing a 9 by 6 feet cell with six to nine fellow prisoners, that there are only three beds in the cell, that there is not enough natural light, that he was aired only half an hour once every two/three weeks and that the food is inedible…are not compatible with the requirements of article 10, paragraph 1, of the Covenant, which stipulates that prisoners and detainees shall be treated with humanity and with respect for the inherent dignity of the human person.26

In Xavier Evans v. Trinidad and Tobago, Trinidad detained an inmate for five years in “a cell measuring 6 by 9 feet, with no sanitation except for a slop pail, no natural light, being allowed out of his cell only once or twice a week during which he was restrained in handcuffs, and with wholly inadequate food.”27 The ICCPR Committee concluded that that these conditions of detention, taken together, amount to a violation of Article 10, paragraph 1 of the ICCPR, which holds: “All persons deprived of their liberty shall be treated with humanity and with respect for the inherent dignity of the human person.”28 The conditions described in Neptune and Xavier Evans mirror those inflicted upon Mr. Caesar.

25 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, opened for signature Dec. 19, 1966, arts. 7 and 10 (entered into force Mar. 23, 1976). Article 7 states, “No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. In particular, no one shall be subjected without his free consent to medical or scientific experimentation.” Article 10(1) states, “All persons deprived of their liberty shall be treated with humanity and with respect for the inherent dignity of the human person.” Trinidad acceded to the First Optional Protocol of the ICCPR (accepting the ICCPR Committee’s competence to receive individual communications from persons subject to Trinidadian jurisdiction) on November 14, 1980. Trinidad denounced the First Optional Protocol on June 27, 2000.

28 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, supra note 23, art. 10.
The United Nations has promulgated Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners ("U.N. Standard Minimum Rules") that establish the most fundamental responsibilities of States with regard to those who are detained. This Court has looked to these rules for guidance in assessing the appropriateness of prisoner treatment. In the Urso Branco Prison case, for example, this Court deemed it "pertinent and necessary...for conditions at that penitentiary to be in accordance with applicable international standards for protection of human rights." In Urso Branco this Court looked to the U.N. Standard Minimum Rules as the "applicable international standards" on a variety of issues related to prison conditions, including its ruling that, "Corporal punishment, punishment by placing in a dark cell, and all cruel, inhuman or degrading punishments [are] completely prohibited as punishments for disciplinary offences."

The conditions imposed upon Mr. Caesar by Trinidad plainly violate Rules 10, 12 and 19 of the U.N. Standard Minimum Rules. Rule 10 requires that "all accommodation provided for the use of prisoners and in particular all sleeping accommodation shall meet all requirements of health." Rule 10 further establishes that cells shall have "minimum floor space, lighting, heating and ventilation." Trinidad violated this Rule by subjecting Mr. Caesar to severely overcrowded, unventilated, and hot cells with poor hygienic conditions highlighted by the use of a common slop pale in lieu of a toilet. Moreover, Rule 19 states that, "Every prisoner shall, in accordance with local or national standards, be provided with a separate bed, and with separate and sufficient bedding which shall be clean when issued, kept in good order and changed often enough to ensure its cleanliness.”\textsuperscript{34} The State also violated this condition by depriving Mr. Caesar of a mattress or bedding. Finally, Rule 12 requires that sanitary installations “be adequate to enable every prisoner to comply with the needs of nature when necessary and in a clean and decent manner.”\textsuperscript{35} The State clearly violated this standard by forcing Mr. Caesar to share an unhygienic slop pail with several other prisoners.

Trinidad has a well-documented history of subjecting its prisoners to poor, often unconscionable prison conditions. The physical detention conditions to which Trinidad subjected Mr. Caesar were no exception to this pattern, and they fall far short of the standards of humane treatment articulated by this Court, the European Court, and the ICCPR Committee, as well as the standards for prisoner treatment established in the U.N. Standard Minimum Rules. The conditions under which the State detained Mr. Caesar failed to ensure respect for his human dignity, and violated his right not to be subjected to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment under Article 5 of the American Convention.

2. Trinidad Violated Article 5 by Failing to Provide Mr. Caesar with Adequate Medical Treatment for His Ailments, Independent of Those Resulting from His Flogging.

The responsibility of the State for ensuring humane conditions in detention facilities within its jurisdiction has been clearly recognized by this Court, the ECHR, and the ICCPR Committee. Though this Court has not previously been asked to rule on whether failure to provide medical care to prisoners can constitute a violation of Article 5, it follows logically from

\textsuperscript{34} Id., rule 19

\textsuperscript{35} Id., rule 12. See also rule 15: Prisoners shall be required to keep their persons clean, and to this end they shall be provided with water and with such toilet articles as are necessary for health and cleanliness.”
the principle articulated in Neira Alegría\(^{36}\) (and from other international jurisprudence) that while Mr. Caesar was in the State’s custody it was Trinidad’s responsibility to provide him with adequate medical treatment. Trinidad failed to meet this obligation. While incarcerated, Mr. Caesar suffered serious health problems such as tuberculosis and chronic hemorrhoids. His hemorrhoid-related bleeding was so severe that he feared fainting from loss of blood if he used the slop fail, and in 1996 his condition became so critical that he was placed in the infirmary for over a month. Though a doctor recommended surgery in 1992, Mr. Caesar did not receive adequate treatment for his ailments and had to wait six years before finally undergoing surgery on his hemorrhoids in January, 1998. Trinidad’s failure to provide timely and effective treatment violated its obligation to ensure humane conditions in its detention facilities, and therefore violated Mr. Caesar’s rights under Article 5 of the American Convention.

The European Court of Human Rights has expressly recognized the responsibility of States to provide adequate medical treatment to those in detention. In McGlinchey and Others v. United Kingdom, the ECHR held that in order to comply with Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights (“European Convention”),\(^{37}\) “a State must ensure that a person is detained in conditions which are compatible with respect for her human dignity…and that, given the practical demands of imprisonment, her health and well-being are adequately secured by, among other things, providing her with the requisite medical assistance.”\(^{38}\) In McGlinchey, the ECHR found that the United Kingdom contravened the Article 3 prohibition against inhuman and degrading treatment with respect to the victim, by failing to respond adequately to her dehydration and severe weight loss; these conditions eventually resulted in the victim’s death.\textsuperscript{39}

In the case of \textit{Tas v. Turkey}\textsuperscript{40}, the ECHR likewise considered an allegation that a State had breached Article 3 by failing to provide adequate medical treatment to a person in detention. In \textit{Tas}, however, the ECHR ruled that because the victim had received “prompt and effective medical treatment” an Article 3 violation had not occurred.\textsuperscript{41} These two cases demonstrate that the ECHR has articulated a clear standard under which a State’s failure to provide prompt and effective medical treatment to a detained person constitutes inhuman and degrading treatment. The treatment Mr. Caesar received in the present case was plainly not prompt and effective—Trinidad authorities failed to provide medically necessary surgery for a period of six years, and Mr. Caesar continues to suffer from hemorrhoid-related bleeding. We urge this Court to adopt a standard similar to the ECHR’s and, in doing so, to find Trinidad in violation of Mr. Caesar’s rights under Article 5 of the American Convention.

In \textit{Linton v. Jamaica},\textsuperscript{42} the ICCPR Committee found that the failure of a State to provide sufficient medical treatment to prisoners constitutes cruel and inhuman treatment in violation of Article 7 of the ICCPR.\textsuperscript{43} In \textit{Linton}, the victim had been shot in the hip during an attempt to escape from prison and, as a result of the inadequate medical treatment he received for his injuries, was left handicapped.\textsuperscript{44} The Committee found that “the denial of adequate medical care

\item \textsuperscript{43} Article 7 of the ICCPR, \textit{supra} note 23, holds: “No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. In particular, no one shall be subjected without his free consent to medical or scientific experimentation.”
\end{itemize}
after the injuries sustained in the aborted escape attempt of January 1988 constitutes cruel and inhuman treatment within the meaning of article 7.\textsuperscript{45}

In the present case, Trinidad’s failure to provide Mr. Caesar with adequate and timely treatment for his chronic hemorrhoid condition likewise constituted cruel and inhuman punishment. Like the victim in \textit{Linton}, Mr. Caesar endured and continues to endure physical suffering (including heavy bleeding) as a result of the State’s failure to provide him with timely medical care. Moreover, in Mr. Caesar’s case the actions of the State were even more egregious, because his medical ailments were not sustained during an attempt to escape from detention but were rather an ordinary instance of bad health, no doubt exacerbated by unhygienic prison conditions such as the shared slop pail. Whereas the ICCPR Committee went so far as to rule that States must provide adequate medical care to a prisoner even when he is arguably at fault for his own injuries, this Court is simply asked to find that Trinidad was required to treat the medical problems that Mr. Caesar developed as a matter of chance, or as a result of his poor detention conditions.

Trinidad’s failure to provide medical treatment to Mr. Caesar also contradicted the UN General Assembly’s Body of Principles for the Protection of All Persons under Any Form of Detention or Imprisonment and the UN’s Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners. Under Principle 24 of the Body of Principles for the Protection of All Persons under Any Form of Detention or Imprisonment, the State is responsible for ensuring that “medical care and treatment shall be provided whenever necessary. This care and treatment shall be provided

Furthermore, the UN’s Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners include a number of relevant provisions:

- Rule 22.2: Sick prisoners who require specialist treatment shall be transferred to specialized institutions or to civil hospitals. Where hospital facilities are provided in an institution, their equipment, furnishings and pharmaceutical supplies shall be proper for the medical care and treatment of sick prisoners, and there shall be a staff of suitable trained officers.\(^{47}\)

- Rule 24: The medical officer shall see and examine every prisoner as soon as possible after his admission and thereafter as necessary, with a view particularly to the discovery of physical or mental illness and the taking of all necessary measures.\(^{48}\)

- Rule 25.1: [T]he medical officer shall have the care of the physical and mental health of the prisoners and should daily see all sick prisoners, all who complain of illness, and any prisoner to whom his attention is specially directed.\(^{49}\)

The grossly inadequate medical care afforded Mr. Caesar in the present case meets none of these international standards. Presuming this Court does not intend to set a standard for proper treatment of detainees under Article 5 that is lower than the UN’s Standard Minimum Rules, it should find Trinidad’s failure to provide timely and effective medical treatment a violation of Article 5 of the American Convention.

3. Trinidad Violated Article 5 by Prolonging the Duration of Mr. Caesar’s Pre-Flogging Confinement and Repeatedly Leading Him to Believe That He Would Imminently Suffer Corporal Punishment.

The psychological abuse to which Mr. Caesar was subjected during his pre-flogging confinement constitutes inhuman treatment in violation of Article 5 of the American Convention.

\(^{49}\) Id., Rule 25.1.
International tribunals have concluded that the mere threat of cruel or inhuman treatment can itself constitute such treatment. Furthermore, in the case of people scheduled to be executed, tribunals have ruled that a prolonged delay in carrying out the punishment can qualify as cruel, degrading, and inhuman treatment. In the present case, Mr. Caesar was subjected to both a prolonged delay in the execution of his corporal punishment and repeated threats that his corporal punishment would imminently be carried out. Trinidad’s Court of Appeals confirmed Mr. Caesar’s sentence more than two years after the application for leave to appeal was filed, and the flogging occurred a further two years later, in clear violation of Trinidad law.\textsuperscript{50} This illegal period of extended waiting was made more painful by the fact that on four separate occasions prior to his flogging, during a period of over a year, prison officials took Mr. Caesar to the prison location where corporal punishment was administered without telling him whether he was going to receive his punishment. They never informed him of when his own sentence would be applied, and on each of these occasions the other prisoners were flogged while Mr. Caesar was not. By imposing this treatment, Trinidad authorities subjected Mr. Caesar to a prolonged period of mental anguish, induced by the looming threat of his impending corporal punishment and exacerbated by instances in which they deliberately led him to believe that his punishment was imminent. In doing this, Trinidad kept Mr. Caesar in a state of acute psychological distress\textsuperscript{51} for an extended period of time.

This Court, the European Court, and the ICCPR Committee have all recognized that the mere threat of torture or cruel and inhuman treatment can constitute a violation of a victim’s right to humane treatment, rising in some cases to the level of torture. In the \textit{Loayza-Tamayo}... case, this Court found that “intimidation with threats of further violence” against a detained person was a violation of the victim’s right to humane treatment under Article 5.52 Furthermore, this Court explicitly recognized in the Cantoral Benavides case that the threat of serious physical injury is a form of “psychological torture.”53 In the case of Campbell v. Cosans, the European Court similarly ruled that merely threatening someone with conduct that is cruel or inhuman can itself constitute cruel or inhuman treatment provided the threat is real and immediate.54 The ICCPR Committee reached a similar conclusion in Miguel Angel Estrella v. Uruguay, classifying the threat of serious injury as a form of psychological torture.55 This Court cited Campbell and Miguel Angel Estrella in reaching the “conclusion that a true international system prohibiting all forms of torture has been put in place.”56 Under this system, both physical and psychological torture are recognized as violations of victims’ human rights, and the mere threat of cruelty may cause sufficient psychological suffering to qualify as inhuman treatment. The psychological suffering inflicted upon Mr. Caesar in the present case clearly rises to this level. By prolonging the pre-flogging detention of Mr. Caesar and repeatedly leading him to believe that his corporal punishment was imminent, Trinidad deliberately caused him tremendous mental anguish.

The jurisprudence of this Court and the European Court clearly establishes that prolonged detention in anticipation of punishment induces mental anguish that rises to the level of cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment. In the Hilaire, Constantine and Benjamin et al. case, this Court found that Trinidad had subjected prisoners to cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment by forcing them to anticipate punishment over a considerable period of time.\textsuperscript{57} The victims in \textit{Hilaire, Constantine and Benjamin et al.} were detained by the Trinidadian authorities for periods lasting between four years and eleven years and nine months, from the time of their arrest to the resolution of their final appeals.\textsuperscript{58} After the victims were sentenced to death, officials detained them in cells that were very close to the execution chamber, the door of which was adorned by drawings of a figure with a rope around its neck and a message that read, “You have come here to be executed.”\textsuperscript{59} Officials further taunted the prisoners with questions about their favorite meals as part of their last wishes during periodic checks of the prisoners’ weight.\textsuperscript{60} This Court found that this pre-punishment procedure “both terrorizes and depresses the prisoners—others cannot sleep due to nightmares, much less eat.”\textsuperscript{61} The constant threat that they may be hanged at any moment “impinge[d] on their physical and psychological integrity and therefore constitute[d] cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment.”\textsuperscript{62} The severe mental anguish to which Mr. Caesar was subjected during his prolonged, illegal pre-flogging confinement similarly amounted to cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment. For two years he lived with the constant threat that he could at any time be subjected to the extreme physical suffering associated with flogging by cat-o-nine tails, a threat made all the more agonizing and real by the State’s unexplained stationing of him in the pre-corporal punishment prison cells on four separate occasions.

Like this Court, the ECHR has also concluded that forcing prisoners to endure prolonged periods of detention awaiting punishment, particularly in the case of executions, causes them to suffer severe mental anxiety in violation of their right to humane treatment. For instance, in Tyrer v. United Kingdom, the ECHR concluded that an interval of several weeks between the applicant’s conviction and the execution of the punishment subjected the defendant to the severe mental anguish of anticipating the violence he was to have inflicted on him.\(^{63}\) In Soering v. United Kingdom,\(^{64}\) the European Court concluded that condemned prisoners in the United States are subject to tension-ridden waiting periods that extend for many years prior to execution as a consequence of complex judicial proceedings. The Soering Court clarified that “account is to be taken not only of the physical pain experienced but also, where there is a considerable delay before execution of the punishment, of the person’s mental anguish of anticipating the violence he is to have inflicted on him.”\(^{65}\) It is the element of staying the punishment, and the mental and psychological anguish the stay entails, that was the decisive factor in Soering. This Court should, in the present case, likewise focus on the stay of Mr. Caesar’s punishment and on the intense psychological distress he suffered as a result of the length and circumstances of this stay.

Though Mr. Caesar suffered corporal, rather than capital, punishment in the present case, the length of his pre-flogging detention and the State’s deliberate threats of imminent physical suffering justify extending the above precedents to the treatment inflicted upon him. Indeed, the focus of these legal precedents is on the extent of the psychological suffering that the State inflicts upon the victim; though the type of punishment that the victim is scheduled to endure is relevant, it is by no means the only consideration. In the present case, there can be little doubt that Trinidad’s actions caused Mr. Caesar excessive mental anguish rising to the level of inhuman treatment. Counting only the time after his last appeal was turned down, Trinidad detained Mr. Caesar for a period of two years while he awaited corporal punishment. During this time, he was on four occasions deliberately subjected to the imminent threat of flogging, an experience which he described in his affidavit as follows, “It was mental torture waiting for my turn and I was shaking…I was subjected to the same thing on 3 further occasions… I suffered mental and emotional torture. I was very frightened every time.”\textsuperscript{66} Trinidad not only violated its own corporal punishment legislation by waiting two years (rather than the maximum six months) to flog Mr. Caesar, but State authorities made the delay an especially painful psychological experience. Examined in light of the aforementioned international standards, the circumstances of the stay of Mr. Caesar’s punishment clearly give rise to the conclusion that Trinidad violated Article 5 of the American Convention by prolonging the duration of his confinement pending the flogging and repeatedly subjecting him to the real and imminent threat that his corporal punishment was about to take place.

\textbf{4. Trinidad Violated Article 5 by Repeatedly Exposing Mr. Caesar to the Anguish of the Flogging He Was Sentenced to Suffer.}

Exposing Mr. Caesar to the suffering and anguish resulting from flogging by the cat-o-nine tails prior to his own punishment constitutes another independent violation of the right to humane treatment under Article 5, separate from, but related to, the violation related to delay and threats of punishment discussed above. Trinidad severely aggravated the psychological challenges of imprisonment for Mr. Caesar by forcibly exposing him to the suffering of fellow inmates as they were subjected to corporal punishment. On four different occasions he witnessed the consequences of their flogging. He could see their wounds bleeding and hear some of them

crying in pain as he awaited his own flogging. By deliberately placing Mr. Caesar in these situations, the State is responsible for violating his right to humane treatment under Article 5 of the American Convention.

This Court has explicitly recognized psychological torture as a violation of Article 5.67 In the Cantoral Benavides case, the Court found that a victim of physical torture had also suffered psychological torture, in part because the victim was forced to listen his brother’s cries as his brother was beaten by police.68 Likewise, the ECHR in the case of Akkoc v. Turkey found that a victim’s being “forced to listen to the sounds of other persons being ill-treated” contributed to her torture in violation of Article 3 of the European Convention.69 In the present case, the deliberate psychological trauma caused Mr. Caesar when Trinidad repeatedly exposed him to the physical anguish of other inmates who were flogged likewise constitutes a violation of Article 5.

The ICCPR Committee has recognized that deliberately exposing detained persons to the anguish of their impending punishments qualifies as cruel and inhuman treatment within the meaning of Article 7 of the ICCPR. In the case of Linton v. Jamaica, an inmate who had been sentenced to death was transferred to a death cell and thereafter teased by prison warders who described in detail every stage of his impending execution.70 In the view of the ICCPR Committee, the psychological trauma inflicted upon the victim when he was subjected to detailed accounts of his oncoming punishment constituted cruel and inhuman treatment.71 In the present case, Trinidad prison officials exposed Mr. Caesar not just to descriptions of the flogging he was scheduled to endure, but also to the physical scars and suffering of fellow prisoners who had just been lashed. By repeatedly exposing Mr. Caesar to the anguish he would suffer as a result of the flogging, the State deliberately caused him tremendous psychological suffering and violated his rights under Article 5 of the American Convention.

5. Trinidad Violated Article 5 by Subjecting Mr. Caesar to a Flogging by The Cat-O-Nine Tails.

To date, this Court has not considered whether judicially sanctioned corporal punishment, standing alone, is a violation of the American Convention. Other international adjudicative bodies, and many national governments, condemn corporal punishment as a per se violation of the right to humane treatment under international law, incompatible with basic human rights standards such as those enshrined in the American Convention. Mr. Caesar’s case provides this Court an opportunity to condemn corporal punishment as an independent violation of Article 5.

The European Court and the ICCPR Committee have explicitly classified judicial corporal punishment as a human rights violation. In Tyrer v. United Kingdom, the ECHR condemned the practice as constituting “institutionalized violence…permitted by the law, ordered by the judicial authorities of the State and carried out by the police authorities of the State” in violation of the European Convention.\(^{72}\) Similarly, the ICCPR Committee recently considered corporal punishment in Trinidad and found that it constitutes cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment. In Boodlal Sooklal v. Trinidad and Tobago, where the claimant was sentenced to 12 strokes of the birch in connection with a conviction of sexual intercourse and serious indecency with minors, the ICCPR Committee strongly condemned corporal punishment: “[I]rrespective of the nature of the crime that is to be punished, however brutal it may be, it is the firm opinion of the Committee that corporal punishment constitutes cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment contrary to article 7” of the ICCPR. The Committee found that “by imposing a sentence of whipping with the birch, the State party has violated the author’s rights under article 7.”\(^73\) The ruling affirmed the ICCPR Committee’s view in General Comment 20, that the prohibition on torture and cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment contained in Article 7 of the ICCPR “must extend to corporal punishment, including excessive chastisement ordered as punishment for a crime or as an educative or disciplinary measure.”\(^74\)

The U.N. Special Rapporteur on Torture has also condemned the use of judicial corporal punishment in various countries and has sought the dismissal of sentences involving corporal punishment.\(^75\) U.N. Special Rapporteur Nigel Rodley has taken the view that:

> [C]orporal punishment is inconsistent with the prohibition of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment enshrined, \textit{inter alia}, in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the ICCPR, the Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Being Subjected to Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.”\(^76\)

In his 1997 report to the U.N. Human Rights Commission, Mr. Rodley emphasized that he could not accept:

> the notion that the administration of such punishments as stoning to death, flogging and amputation—acts which would be unquestionably unlawful in, say, the context of custodial interrogation—can be deemed lawful simply because the

Punishment has been authorized in a procedurally legitimate manner, i.e. through the sanction of legislation, administrative rules or judicial order.... Punishment is, after all, one of the prohibited purposes of torture. Moreover, regardless of which ‘lawful sanctions’ might be excluded from the definition of torture, the prohibition of cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment remains.\(^77\)

In addition to the broad international support for classifying corporal punishment as cruel and inhuman, there is also a wide and growing consensus among state governments that corporal punishment should be abolished. Since 1997, judicial corporal punishment has been abolished or declared unconstitutional in several countries, including Jamaica, St. Vincent and the Grenadines, South Africa and Zambia. In 1997, South Africa abolished corporal punishment as part of its penal system. Its legislature passed the Abolition of Corporal Punishment Act, repealing the statutory provisions that allowed judicial and other forms of corporal punishment.\(^78\) Section 1 of the Abolition of Corporal Punishment Act provides that “[a]ny law which authorises corporal punishment by a court of law, including a court of traditional leaders, is hereby repealed to the extent that it authorises such punishment.”\(^79\) Similarly, Zambia’s legislature enacted an amendment to its Penal Code in 2003. The stated aim of this law was to abolish corporal punishment as an available form of punishment.\(^80\) In a 1997 ruling, a Jamaican appellate court declared that the law allowing punishments of flogging had lapsed after World War II, and corporal punishment is no longer practiced in that country.\(^81\) The exclusion of corporal punishment from different countries’ penal systems demonstrates the growing consensus in the international community that corporal punishment is contrary to human dignity. Indeed, a recent study by Amnesty International found that only 31 of the world’s 192 countries still provide for judicial corporal punishment by national law; judicially-sanctioned punishments have been carried out in a mere 14 of these countries since 1997.

The condemnation of corporal punishment, at both international and national levels, is approaching universal. Mr. Caesar’s case gives this Court an opportunity to add its voice to the growing international consensus by expressly concluding that flogging by cat-o-nine tails specifically, and judicial corporal punishment more generally, constitute per se violations of the right to be free of cruel and inhuman treatment under Article 5 of the American Convention.

6. Trinidad Violated Article 5 by Humiliating Mr. Caesar During the Administration of the Flogging.

The circumstances under which Trinidad administered Mr. Caesar’s corporal punishment constitute degrading punishment in violation of Article 5 of the American Convention. Considering facts less severe than those in the present case, international tribunals have held that debasing prisoners through degrading punishment contravenes the standards that preserve their personal dignity and integrity. This Court has yet to address this matter directly in its jurisprudence, and the present case affords the Court an ideal opportunity to condemn as a violation of Article 5 punishments that deliberately aim to humiliate and debase prisoners.

In Tyrer, the European Court analyzed whether the circumstances surrounding punishment with three strokes of the birch were “degrading.” The victim in Tyrer was whipped at a police station. Police officers forced the applicant to take down his trousers and underpants and bend over a table.\textsuperscript{84} Two policemen held him while a third flogged him in the presence of the applicant’s father and a doctor.\textsuperscript{85} The Court found that “the applicant was subjected to a punishment in which the element of humiliation attained the level inherent in the notion of ‘degrading punishment.’”\textsuperscript{86} It reasoned that for a punishment to be “degrading,” the humiliation or debasement involved must attain a particular level and the assessment is relative since “it depends on all the circumstances of the case and, in particular, on the nature and context of the punishment itself and the manner and method of its execution.”\textsuperscript{87} The ECHR concluded that, “[A]lthough the applicant did not suffer any severe or long-lasting physical effects, his punishment—whereby he was treated as an object in the power of the authorities—constituted an assault on precisely that which it is one of the main purposes of Article 3 to protect, namely a person’s dignity and physical integrity.”\textsuperscript{88} In the case of \textit{Polay Campos v. Peru}, the ICCPR Committee likewise focused on the victim’s human dignity, specifically addressing the way in which the public nature of a punishment can degrade and debase the person being punished. In \textit{Polay Campos}, the ICCPR Committee concluded that displaying a prisoner to the press in a cage constituted degrading treatment in violation of Article 7 of the ICCPR.\textsuperscript{89}

Here, the Trinidad authorities deliberately administered Mr. Caesar’s punishment under circumstances that were even more degrading than those in \textit{Tyrer} and \textit{Polay Campos}. They forced Mr. Caesar to strip and lie naked on a metal contraption, after which prison officers tied his hands and feet tightly and covered his head with a sheet. Unclothed and disoriented, he was then flogged with the cat-o-nine tails. Like the victim in Tyrer, Mr. Caesar was treated as “an object in the power of the authorities,” and suffered corporal punishment under humiliating circumstances that amounted to degrading punishment. Moreover, like the treatment inflicted upon the victim in Polay Campos, Trinidad further debased Mr. Caesar showcasing his punishment before a number of people. Trinidad flogged him in the presence of the prison doctor, two prison officers, the Chief Infirmary Officer, the Prison Supervisor and two other strangers—most of whom played no role in actually administering the corporal punishment. Trinidad thus debased Mr. Caesar in two ways during the course of his flogging: by treating him as an object, solely at the mercy and whim of State power; and by converting his humiliation and objectification into a public spectacle. These circumstances showed a callous disregard for Mr. Caesar’s human dignity and were sufficiently degrading to constitute an independent violation of Trinidad’s obligations under Article 5 of the American Convention.

7. Trinidad Violated Article 5 by Failing to Provide Mr. Caesar with Adequate Medical Treatment for Injuries Sustained During his Flogging.

As Mr. Caesar’s sole source of medical treatment while in prison, the State had an obligation to provide him with medical attention for the injuries that resulted from his flogging. Though his pain was temporarily dulled by the provision of painkillers, the State provided no further medical assistance to Mr. Caesar. Trinidad provided no treatment for his wounds, leaving them slow to heal and susceptible to infection, and to this day Mr. Caesar feels pain in his shoulders as a result of the flogging. Beyond placing him in the infirmary, the State had no regard for Mr. Caesar’s severely weakened state, brought on by the combined effects of his hemorrhoid surgery and his flogging. In failing to provide Mr. Caesar with adequate medical treatment for injuries sustained during the flogging, the State violated his right to humane treatment under Article 5 of the American Convention.
In the case of Ilhan v. Turkey, the European Court found that inadequate medical treatment following physical abuse of a detainee amounted to torture in violation of Article 3 of the European Convention. In that case, agents of the State kicked and beat the detained victim, and struck him with a rifle. They then waited 36 hours before providing him medical treatment, leading the Court to find that, “[h]aving regard to the severity of the ill-treatment suffered by Abdüllatif Ilhan and the surrounding circumstances, including the significant lapse in time before he received proper medical attention, the Court finds that he was a victim of very serious and cruel suffering that may be characterised as torture” in violation of Article 3’s prohibition of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. In the present case, as in Ilhan, Mr. Caesar received inadequate medical care in response to injuries inflicted by agents of the State. After flogging him to a state of unconsciousness, Trinidad provided only painkillers as treatment for injuries so serious that they required Mr. Caesar to remain in the infirmary for a period of two months following his punishment.

The ICCPR Committee has found that depriving detainees of medical attention for injuries inflicted by agents of the State amounts to cruel and inhuman treatment. In Essono Mika Miha v. Equatorial Guinea, the ICCPR Committee considered the case of a former civil servant who had been imprisoned, tortured, deprived of food and water, and denied medical attention for well over one month. The Committee stated that the victim “was subjected to torture at the prison of Bata, in violation of article 7,” and that, “the denial of medical attention after the ill-treatment in the, or outside the, prison of Bata, amounts to cruel and inhuman treatment within the meaning of article 7."\textsuperscript{95} In a similar fashion, Trinidad violated Article 5 of the American Convention by failing to provide adequate medical treatment to Mr. Caesar for the injuries sustained during his flogging by agents of the State.

Finally, Trinidad’s failure to provide sufficient medical treatment following Mr. Caesar’s flogging contravenes the U.N. Standard Minimum Rules, which state in relevant part, “The medical officer shall see and examine every prisoner as soon as possible after his admission and thereafter as necessary, with a view particularly to the discovery of physical or mental illness and the taking of all necessary measures.”\textsuperscript{96} It further contravenes Principle 24 of the UN General Assembly’s Body of Principles for the Protection of All Persons under Any Form of Detention or Imprisonment, which provides that “medical care and treatment shall be provided whenever necessary.”\textsuperscript{97} The persuasive nature of these international norms, combined with that of the aforementioned judgments of the ECHR and the ICCPR Committee, provide substantial weight to the notion that states have an obligation to provide adequate medical treatment to a detained person who has been injured by State agents. We urge this Court to explicitly recognize this obligation, and in doing so, to find that Trinidad violated Mr. Caesar’s rights under Article 5 of the American Convention by failing to provide him adequate treatment following his flogging.

IV. TRINIDAD’S FLOGGING OF MR. CAESAR WITH THE CAT-O-NINE TAILS CONSTITUTES TORTURE AND THEREFORE QUALIFIES FOR EXTRAORDINARY CONDEMNATION UNDER INTERNATIONAL LAW.

Part III(B)(5) of this brief asserted that the flogging of Mr. Caesar constitutes an independent violation of Article 5 on the basis that the flogging violated Mr. Caesar’s right to humane treatment. This section argues in Part A that state-sanctioned flogging by means of the cat-o-nine tails, standing alone, in fact constitutes “torture,” the most severe form of violation governed by Article 5 of the American Convention. Alternatively, flogging exacerbated by certain other inflicted abuses present in this case constitutes torture. Part B of this section argues that, in either case, the classification of Mr. Caesar’s treatment as torture is important because of the distinctions under international law between torture and other forms of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment.

A. Trinidad’s Flogging of Mr. Caesar with the Cat-O-Nine Tails Constitutes Torture.

1. Torture is Differentiated under International Law from Other Forms of Cruel, Inhuman, or Degrading Treatment.

The UN Convention Against Torture and Other Forms of Cruel, Inhuman, or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (“Torture Convention”) defines torture as “any act by which severe pain or suffering, whether physical or mental, is intentionally inflicted on a person for such purposes as…punishing him for an act he or a third person has committed.”\(^98\) The essence of torture, as distinct from other forms of cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment, is (1) the severity of the ill-treatment, measured by the ‘intensity test’; and (2) the notion that a special stigma should attach to deliberate inhuman treatment. In Ireland v. United Kingdom, the ECHR concluded that “it was the intention that the [European] Convention, with its distinction between ‘torture’ and ‘inhuman or degrading treatment,’ should by the first of these attach a special stigma to deliberate inhuman treatment causing very serious and cruel suffering.” Torture is thus distinguished from other forms of cruel, degrading and inhuman treatment as a matter of degree and kind; it is both intentional and more severe.

In the Loayza Tamayo case, this Court adopted the “intensity test,” first established in the Ireland case, to distinguish between “torture” and “cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment”:

The violation of the right to physical and psychological integrity of persons is a category of violations that has several gradations and embraces treatment ranging from torture to other types of humiliation or cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment with varying degrees of physical and psychological effects caused by endogenous and exogenous factors.

The Loayza Tamayo case further demonstrates that this Court focuses on both the physical and psychological integrity of the victim in deciding whether a particular instance of cruel and inhuman treatment rises to the level of torture. Simply and unanimously stated by the U.N. General Assembly, such treatment amounts to torture if it is “an aggravated and deliberate form 100 Id. (emphasis added), citing UN General Assembly Resolution 3452 of 9 December 1975, adopted unanimously. Ireland has become the standard and is reiterated in cases of torture and cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment. See, e.g., Aktas v. Turkey, Eur. Ct. H. R. App. No. 24351/94 (2003) at para. 313 (“In determining whether a particular form of ill-treatment should be qualified as torture, consideration must be given to the distinction… In addition to the severity of the treatment, there is a purposive element, as recognized in the United Nations Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, which came into force on 26 June 1987, which defines torture in terms of the intentional infliction of severe pain or suffering with the aim, inter alia, of obtaining information, inflicting punishment or intimidating” (emphasis added)).

of cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment.”  Here again, the test for torture is based on two factors: severity and intent.

2. Trinidad’s Flogging of Mr. Caesar, Standing Alone, Meets the Test for Torture Under International Law.

Beyond holding that flogging is a violation of Article 5, this Court should explicitly hold that such flogging amounts to torture under international law. Flogging a prisoner with the cat-o-nine tails is a paradigmatic instance of torture, a repugnant remnant of colonial practices that serves three principal purposes: (1) the pure infliction of physical pain; (2) the degradation and dehumanization of the recipient; and (3) the display of state power to its citizens. Flogging with the cat-o-nine tails is a vicious and deliberate form of punishment that should be labeled “torture” by this Court.

a. Flogging with the Cat-O-Nine Tails is a Particularly Severe form of Cruel and Degrading Punishment as it is Designed to Inflict Maximum Physical Pain and Dehumanize the Victim.

Flogging with the cat-o-nine tails both inflicts severe pain and injury and humiliates and dehumanizes the victim. The principal function of the cat-o-nine tails is to inflict physical pain. In the present case, Mr. Caesar was strapped naked with his legs spread to a metal contraption called the “Merry Sandy.” Once his hands and legs were tightly bound, he was flogged 15 times with the cat-o-nine tails. The cat-o-nine tails—a device consisting of nine knotted cords attached to a handle—is specifically designed to lacerate and bruise the flesh of its victim. Tellingly, Mr. Caesar was flogged in the presence of the prison doctor, Dr. Chen. By providing physician’s oversight of the flogging of prisoners, the prison authorities demonstrated their anticipation that 103 U.N. General Assembly, 30th Session, “Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Being Subjected to Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment,” adopted by resolution 3452 (XXX) of 9 December 9 1975, art. 1(2).

Flogging would inflict a level of pain so severe and threatening to the health of the victim that a physician’s presence was necessary.

Beyond the acute physical pain that it inflicts, flogging with the cat-o-nine tails is a dehumanizing and humiliating evocation of slavery in the English-speaking Caribbean. The following passage from "Modernizing Slavery: Investigating the Legal Dimension," recalls that, even at the beginning of the 19th century, flogging and whipping were recognized as a brutal and dehumanizing symbol of the master-slave relationship:

The 1824 Order changed the legal terms for slave labor extraction. It made the use of the whip to coerce labor in the field illegal. The whip—a focus of slave protests and anti-slavery propaganda—symbolized the physical brutality, the barely restricted personal power owners exercised at the workplace, and the archaic nature of the chattel slave system. To limit its use was a first step to introducing modern labor extraction methods and it was recognized as such… The whip embodied the brutality of the system.

While some provisions of the Corporal Punishment (Offenders Over Sixteen) Act of 1953 gave Trinidad the right to flog convicts, Trinidad did not exercise this right for decades. The government began practicing corporal punishment in 1993 as part of a trend within English-speaking Caribbean countries—a trend to which human rights groups reacted with vehement opposition.

By reinstating not just corporal punishment but the practice of flogging with cat-o-nine tails in particular, Trinidad evoked a singularly dehumanizing remnant of its own past. The State now exercises the same absolute power over the prisoner—and the same disregard for his humanity—that the master once did over the slave. The resulting assault on the victim’s psychological integrity is perhaps just as vicious as the attack on his physical integrity.

105 See, e.g., Trinidad and Tobago: Corporal Punishment, Amnesty International AI Index: AMR 49/007/2000 (22 June 2000) (“Amnesty International opposes the use of corporal punishment as a violation of the right not to be subjected to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment guaranteed by Article 5 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.”)

In sum, flogging with the cat-o-nine tails satisfies the first part of the test for torture because it is a particularly severe form of physical and psychological punishment, distinguished from cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment by virtue of its intensity.

b. Trinidad’s Practice of Flogging with the Cat-O-Nine Tails is Deliberate.

There can be no doubt that Mr. Caesar’s flogging was an intentional, premeditated act carried out by agents of the Trinidadian State. Mr. Caesar was sentenced to 15 strokes of the cat-o-nine tails under the Trinidad and Tobago Corporal Punishment (Offenders Over Sixteen) Act of 1953, which provides in its Article 6, “Any male offender, above the age of sixteen years, on being convicted before the High Court of any of the offences mentioned in the Schedule, may be ordered by the Court to be flogged in addition to any other punishment to which he is liable.”

On February 5, 1998, prison officials administered Mr. Caesar’s sentence by flogging him 15 times with the cat-o-nine tails. The flogging was a deliberate act, prescribed by the laws of Trinidad and carried out by State agents, and therefore satisfies the second element of the test for torture under international law.

3. Trinidad’s Flogging Of Mr. Caesar, Exacerbated By Other Abuses, Constitutes Torture.

The flogging of Mr. Caesar was exacerbated by other abuses committed by Trinidad. These additional abuses, many of which constitute independent violations of Article 5 of the American Convention as set forth earlier in this brief, include: exposure to the suffering of prisoners subject to flogging; deliberate delay of the flogging; humiliating administration of flogging; and failure to provide medical treatment. This Court should find that, at the very least, the flogging of Mr. Caesar as aggravated by these circumstances amounts to torture.

In an oft-cited passage, Judge Zekia of the ECHR discussed the elements that the European Court should consider in determining whether the severity of an instance of ill treatment has been aggravated by other factors that might lead the Court to conclude that the treatment is severe enough to satisfy the first part of the test for torture:

Admittedly the word "torture" included in Article 3 of the Convention is not capable of an exact and comprehensive definition. It is undoubtedly an aggravated form of inhuman treatment causing intense physical and/or mental suffering. Although the degree of intensity and the length of such suffering constitute the basic elements of torture, a lot of other relevant factors had to be taken into account. Such as: the nature of ill-treatment inflicted, the means and methods employed, the repetition and duration of such treatment, the age, sex and health condition of the person exposed to it, the likelihood that such treatment might injure the physical, mental and psychological condition of the person exposed and whether the injuries inflicted caused serious consequences for short or long duration are all relevant matters to be considered together and arrive at a conclusion whether torture has been committed.\(^\text{107}\)

Applying Judge Zekia’s formulation to the case before this Court, it is plain that the severity of Mr. Caesar’s flogging was aggravated by its surrounding circumstances, resulting in “inhuman treatment causing intense physical and mental suffering.” On four separate occasions prior to his own punishment, Mr. Caesar was deliberately exposed to the immediate effects of flogging on others. On each occasion he was led to believe that his own torture was impending, and forced to witness the anguish of other prisoners after they were subjected to the same

H.R., App. No. 25803/94 at para. 100 (2000) ("'Severity'…depends on all the circumstances of the case, such as the duration of the treatment, its physical or mental effects and, in some cases, the sex, age and state of health of the victim, etc.").
torment he was anticipating with dread. In each instance he was returned to his cell with no explanation, only to continue awaiting his own flogging; this practice exacerbated the psychological impact of Mr. Caesar’s detention and of the flogging itself. Among the observers of the flogging was the prison doctor, who was fully aware of Mr. Caesar’s medical history and his health condition at the time. Mr. Caesar pleaded with him to take his feeble state into account. But the doctor, like the other prison officers present, ignored these pleas and authorized the flogging. After the flogging, the prison authorities neglected to provide Mr. Caesar with any medical treatment except painkillers, thus contributing to the long-term physical and mental suffering of Mr. Caesar.

In light of these reprehensible additional circumstances this Court should find that the flogging of Mr. Caesar, as exacerbated by surrounding abuses, was sufficiently severe to satisfy the first element of the test for torture under international law. As the flogging was also 108 The presence of a doctor is in and of itself an egregious violation of medical ethics; it also serves as a painful reminder of the practice of state-sponsored torture that prevailed in Latin America in the recent past. Doctors' involvement in torture, of whatever form and degree, is always contrary to medical ethics. In addition, doctors' involvement in torture is contrary to the Inter-American Convention to Prevent and Punish Torture (Organization of American States, 1985); the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (United Nations, 1948); the Body of Principles for the Protection of all Persons under any Form of Detention or Imprisonment (United Nations, 1988); The Declaration of Geneva (World Medical Association, 1948); the International Code of Medical Ethics (World Medical Association, 1949); and the Resolution on Human Rights (World Medical Association, 1990). According to the “UN Principles of Medical Ethics Relevant to the Role of Health Personnel, particularly Physicians, in the Protection of Prisoners and Detainees against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment”:

Principle 1: It is a gross contravention of medical ethics, as well as an offence under applicable international instruments, for health personnel, particularly physicians, to engage, actively or passively, in acts which constitute participation in, complicity in, incitement to or attempts to commit torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment... Principle 4: It is a contravention of medical ethics for health personnel, particularly physicians... b) To certify, or to participate in the certification of, the fitness of prisoners or detainees for any form of treatment or punishment that may adversely affect their physical or mental health and which is not in accordance with the relevant international instruments, or to participate in any way in the infliction of any such treatment or punishment which is not in accordance with the relevant international instruments.

unquestionably intentional, this Court should find that, in light of its aggravating circumstances, the flogging of Mr. Caesar constituted torture.

B. It is Important That This Court Expressly Hold that the Flogging of Mr. Caesar by Means of the Cat-O-Nine Tails Constituted Torture.

Amici curiae urge this Court to find that the practice of flogging constitutes “torture,” not mere “cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment,” because more severe legal consequences attach to the prohibition of torture.

1. Classifying Mr. Caesar’s Flogging as Torture Would Make His Treatment a Jus Cogens Violation.

One important reason to classify Mr. Caesar’s flogging as torture is that his treatment would then constitute a jus cogens violation. Article 53 of The Vienna Convention of the Law of Treaties defines jus cogens or a peremptory norm in international law as “a norm accepted and recognized by the international community of States as a whole as a norm from which no derogation is permitted.” The prohibition of torture has achieved the status of jus cogens and as such is absolute. The American Convention, like the entire body of the international law of torture, prohibits torture in absolute terms and makes no provisions for exceptions or derogations therefrom. In its judgment in Prosecutor v. Furundzija, the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (“ICTY”) explicitly recognized the prohibition on torture as jus cogens:

[T]he prohibition of torture laid down in human rights treaties enshrines an absolute right, which can never be derogated from, not even in time of emergency ... This is linked to the fact… that the prohibition on torture is a peremptory norm or jus cogens…

The most conspicuous consequence of this higher rank is that the principle at issue cannot be derogated from by States through international treaties or local or special customs or even general customary rules not endowed with the same normative force.\textsuperscript{110}

The ICTY described, in the strongest possible terms, the widespread international condemnation of torture, stating that, “There exists today universal revulsion against torture…This revulsion, as well as the importance States attach to the eradication of torture, has led to a cluster of treaty and customary rules on torture acquiring a particularly high status in the international, normative system.\textsuperscript{111}

Because the prohibition of torture is \textit{jus cogens}, the prohibition against flogging will become absolute in the event that this Court holds that such flogging in fact constitutes torture.

The significance of \textit{jus cogens} norms has been summarized as follows:

\[\text{[T]he implications of \textit{jus cogens} are those of a duty and not of optional rights… \textit{[Jus cogens]} obligations are non-derogable, in times of war as well as peace. Thus, recognizing certain international crimes as \textit{jus cogens} carries with it the duty to prosecute or extradite, the nonapplicability of statutes of limitation for such crimes, and universality of jurisdiction over such crimes irrespective of where they were committed, by whom (including Heads of State), against what category of victims, and irrespective of the context of their occurrence (peace or war). Above all, the characterization of certain crimes as \textit{jus cogens} places upon states the \textit{obligatio erga omnes} [obligation ‘flowing to all’] not to grant impunity to the violators of such crimes.}\textsuperscript{112}

\textsuperscript{111} \textit{Prosecutor v. Furundzija}, ICTY, Case No. IT-95-17/I-T at para. 147.

If this Court classifies flogging as torture, Trinidad and other states that practice such flogging will thus be barred from invoking state privileges and immunities to uphold the practice. These states will be compelled under international law to take effective measures to stamp out the practice and to punish those administering it, and those individuals responsible for flogging will be prosecutable outside the country where the flogging took place. Moreover, Trinidad’s denunciation of the American Convention—currently in effect—will in the future be no defense to its continued practice of flogging.

In sum, the prohibition of torture—as jus cogens—supercedes state sovereignty as an absolute and non-derogable international norm. For this reason, if the Court finds that flogging with the cat-o-nine tails (either standing alone or in combination with the other abuses suffered) constitutes torture, this finding will override any state attempt to invoke principles of state sovereignty to justify its practice of sentencing convicts to flogging.

2. Under the Torture Convention, the Classification of Mr. Caesar’s Flogging as Torture Has Other Significant Legal Ramifications.

Under the terms of the Torture Convention, states parties to that convention make important commitments with regard to the extradition, expulsion, and nonrefoulement of persons who may be subjected to torture. Article 3(1) of the Torture Convention states that, “No State Party shall expel, return ("refouler") or extradite a person to another State where there are substantial grounds for believing that he would be in danger of being subjected to torture.”

This provision is a reflection of the international community’s unconditional condemnation of torture, and an expression of its desire to protect all persons who are threatened with the practice. States parties commit themselves not to transfer persons, for any reason, to a country where they may be subject to torture. By classifying flogging as torture, this Court would provide legal protection under the Torture Convention to anyone who is scheduled to be returned, expelled, or extradited to a country where he or she faces a sentence of flogging. In the future, persons facing such a sentence could use this Court’s ruling that flogging constitutes torture to argue that they should not be returned to a country where the sentence would be carried out.

V. CONCLUSION

This Court has jurisdiction over the case at bar regarding violations of Article 5 of the American Convention. Neither Trinidad’s denunciation of the American Convention nor its attempt to impose limits on its instrument of acceptance preclude jurisdiction.

We urge the Court to find that Trinidad committed seven individual and discrete abuses amounting to “cruel, inhuman, or degrading punishment or treatment” in violation of Article 5 of the American Convention, and that cumulatively, these abuses unquestionably constituted a violation of Article 5.

We further urge the Court to find that Trinidad’s flogging of Mr. Caesar with a cat-o-nine tails, either standing alone or combined with the other abuses suffered, constituted torture.

Amicus curiae brief concerning the issue whether judicial corporal punishment constitutes “cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment” within the meaning of Article 5 of the American Convention on Human Rights

INTERIGHTS

(The International Centre for the Legal Protection of Human Rights)
Introduction

Amicus curiae is the International Centre for the Legal Protection of Human Rights (INTERIGHTS), an international human rights organisation based in the United Kingdom specialising in the application of international law in domestic and international fora. INTERIGHTS is a registered charity, independent of all ideologies and governments, which works to promote the effective use of international human rights standards and procedures. In pursuit of its goals, INTERIGHTS provides advice on the use of international and comparative law, assists individuals and organisations in bringing cases before appropriate bodies, disseminates information on international and comparative human rights law - through its Bulletin, the Commonwealth Human Rights Law Digest, and databases on international and comparative human rights law (www.interights.org) - and undertakes training and educational programmes for lawyers and judges. A critical aspect of INTERIGHTS’ activities involves the filing of amicus curiae briefs before national and international courts and tribunals. For twenty years INTERIGHTS has been assisting judges, lawyers, NGOs and victims in cases before national, regional and global tribunals raising issues of general importance concerning the interpretation of fundamental rights. This brief is submitted in the belief that this is one such case.

This amicus curiae brief is limited to the question whether judicial corporal punishment constitutes cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment or treatment (CIDPT), in accordance with Article 5 of the American Convention on Human Rights (hereinafter “the American Convention” or the “Convention”). It does not, of course, address the particular facts of the case before the Court.¹ Nor does it address the relevant doctrine and jurisprudence from the Inter-American system, addressed in the Application of the Commission. Rather, the purpose of this brief is to draw to the Court’s attention the approach of other international human rights bodies, and national courts, in giving effect to virtually identical provisions of international instruments and national laws in relation to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. It provides information, which it is hoped might assist the Court, in relation to the approach reflected across a growing body of international and national jurisprudence on judicially sanctioned corporal punishment as cruel inhuman and degrading punishment.²

¹ So far as relevant, this brief proceeds on the basis of the “Statement of facts” presented by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (hereinafter “the Commission”) in its Application to the Court in the present case dated 26 February 2003. Application of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights Before the Inter-American Court of Human Rights in the Case of Winston Caesar v. The Republic of Trinidad and Tobago (12.147), 26 February 2003, Part V (pp. 10-12).

Structure/Overview of the Brief

The present brief is structured in the following manner. Section A introduces the prohibition of cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment and punishment in international law, noting that the prohibition on such treatment or punishment is universal in nature. It is also absolute, and cannot be justified by any exceptional circumstances – including the nature of the crime committed or the aim that punishment pursues - nor by reference to the provisions of internal law. Section B notes the need to adopt an evolutive and dynamic approach to the prohibition, in line with changing conceptions of humane treatment within society and the international community more broadly. Section C sets out the basic elements of what constitutes cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment and distinguishes it from the suffering and humiliation inherent in and incidental to lawful punishment. Section D, which is the heart of the brief, focuses on the jurisprudence of international and national bodies in relation specifically to judicial corporal punishment as cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment.

The conclusion of this brief is that under current international law judicial corporal punishment, by its very nature, constitutes inhuman and degrading punishment. It should be noted that this does not, however, preclude the possibility that, in the circumstances of any particular case, judicial corporal punishment may also amount to torture. As, for example, the United Nations Declaration against Torture notes, torture is “an aggravated and deliberate form of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.” 3 The characterisation of corporal punishment as torture would depend, essentially, on the Court’s assessment of the severity of the treatment or punishment in light of prevalent circumstances, such as the duration of the treatment, its physical and mental effects and, in some cases, the sex, age and state of health of the victim. While there is international support for the view that corporal punishment may amount to torture,4 the focus of this brief is, however, on judicial corporal punishment as cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment.

Section A
The Universal and Absolute Nature of the Prohibition of Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Punishment or Treatment in International Law

Article 5 of the American Convention on Human Rights provides, in relevant part:

> “1. Every person has the right to have his physical, mental, and moral integrity respected. No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman, or degrading punishment or treatment.”

> “2. All persons deprived of their liberty shall be treated with respect for the inherent dignity of the human person.”

3 Article 1(2).

Every international human rights instrument of general scope, whether regional or universal, enshrines provisions similar in content to Article 5 of the American Convention. These include the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the European Convention on Human Rights, the African Charter on Human and Peoples’ Rights and the Arab Charter of Human Rights.5

These provisions are supplemented by the prohibition on cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment in specific international instruments, including Article 16 of the United Nations Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, which provides:

“Each State Party shall undertake to prevent in any territory under its jurisdiction other acts of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment which do not amount to torture […], when such acts are committed by or at the instigation of or with the consent or acquiescence of a public official or other person acting in an official capacity.”6

Cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment is universally prohibited and condemned. There is extremely widespread subscription to the aforementioned treaties and instruments. The prohibition is prevalent throughout national legal systems, reflected in constitutional and legislative provisions and the decisions of national courts (referred to further on in this brief).

Together national and international laws evidence “the almost universal condemnation of the practice of inhuman treatment.”7 It is today indisputable that the prohibition of cruel, inhuman and

5 Article 5 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights provides: “No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.”

Article 7 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (hereinafter “ICCPR”) provides in part: “No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.”

Article 3 of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (hereinafter “the European Convention”) provides: “No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.”

Article 5 of the African Charter of Human and Peoples’ Rights provides: “Every individual shall have the right to the respect of the dignity inherent in a human being […]. All forms of exploitation and degradation of man particularly slavery, slave trade, torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment and treatment shall be prohibited.”

Article 13 of the Arab Charter of Human Rights provides: “The State parties shall protect every person in their territory from physical or psychological torture, or from cruel, inhuman, degrading treatment. (The State parties) shall take effective measures to prevent such acts; performing or participating in them shall be considered a crime punished by law” ( unofficial translation from Arabic).

6 See also the United Nations Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Being Subjected to Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted by the General Assembly on 9 December 1975, Article 2 of which provides in part: “Any act of torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment is an offence to human dignity and shall be condemned as a denial of the purposes of the Charter of the United Nations and as a violation of the human rights and fundamental freedoms proclaimed in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. […].”

See also Article 3: “No State may permit or tolerate torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.”

degrading treatment found in the above-mentioned international instruments and declarations is paralleled by a customary international law norm of the same content and to the same effect. The prohibition on cruel inhuman and degrading punishment almost certainly falls within the group of principles described by the International Court of Justice in its Advisory Opinion on Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons as being “so fundamental to the respect of the human person and ‘elementary considerations of humanity’ [...]” that they are “to be observed by all States whether or not they have ratified the conventions that contain them, because they constitute intransgressible principles of customary international law.” 8

This prohibition on treatment or punishment that is cruel, inhuman or degrading is absolute. There are no exceptions to the prohibition. As recalled below, there can be no justification or excuse for a violation and no prevailing circumstances, whether in the particular case or in the context of the state more generally, and no provisions of national law, can justify deviation from this norm.

As a matter of treaty law, this is reflected first in the fact that the provisions prohibiting cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment are not subject to the “clawback” clauses which apply to some other rights, permitting limitations on account of considerations such as public order, national security, public morals and health. 9 The absolute nature of the prohibition is further confirmed by the fact that none of the above-mentioned instruments provides for derogation in relation to the prohibition on the basis of national emergency. 10 Indeed human rights treaties explicitly exclude from the scope of permissible derogation, inter alia, the provisions on torture, inhuman or degrading treatment. The United Nations Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Being Subjected to Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, for its part, makes explicit that:

> “Exceptional circumstances such as a state of war or a threat of war, internal political instability or any other public emergency may not be invoked as a justification of torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.” 11

The absolute nature of the prohibition of cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment, and the implications thereof, has been repeatedly emphasized by human rights monitoring bodies. The 9 Under the American Convention, for instance, rights and freedoms such as the freedom to manifest one’s religion or belief, freedom of expression, right of assembly or freedom of association, freedom of residence and movement may be subjected to those limitations prescribed by law which are necessary in a democratic society to “protect public safety, order, health, or morals, or the rights or freedoms of others” (see Articles 12(3); 13(2); 15; 16(2); 22(3)). Under the ICCPR similar clauses relate to freedom of movement (Article 12), freedom of conscience and religion (Article 18) and freedom of expression (Article 19).

11 Article 3, United Nations Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Being Subjected to Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, GA Res. 3452 (XXX) of 9 December 1975.
Human Rights Committee has expressly noted that the prohibition of torture and cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment under Article 7 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights:

“[…] allows of no limitation. [E]ven in situations of public emergency such as those referred to in article 4 of the Covenant, no derogation from the provision of article 7 is allowed and its provisions must remain in force. [N]o justification or extenuating circumstances may be invoked to excuse a violation of article 7 for any reasons, including those based on an order from a superior officer or public authority.”12

Under the European Convention on Human Rights, the European Court of Human Rights has observed that:

“Article 3 enshrines one of the most fundamental values of democratic societies. Even in the most difficult circumstances, such as the fight against terrorism and organised crime, the Convention prohibits in absolute terms torture and inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. Unlike most of the substantive clauses of the Convention and of Protocols Nos. 1 and 4, Article 3 makes no provision for exceptions and no derogation from it is permissible under Article 15(2), even in the event of a public emergency threatening the life of the nation.”13

The absolute nature of the prohibition on inhuman treatment and its applicability in all circumstances, is apparent also from international humanitarian law (IHL) which make clear that torture, corporal punishment and other measures causing physical suffering are prohibited even in times of armed conflict.14 The specific reference to the prohibition of corporal punishment in conflict is noteworthy.15

12 General Comment No. 20, para. 3. See also Article 3 of the UN Declaration: “[…] Exceptional circumstances such as a state of war or a threat of war, internal political instability or any other public emergency may not be invoked as a justification of torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.” See also Committee against Torture, Summary account of the results of the proceedings concerning the inquiry on Egypt, UN Doc. A/51/44, paras. 180 ff., in particular para. 222.

14 See Common Article 3 to the Geneva Conventions of 1949, laying down minimum standards of treatment in relation to non-combatants in non-international armed conflicts and prohibiting “violence to life and person, in particular […] cruel treatment and torture” (para. 1(a)) and “outrages upon personal dignity, in particular humiliating and degrading treatment” (Article 3(1)(c)). See also the grave breaches provisions (Articles 50, First Geneva Convention; Article 51, Second Geneva Convention; Article 130, Third Geneva Convention and Article 147, Fourth Geneva Convention) all of which criminalize “torture or inhuman treatment” and “wilfully causing great suffering or serious injury to body or health.”

15 In particular, corporal punishment is expressly prohibited by Article 32 of the Fourth Geneva Convention in relation to civilians: “The High Contracting Parties specifically agree that each of them is prohibited from taking any measure of such a character as to cause the physical suffering or extermination of protected persons in their hands. This prohibition applies not only to murder, torture, corporal punishments, mutilation and medical or scientific experiments not necessitated by the medical treatment of a protected person, but also to any other measures of The position is the same as a matter of customary international law, both as a matter of human rights law and as a matter of international humanitarian law. In the words of the European Court of Human Rights,

“[The] absolute prohibition of torture and of inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment under the terms of the Convention shows that Article 3 enshrines one of the fundamental values of […] democratic societies […] and is generally recognised as an internationally accepted standard.”

Several consequences flow from the absolute nature of the prohibition which may be worth emphasising in the context of the present case.

First, the absolute nature of the prohibition means that cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment is impermissible no matter what the circumstances of the particular case, including specifically the victim’s behaviour. Even the most aberrant behaviour on the part of individuals cannot justify, or affect the understanding of what constitutes, such treatment or punishment. As the European Court notes:

“[…] Article 3 prohibits in absolute terms torture or inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and […] its guarantees apply irrespective of the reprehensible nature of the conduct of the person in question […]”

Second, there can be no justification for inhuman or degrading punishment on the basis of the protection of other human rights, or for reasons of public order or prevention or repression of crime. Specifically, as held by the European Court in Tyrer in relation to the judicial corporal punishment of a juvenile by birching, the fact that a particular punishment may be believed to have a deterrent effect is irrelevant. The Court observed

“[…] a punishment does not lose its degrading character just because it is believed to be, or actually is, an effective deterrent or aid to crime control. Above all, as the Court must emphasise, it is never permissible to have recourse to punishments which are contrary to Article 3, whatever their deterrent effect may be.”

An express prohibition of corporal punishment is also contained in the fundamental guarantees provisions of both 1977 Additional Protocols to the Geneva Conventions (AP I, Article 75(2)(iii); AP II, Article 4(2)(a)).

16 Soering v. United Kingdom (Appl. No. 14038/88), Judgment of 7 July 1989, Series A, No. 161, para. 88. The absolute nature of the prohibition has been recognized by the ECtHR, inter alia, in Ireland v. the United Kingdom (Appl. No. 5310/71), Judgment of 18 January 1978, Series A, No. 25, para. 163.

Third, in accordance with general principles of international law, the provisions of domestic law do not affect the characterisation of measures as inhuman or degrading, and cannot justify the imposition of such measures. As discussed in more detail in Section D.3 below, the fact that a certain kind of treatment or punishment is expressly permitted or provided for by domestic legislation is irrelevant so far as that treatment or punishment violates the prohibition under international law of cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment.

Section B  Need for Evolutive Interpretation of the Prohibition on CIDPT in Light of International Standards

International and national jurisprudence indicates that an evolutive and dynamic interpretation of the prohibition of cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment is essential to ensure that it continues to serve its essential protective purpose. The need for a dynamic interpretation applies to all rights within human rights law, but its relevance is particularly apparent as regards concepts such as ‘cruel’, ‘inhuman’ or ‘degrading’ which by their nature attempt to reflect contemporary sensibilities of the relevant community. Developments in circumstances and in attitudes, as reflected inter alia in shifting practices and penal policy, should be taken into consideration in assessing what constitutes prohibited punishment. As the prohibition is universal in nature (see Section A above), it is particularly important to have regard to evolving circumstances and attitudes not only domestically or regionally but also internationally. Interpreting the American Convention in light of international and comparative standards will, moreover, ensure that it keeps pace with developments within the international community of which the region forms part.

The need for a dynamic interpretative approach has consistently been recognized by this Court. A similar approach is taken by the European Court in relation to the European Convention. In Tyrer v. United Kingdom for example, the European Court of Human Rights stated that, in order to assess the compatibility of corporal punishment with the standards of human rights protection set forth by the European Convention of Human Rights, the Court “cannot but be influenced by the developments and commonly accepted standards in the penal policy” of other states. The International Court of Justice for its part has observed that "an international instrument must be interpreted and applied within the overall framework of the juridical system in force at the time of the interpretation.\textsuperscript{23}

Domestic courts, called upon to make similar assessments in the light of constitutionally protected fundamental rights, have stressed the importance of adopting a dynamic approach when interpreting constitutional provisions prohibiting cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment. The Supreme Court of the United States, for example, called upon to determine the content of the prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment contained in the Eighth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, noted that:

“The basic concept underlying the Eighth Amendment is nothing less than the dignity of man. While the State has the power to punish, the Amendment stands to assure that this power be exercised within the limits of civilized standards. [T]he words of the Amendment are not precise, and [...] their scope is not static. The Amendment must draw its meaning from the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society.”\textsuperscript{24}

The Supreme Court of Namibia noted that the question whether a particular form of punishment authorised by the State should be regarded as cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment inevitably involves a value judgement, but that:

"[...] [this] is however a value judgement which requires objectively to be articulated and identified, regard being had to the contemporary norms, aspirations, expectations and sensibilities of the Namibian people […], and further having regard to the emerging consensus of values in the civilised international community […]. This is not a static exercise. It is a continually evolving dynamic. What may have been accepted as a just form of punishment some decades ago may appear to be manifestly inhuman and degrading today. Yesterday’s orthodoxy might appear to be today’s heresy.”\textsuperscript{25}

Section C       Defining “Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Punishment or Treatment” (CIDPT)

C.1    The Basic Elements of CIDPT

The work of international bodies provides considerable and growing jurisprudence on the definition of the concept of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. Human rights treaties, as well as ample jurisprudence of human rights bodies (and increasingly domestic and international criminal tribunals), illustrate what may constitute torture and/or cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment. The essential characteristics of CIDPT is that it is treatment or punishment causing suffering of a certain severity, which may be physical or mental in nature. A distinguishing feature is conduct that “violate[s] the basic principle of humane treatment, particularly the respect for human dignity.” There is no requirement that the conduct is carried out pursuant to any particular purpose.29

The European Commission of Human Rights for example noted that a given treatment or punishment is inhuman when it “causes severe suffering, mental or physical, which in the particular situation is unjustifiable.” As for degrading treatment, this has been defined by the European Court as conduct “such as to arouse in [its] victims feelings of fear, anguish and inferiority capable of humiliating and debasing them and possibly breaking their physical or moral resistance.” The Trial Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia for its part conducted a thorough analysis of international humanitarian law and human rights law standards on the basis of which it defined inhuman or cruel treatment, in the Celebici case, as:

“[…] an intentional act or omission, that is an act which, judged objectively, is deliberate and not accidental, that causes serious mental or physical suffering or injury or constitutes a serious attack on human dignity.”

29 In this respect it is noted that contained for example in the United Nations Convention against Torture is the requirement that torture be carried out pursuant to one of a number of listed purposes: Cf. Article 1(1). No such requirement appears in respect of cruel inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

31 Ireland v. the United Kingdom (supra, note 16), para. 167.

32 See Prosecutor v. Delalic et al. (Celebici case), Case No. IT-96-21-T, Judgment of 16 November 1998, para. 543 (in relation to inhuman treatment) and para. 552 (in relation to cruel treatment). This definition has been followed and endorsed in, inter alia, Prosecutor v. Jelacic, Case No. IT-95-10-T, Judgment of 14 December 1999, para. 41; Prosecutor v. Blaskic; Case No. IT-45-14-T, Judgment of 3 March 2000, para. 186; and by the Appeals Chamber in the Celebici Appeal Judgment, Case IT-96-21-A, Judgment of 20 February 2001, para. 424. In the Kunarac case the crime of outrages upon personal dignity was defined by the Tribunal as: “[…] an intentional act or omission which would be generally considered to cause serious humiliation, degradation or otherwise be a serious attack on human dignity, committed with the knowledge of the fact the act or the omission could have that effect.” (Prosecutor v. Kunarac, Kovac and Yukovic, Case No. IT-96-23-T and IT-96-23/1-T, Judgment of 22 February 2001, para 514).
C. 2 Beyond the Suffering and Humiliation Inherent in Lawful Punishment

A certain element of humiliation and suffering is almost inevitably present in the mere fact that an individual is convicted of a criminal offence and subject to punishment. Thus not every form of judicial punishment can automatically be regarded as “cruel, inhuman or degrading.” As noted by the European Court of Human Rights:

“In fact, in most if not all cases this [element of humiliation and suffering] may be one of the effects of judicial punishment, involving as it does unwilling subjection to the demand of the legal system.”33

In Tyrer v. United Kingdom, in its discussion of the notion of "degrading punishment" under Article 3 of the European Convention, the European Court held that, in order for a punishment to be properly characterised as ‘degrading’, “the humiliation or debasement involved must attain a particular level and must in any event be other than that usual element of humiliation” inherent in the fact that the individual is being subjected to punishment by the State.34 The same line of reasoning applies, mutatis mutandis, to the characterization of a given form of punishment as inhuman or cruel.

Moreover, with regard specifically to corporal punishment, it must be recognized that some international instruments dealing specifically with torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment exclude from the ambit of torture proscribed acts resulting in "pain or suffering arising only from, inherent in or incidental to lawful sanctions."35 However, it is well established that references to ‘lawfulness’ in human rights instruments – including the Torture Convention and general human rights treaties - must be understood by reference not only to the strict provisions of national law but also to principles of international law, including relevant human rights instruments.

As noted by the Special Rapporteur on torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of the UN Commission on Human Rights,

"[…] the ‘lawful sanctions’ exclusion must necessarily refer to those sanctions that constitute practices widely accepted as legitimate by the international community, such as deprivation of liberty through imprisonment, which is common to almost all penal systems. […] By contrast, the Special Rapporteur cannot accept the notion that the administration of such punishments as stoning to death, flogging and amputation […] can be deemed lawful simply because the punishment has been authorized in a procedurally legitimate manner, i.e. through the sanction of legislation, administrative rules or judicial order. To accept this view would be to accept that any physical punishment, no matter how torturous and cruel, can be considered lawful, as long as the punishment had been duly promulgated under the domestic law of a State. Punishment is, after all, one of the prohibited purposes of torture. Moreover, regardless of which ‘lawful sanctions’ might be excluded from the definition of torture, the prohibition of cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment remains. The Special Rapporteur would be unable to identify what that prohibition refers to if not the forms of corporal punishment referred to here. Indeed, cruel, inhuman or degrading punishments are, then, by definition unlawful; so they can hardly qualify as ‘lawful sanctions’ within the meaning of article 1 of the Convention against Torture.\textsuperscript{36}

The Special Rapporteur thus makes clear that the mere fact that a particular action is taken in accordance with internal law does not make it ‘lawful’ for these purposes. In accordance with general principles of international law (see D.3 below) internal law cannot insulate action covered by it from any challenge as to its compliance with the human rights obligations of the State. Indeed, in particular cases human rights bodies have repeatedly found that the imposition of certain penalties under domestic law has given rise to a violation.\textsuperscript{37} The key question is whether is the punishment is ‘lawful,’ as opposed to cruel, inhuman and degrading, which must be assessed not only by reference to the prescriptions of national law but according to the relevant international standards, as set out below.

\textsuperscript{37} See e.g. Soering v. United Kingdom (supra, note 16); and Öcalan v. Turkey (supra, note 27). On life imprisonment without any possibility of early release raising an issue under Article 3 of the ECHR, see the Court’s final decision as to admissibility in Einhorn v. France (App. No. 71555/01), Admissibility decision, 16 October 2001.
C.3 The ‘Circumstances’ - the Punishment or the Case

As consistently noted by human rights monitoring bodies, in general the assessment of whether treatment or punishment is cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment depends on all the circumstances of the case. These include, for instance, the sex, age and state of health of the victim. The circumstances such as “the nature and context of the […] punishment, the manner and method of its execution, its duration, its physical or mental effects” will also be relevant factors. In particular, the “nature, purpose and severity” of the punishment have to be considered in order to establish if it is cruel, inhuman or degrading.

However, consistent with the foregoing, certain forms of punishment have, due to their inherent characteristics, come to be viewed as per se satisfying the threshold of cruel, inhuman or degrading, irrespective of the particular circumstances of the case. As set out below, international and national jurisprudence suggests that judicially sanctioned corporal punishment is one such punishment.

Section D Judicial Corporal Punishment as Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Punishment

It is submitted that judicial corporal punishment constitutes per se a violation of an individual’s right not to be subjected to cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment, as contained in Article 5 of the Convention and other international instruments. In brief, this reflects the essential nature and purpose of judicial corporal punishment, namely the imposition of severe physical pain and/or mental anguish by the state which, in the words of some of the national judgments considered below, necessarily ‘strip the recipient of all dignity and self-respect’ and invade the ‘inviolable dignity’ of the human person. Concerns as to the inherent arbitrariness and susceptibility to abuse of corporal punishment also characterise the assessment of such punishment as cruel, inhuman and degrading.

As set out below, the analysis that corporal punishment should at this point in time be considered cruel, inhuman and degrading is supported both by international jurisprudence on corporal punishment, and a discernible trend in national jurisprudence holding that corporal punishment amounts to cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment under national constitutional provisions.

40 Ibid.
41 In its General Comment on Article 7 of the ICCPR, the Human Rights Committee similarly noted that the characterization of a given form of treatment or punishment as cruel, inhuman or degrading depends on the “nature, purpose and severity of the treatment applied” (para. 4).
D.1 International Standards and Jurisprudence on Corporal Punishment

International human rights bodies have consistently found judicial corporal punishment inconsistent with the obligation of States not to subject individuals under their jurisdiction to cruel inhuman or degrading punishment.

The Human Rights Committee, in its General Comment on the scope of the prohibition of cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment embodied in Article 7 of the ICCPR, has noted that “the prohibition must extend to corporal punishment, including excessive chastisement ordered as punishment for a crime […]”

In its country reports, the Committee has ‘reaffirm[ed] its position that corporal punishment is incompatible with article 7 of the Covenant.’ An analysis of the jurisprudence of the Human Rights Committee in individual cases concerning corporal punishment develops this position and lends strong support to the view that judicially sanctioned corporal punishment by its very nature has to be considered inherently cruel inhuman and degrading in all circumstances, regardless of the circumstances of the case or the particular characteristics of the person subjected to such punishment. In Osbourne v. Jamaica, for example, the Committee found that, by imposing a sentence of whipping with a tamarind switch, the State party had breached its obligations under Article 7 ICCPR. The Committee stated that:

"Irrespective of the nature of the crime that is to be punished, however brutal it may be, it is the firm opinion of the Committee that corporal punishment constitutes cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment contrary to article 7 of the Covenant."

In Sooklal v. Trinidad and Tobago, the Committee found similarly that the punishment of birching provided for by the law of Trinidad and Tobago was contrary to the prohibition of cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment.

The position of the Human Rights Committee in this respect is shared by, inter alia, the Special Rapporteur on torture and cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment of the UN Commission on Human Rights, who has consistently expressed the view that:

43 Concluding Observations of the Human Rights Committee, Zimbabwe: 06/04/98, para. 21

"[..] corporal punishment is inconsistent with the prohibition of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment enshrined, inter alia, in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Being Subjected to Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment."\(^{46}\)

Similarly, the European Court of Human Rights in the Tyrer case, confronted with instances of judicially sanctioned corporal punishment of a comparatively less serious nature than those at issue in the present case, held that:

“The very nature of judicial corporal punishment is that it involves one human being inflicting physical violence on another human being. Furthermore, it is institutionalised violence, that is in the present case violence permitted by the law, ordered by the judicial authorities of the State and carried out by the police authorities of the State […]. Thus, although the applicant did not suffer any severe or long-lasting physical effects, his punishment - whereby he was treated as an object in the power of the authorities - constituted an assault on precisely that which it is one of the main purposes of Article 3 to protect, namely a person's dignity and physical integrity. […] The institutionalised character of this violence is further compounded by the whole aura of official procedure attending the punishment and by the fact that those inflicting it were total strangers to the offender."\(^{47}\)

The mental suffering that any form of judicial corporal punishment causes to the individual subjected to such punishment, both during the execution of the punishment and in the period which almost necessarily elapses between the sentencing of an individual to corporal punishment and the actual execution of the sentence, is an additional element that leads to the characterisation of corporal punishment as cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment.

In this respect the European Court of Human Rights noted, in Soering v. United Kingdom, that in order to assess whether a given punishment is inhuman or degrading:

“[..] account is to be taken not only of the physical pain experienced but also, where there is a considerable delay before execution of the punishment, of the sentenced person's mental anguish of anticipating the violence he is to have inflicted on him.”$^{48}$

In the Tyrer case, the relevant domestic legislation provided, in a fashion similar to that in the present case, that the punishment could not be carried out more than six months after the passing of the sentence. The Court held that:

"Admittedly, the relevant legislation provides that in any event birching shall not take place later than six months after the passing of sentence. However, this does not alter the fact that there had been an interval of several weeks since the applicant's conviction by the juvenile court and a considerable delay in the police station where the punishment was carried out. Accordingly, in addition to the physical pain he experienced, Mr. Tyrer was subjected to the mental anguish of anticipating the violence he was to have inflicted on him.”$^{49}$

Accordingly, during the period of time between the passing of sentence and the imposition of the punishment the individual inevitably experiences mental anguish and feelings of fear in anticipation of the punishment which may per se render the punishment at issue cruel, inhuman or degrading.

D.2 The Growing Trend towards Recognition of the Impermissible Character of Judicial Corporal Punishment in Domestic Legal Systems

This section illustrates that the approach of international human rights bodies highlighted above - condemning all forms of judicial corporal punishment as cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment - is increasingly reflected on the national plane. Although a number of countries in the world do still adopt more or less serious forms of judicial corporal punishment within their criminal law systems, there are signs of a clear trend towards the recognition of the inherently inhuman and degrading nature of judicial corporal punishment.

The shifting attitude of the international community towards corporal punishment can be discerned from an analysis of both relevant domestic legislation and the jurisprudence of domestic courts. Although the focus of this brief is on comparative standards as reflected in comparative jurisprudence, it is noteworthy that in the last decade a number of states that until that point still retained corporal punishment have abolished it through legislation. Examples of recent legislative change in other Carribbean and Commonwealth countries include: the Abolition of Corporal Punishment Ordinance 1998, Anguilla, the Corporal Punishment (Abolition) Act 2000, British Virgin Islands, the Prisons (Amendment) Law 1998, Cayman Islands, the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act (Act No 5 of 2003), Kenya, the Punishment of Whipping Act 1996, Pakistan (but still permitted for Hadood crimes) and the Abolition of Corporal Punishment Act 1997, South Africa. In some cases, where legislation has been enacted only relatively recently, this is the culmination of a process involving earlier judicial declarations that such punishment was prohibited under domestic laws and constitutions.

$^{48}$ Soering v. United Kingdom (supra, note 16), para. 167.

$^{49}$ Tyrer v. United Kingdom (supra, note 19), para. 33

A large number of domestic courts have been called upon to assess the compatibility of laws permitting corporal punishment of convicted criminals with domestic and international standards of protection of fundamental rights. As set out below, many have held that the imposition of corporal punishment, regardless of the circumstances of the case and of the modalities through which it is carried out, constitutes cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment treatment, and represents a form of punishment no longer acceptable in a democratic society.

For example, in Ex parte Attorney General of Namibia, In re Corporal Punishment by Organs of the State, the Supreme Court of Namibia called upon to determine whether the infliction of a particular form of corporal punishment (in casu, caning in State schools) was contrary to the prohibition of torture and cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment contained in the Namibian Constitution, went further than the narrow question presented to it and found that all forms of corporal punishment, including judicially imposed corporal punishment, were unconstitutional.\(^{50}\)

The Court held that the prohibition of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment and punishment contained in international instruments and national legislation “[…] articulate a temper throughout the civilized world which has manifested itself consciously since the second world war”\(^{51}\) and that:

“[…] there is a strong support for the view that the imposition of corporal punishment on adults by organs of the state is indeed degrading or inhuman and inconsistent with the civilized values pertaining to the administration of justice and the punishment of offenders.”\(^{52}\)

Accordingly, the Court held that:

“[…] the imposition of any sentence by any judicial or quasi-judicial authority, authorising or directing any corporal punishment upon any person is unlawful and in conflict with [the prohibition of cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment contained in] the Namibian Constitution.”\(^{53}\)

The Court based its finding on, inter alia, the following considerations:

\(^{50}\) Ex parte Attorney General of Namibia, In re Corporal Punishment by Organs of the State, 1991 (3) SA 76 (Namibia Supreme Court), at 95F.

\(^{51}\) Ibid., at 87B.

\(^{53}\) Ibid, at 95F.
"1. Every human being has an inviolable dignity. A physical assault on him sanctified by the power and authority of the state violates that dignity. His status as a human being is invaded. […]"

“3. The fact that those assaults on decency are systematically planned, prescribed and executed by an organized society makes it inherently objectionable. It reduces organized society to the level of the offender. It demeans the society which permits it as much as the citizen who receives it. […]”

“5. It is inherently arbitrary and capable of abuse leaving as it does the intensity and the quality of the punishment substantially subject to the temperament, the personality and idiosyncrasies of the particular executioner of the punishment.”

“6. It is alien and humiliating when it is inflicted as it usually is by a person who is a relative stranger to the person punished and who has no emotional bonds with him.”

Similarly, the Supreme Court of Zimbabwe, in the case of State v. Ncube concerning the constitutionality of a sentence of whipping, observed that “[o]n the few occasions when the constitutionality of whipping had been considered by judges in other countries, there appeared to have emerged judicial unanimity that the whipping of adults or juveniles was both cruel and degrading” and found that judicial corporal punishment constituted “a punishment which in its very nature is both inhuman and degrading.” The Court expressed its reasoning in the following terms:

“1. […] It is a punishment, not only inherently brutal and cruel, for its infliction is attended by acute pain and much physical suffering, but one which strips the recipient of all dignity and self-respect. It is relentless in its severity and is contrary to the traditional humanity practised by almost the whole of the civilized world, being incompatible with the evolving standards of decency.

2. By its very nature it treats members of the human race as non-humans. Irrespective of the offence he has committed, the vilest criminal remains a human being possessed of common human dignity. Whipping does not accord to him human status.

3. No matter the extent of regulatory safeguards, it is a procedure easily subject to abuse in the hands of a sadistic and unscrupulous prison officer who is called upon to administer it.

54 Ibid., at Ex parte Attorney General, Namibia: in Re Corporal Punishment by Organs of State (supra, note 25), at p. 87D-H.
4. It is degrading to both the punished and the punisher alike. It causes the executioner, and through him society, to stoop to the level of the criminal. It is likely to generate hatred against the prison regime in particular and the system of justice in general.

Although it is recognised that the Zimbabwean government responded to this decision by enacting a constitutional amendment (criticised by the Human Rights Committee as a violation of the prohibition), the potency of the judgement as a statement on the inherently inhuman and degrading nature of the punishment, and international standards in respect of the same, remains unaffected.

In State v. Williams, a judgment concerning the constitutionality of juvenile whipping, the Constitutional Court of South Africa noted that:

“[…] over the last thirty years at least, South African jurisprudence has been experiencing a growing unanimity in judicial condemnation of corporal punishment for adults. Criticism of the practice has been consistent and unanimous, it being characterized as ‘punishment of a particularly severe kind … brutal in its nature … a severe assault upon not only the person of the recipient but upon its dignity as a human being.’ […] If adult whipping were to be abolished, it would simply be an endorsement by our criminal justice system of a world-wide trend to move away from whipping as a punishment.”

In Kyamanywa v. Uganda, the Ugandan Constitutional Court held that the provision of the Penal Code Acts which permitted the imposition of a sentence of corporal punishment on convicted individuals was inconsistent with the prohibition of torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment contained in Article 24 of the Ugandan Constitution. In particular, the Court held that:

“[Article 24] does not make any distinction between the manner of application of any form of treatment or punishment which falls within the prohibited category. Corporal punishment by its very definition, which is inflicting pain by beating a part of the body, falls squarely within the category prohibited by article 24. It is by its nature a cruel inhuman and degrading punishment which amounts to a torture.”

56 Concluding Observations of the Human Rights Committee, Zimbabwe: 06/04/98, para. 21: ‘The Committee is concerned about recent amendments of section 15 of the Constitution which inter alia authorize corporal punishment. The Committee reaffirms its position that corporal punishment is incompatible with article 7 of the Covenant.’

57 State v. Williams and Others, 1995 (3) SA 632 (South Africa Constitutional Court), para. 11, citing State v. Kumalo 1965 (4) SA 565 at 574F.

The High Court of Fiji, in Naushad Ali v. State, similarly ruled that the provision providing for corporal punishment in the Fiji Criminal Procedure Code was incompatible with the constitutional prohibition of “cruel, inhuman, degrading or disproportionately severe treatment of punishment”, and therefore unlawful.\(^{59}\)

In John Banda v. The People, corporal punishment was also ruled unconstitutional by the High Court of Zambia.\(^{60}\) Justice E.E. Chulu stated:

> “Article 15 of the Constitution is couched in very clear and unambiguous language, that no person shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading punishment or other like treatment. On the contrary, it cannot be doubted that the provisions of […] the Penal Code which permit the infliction or imposition of corporal punishment on offenders are in total contravention, and conflict with the above provisions of article 15 of the Constitution.”

It is noted that in a limited number of cases national courts have indicated that, as a matter of internal law, judicial corporal punishment had to be considered lawful and that the decision as to whether to abolish judicial corporal punishment was a matter for the national legislator. It is however noteworthy that so far as courts have had regard to international law, they have generally acknowledged that judicial corporal punishment is contrary to the prohibition of cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment contained therein.

In Pinder v. Regina, by a majority of 3 to 2,\(^{61}\) the Court of Appeal of Bahamas was called on to declare unconstitutional corporal punishment. It held that it could not do so due to the ‘saving clauses’ in the Constitution of Bahamas by virtue of which laws that were enacted before the entry into force of the constitution (including those under which the sentence of flogging had been imposed upon the appellant) could not be declared unconstitutional. However, the substance of the Court’s view was clear, with all five members of the Court recognizing that and that a sentence of flogging constituted inhuman and degrading treatment within the meaning of Article 17(1) of the Constitution.

> “There is … virtual unanimity of opinion in Commonwealth jurisdictions and beyond that the infliction of corporal punishment … is violative of the fundamental right of a person … to be protected from such punishment which is regarded as inhuman and degrading or even torture”\(^{62}\)

\(^{61}\) Pinder v. Regina, Criminal Appeal No. 60/1997, 29 January 1999 (Bahamas Court of Appeal) (unreported), (Gonsalves-Sabola P, George and Zacca JJA; Carey and Hall JJA dissenting).

The majority of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council (Lords Millett, Hope and Hobhouse), in considering an appeal from the decision of the Court of Appeal in the above case, while upholding the constitutionality of the provision providing for corporal punishment on the same basis as the Court of Appeal, observed that:

“[...] it is accepted that flogging is an inhuman and degrading punishment and, unless protected from constitutional challenge under some other provision of the Constitution, is rendered unconstitutional by [the provision of the Constitution prohibiting torture and inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment].”\(^63\)

Incidentally, Lords Nicholls and Hoffman entered a strong dissent to the reasoning of the majority on the interpretation of domestic constitutional law, observing that “flogging is a barbaric form of punishment,”\(^64\) and that

“The use or, more accurately, the misuse of this type of argument in the interpretation of constitutions led Lord Wilberforce famously to decry the ‘austerity of tabulated legalism’: see Minister of Home Affairs v Fisher [1980] AC 319, 328. Never was there a more telling instance of this austerity than in the present case, where the constitutionality of inhuman punishment is said to depend, at least in part, on the inference to be drawn from the niceties of an argument based on redundancy of language. This approach, if adopted, would tragically impoverish the spirit of the Constitution of The Bahamas.”\(^65\)

What is clear from the foregoing is that, as a matter of international law, reflected in international practice of human rights courts and bodies as well as judgments of national courts, judicially sanctioned corporal punishment is condemned as constituting CIDPT.

D.3 Relevance of Internal Law - Distinguishing Suffering ‘Inherent in Lawful Punishment’

Given that the punishment complained of in the present case is, amicus understands, contemplated in the legislation of the Republic of Trinidad and Tobago, this brief emphasise a final point (canvassed above), notably the relationship between domestic law and international human rights obligations in respect of corporal punishment.

The Court is aware of the general principle of customary international law that a State may not rely upon a provision of its internal law as a justification for a breach of its international obligations.

\(^65\) Ibid., para 60.
This incontrovertible principle, affirmed repeatedly by the Permanent Court of International Justice and the International Court of Justice, embodied in Article 27 of the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties and recently restated by the International Law Commission in the Articles on Responsibility of States for Internationally Wrongful Acts, has been expressly recognized by this Court in its Advisory Opinion on International Responsibility for the Promulgation and Enforcement of Laws in Violation of the Convention. Plainly, the state cannot invoke the provisions of domestic law to justify a punishment that violates its international obligations to protect persons from inhuman or degrading punishment.

It was noted above (see Section C.2), that suffering that is ‘inherent in lawful sanctions’ is not considered to fall within, and in the Torture Convention is explicitly excluded from, the prohibition on cruel inhuman or degrading treatment. Even when a similar "exclusion clause" is not expressly contained in the relevant provisions of international instruments, the European Court’s jurisprudence highlighted above indicates that the imposition of suffering or humiliation that is no more than that inherent in - or incidental to - the imposition of any lawful punishment is insufficient to constitute CIDPT. However, consistent with the principles set out above, the key question is not simply ‘lawfulness’ according to the provisions of domestic law. As the Special Rapporteur on Torture and Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment of the UN Commission on Human Rights has clarified,

Regard must therefore be had to international law in determining lawfulness. To interpret the ‘lawfulness’ provisions otherwise, and permit a state by way of internal legislation to avoid international obligations, would be to gut the prohibition on torture and cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment of meaning and effect. The jurisprudence highlighted in this Brief makes clear that judicial corporal punishment is not a ‘lawful’ sanction under international law and is increasingly rejected as an abhorrent violation of human rights by the international community. Its lawfulness, or not, under domestic law is immaterial.

To the extent that this issue is germane to the present case the Court may be minded to adopt an approach similar to that of the Special Rapporteur, highlighted above, or the Human Rights Committee which, in a case concerning the lawfulness of corporal punishment, stated that:

66 See eg The S.S. Wimbledon, Greco-Bulgarian “Communities,” Free Zones of Savoy and the District of Gex and Elettronica Sicula cases.

67 Article 3, Articles on Responsibility of States for Internationally Wrongful Acts. See also the ILC’s Commentaries to Article 3.

"The State party has contested the claim by stating that the domestic legislation governing such corporal punishment is protected from unconstitutionality by [the Constitution of the State Party]. The Committee points out, however, that the constitutionality of the sentence is not sufficient to secure compliance also with the Covenant. The permissibility of the sentence under domestic law cannot be invoked as justification under the Covenant."69

Conclusion

This brief has demonstrated that judicially sanctioned corporal punishment, of the sort at issue in the case presently before the Court, amounts to an inhuman and degrading form of punishment, prohibited by treaty and customary law. There can be no justification or excuse for such punishment, whatever the circumstances of the particular case, the situation in the particular state, or the provisions of internal law. Judicially sanctioned corporal punishment is the subject of harsh and unequivocal condemnation at the international - and increasingly at the national constitutional - level. The Court is urged in its important judgment to adopt an approach in line with the international law and practice outlined in this brief, which amicus curiae hereby humbly submits.

69 Human Rights Committee, Osbourne v. Jamaica, para. 9.1 (emphasis added).
I. SUMMARY

1. On November 8, 1994, Angelo Ruales Paredes (hereinafter “the petitioner”) lodged a petition with the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (hereinafter “the Commission” or the “IACHR”) against the Republic of Ecuador (hereinafter “the State”) denouncing the violation of the following rights enshrined in the American Convention on Human Rights (hereinafter “the Convention” or “the American Convention”): the right to humane treatment (Article 5), personal liberty (Article 7), a fair trial (Article 8), and judicial protection (Article 25), in violation of the obligations in Article 1(1) to the detriment of the petitioner.

2. On June 11, 1999, the parties reached a friendly settlement in this case. This report presents a brief account of the facts and the text of the settlement agreement, pursuant to Article 49 of the Convention.

II. FACTS

3. At 8:00 p.m. on July 3, 1993, the petitioner, 21 years of age, was detained by Agent Palacios near the coliseum in Ibarra, province of Imababura, where he was caught stealing accessories from the vehicle of the Provincial Chief of the Crime Investigation Office (OID) of Ibarra, Lieutenant Colonel Raúl Ruiz. Lieutenant Colonel Ruiz ordered that the petitioner be investigated, and the latter was brought in to the Ibarra police station.

4. At the station, the petitioner was tortured during interrogation. He was forced to remain in a tripod position and to flex, and was submerged in a pool. He was also sprayed with gas and pulled by the genitals with his shoelace. Police health personnel had to suture the resulting wound.

5. In the days following his detention, the petitioner, writing on cigarette paper, made known his injury and his lack of communication with his family. The petitioner’s family sent a physician to examine him; however, the physician was not allowed to see him. The situation became public knowledge, and an investigation of the torture was launched. The police officers accused of torturing him are Rafael Lahuasi, Luis Ernesto Cocha, and Fernando Delgado. These officers admitted to the judge that they subjected the petitioner to acts of physical aggression.

6. The petitioner requested that the events be investigated and the perpetrators punished. He also said that even though Article 145 of the Penal Code of the Police punishes offenders who commit torture with six to nine years in prison, the accused officers were detained for merely six months and then returned to duty.

III. PROCESSING BY THE COMMISSION

7. On November 8, 1994, the Commission received the petition for this case, which was opened on March 13, 1995. Processing of the case proceeded in keeping with the Commission’s Regulations.

8. On January 7, 1999, the Commission invited the parties to engage in friendly settlement procedure, and on January 30, 1999 the petitioner accepted that proposal. The Commission Rapporteur at that time, Dr. Carlos Ayala Corao, traveled to Ecuador to facilitate the procedure. The friendly settlement agreement was signed on June 11, 1999.

IV. FRIENDLY SETTLEMENT

9. The Friendly Settlement Agreement signed by the parties and the IACHR Rapporteur reads as follows:

FRIENDLY SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

I. BACKGROUND

The Ecuadorian State, through the Office of the Attorney General, with a view to promoting and protecting human rights and given the great importance of the full observance of human rights at this time for the international image of our country, as the foundation of a just, dignified, democratic, and representative society, has decided to take a new course in the evolution of human rights in Ecuador.

The Office of the Attorney General has initiated conversations with all persons who have been victims of human rights violations, aimed at reaching friendly settlement agreements to provide reparations for the damages caused.

The Ecuadorian State, in strict compliance with the obligations it acquired upon signing the American Convention on Human Rights and other international human rights law instruments, is aware that any violation of an international obligation that has caused damages triggers the duty to make adequate reparations--monetary reparations and criminal punishment of the perpetrators being the most just and equitable form. Therefore the Office of the Attorney General and Mr. Angelo Ruales Paredes, each of their own right, have reached a friendly settlement, pursuant to the provisions of Articles 48(1)(f) and 49 of the American Convention on Human Rights and Article 45 of the Regulations of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights.

II. THE PARTIES

The following persons were present at the signing of this Friendly Settlement Agreement:

a. Dr. Ramón Jiménez Carbo, Attorney General of the State, as indicated in his appointment and certificate of office, which are attached as qualifying documents;

b. Mr. Angelo Javier Ruales Paredes, citizenship document No. 100205510-9; a copy of that document is also attached as a qualifying document.

III. STATE RESPONSIBILITY AND ACCEPTANCE

The Ecuadorian State acknowledges its international responsibility for having violated the human rights of Mr. Angelo Javier Ruales Paredes enshrined in Article 5 (right to humane treatment), Article 7 (right to personal liberty), Article 8 (a fair trial), Article 25 (judicial protection), and the general obligation set forth in Article 1(1) of the American Convention on Human Rights and other international instruments, since the violations were committed by State agents and could not be disproved by the State, thus giving rise to State responsibility.

Given the above, the Ecuadorian State accepts the facts in case No. 11.445 before the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights and undertakes the necessary reparatory steps to compensate the victims, or their successors, for the damages caused by those violations.

IV. COMPENSATION

In view of the foregoing, the Ecuadorian State, through the Attorney General, as the sole judicial representative of the Ecuadorian State, pursuant to Article 215 of the Constitution of Ecuador, enacted in Official Register No. 1 and in force since August 11, 1998, is awarding Mr. Angelo Javier Ruales Paredes lump-sum compensatory damages of fifteen thousand US dollars (US$15,000) or the equivalent in local currency, calculated at the exchange rate in effect at the time the payment is made, to be paid from the National Budget.

This compensation covers the consequential damages, loss of income, and moral damages suffered by Mr. Angelo Javier Ruales Paredes, as well as any other claims of Mr. Angelo Javier Ruales Paredes or his family members regarding the subject of this agreement, under domestic and international law, and is chargeable to the National Budget. To this end, the Office of the Attorney General will notify the Ministry of Finance, for it to carry out this obligation within 90 days of the signing of this document.

V. PUNISHMENT OF THE PERSONS RESPONSIBLE

The Ecuadorian State pledges to bring civil and criminal proceedings and pursue administrative sanctions against those persons who are alleged to have participated in the violation in the performance of State functions or under the color of public authority.

The Office of the Attorney General pledges to encourage the general prosecutor (Fiscal General del Estado), the competent judicial organs, and public agencies or private institutions to contribute legal evidence to determine the liability of those persons. If admissible, the action will be subject to the constitution and
VI. RIGHT TO SEEK INDEMNITY

The Ecuadorian State reserves the right to seek indemnity, pursuant to Article 22 of the Constitution of the Republic of Ecuador, from those persons found responsible for human rights violations through a final judgment handed down by the country’s courts or when administrative liability is found, in keeping with Article 8 of the American Convention on Human Rights.

VII. TAX EXEMPTION AND DELAY IN COMPLIANCE

The payment made by the Ecuadorian State to the other party to this agreement is not subject to any current or future taxes, except for the 1% tax on capital flows.

In the event that the State is delinquent for over three months from the date on which the agreement is signed, it must pay interest on the amount owed, corresponding to the current bank rate of the three largest banks in Ecuador for the duration of its delinquency.

VIII. REPORTING

The Ecuadorian State, through the Office of the Attorney General, agrees to report every three months to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights on compliance with the obligations assumed by the State in this friendly settlement agreement.

In keeping with its consistent practice and obligations under the American Convention, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights will oversee compliance with this agreement.

IX. LEGAL BASIS

The compensatory damages that the Ecuadorian State is awarding to Mr. Angelo Javier Ruales Paredes are provided for in Articles 22 and 24 of the Constitution of the Republic of Ecuador, for violation of the Constitution, other national laws, and the norms in the American Convention on Human Rights and other international human rights instruments.

This friendly settlement is entered into on the basis of respect for the human rights enshrined in the American Convention on Human Rights and other international human rights instruments and of the Ecuadorian Government’s policy of respect for and protection of human rights.

X. NOTIFICATION AND CONFIRMATION

Mr. Angelo Javier Ruales Paredes specifically authorizes the Attorney General to notify the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights of this Friendly Settlement Agreement, so that the Commission may confirm and ratify it in its entirety.

XI. ACCEPTANCE

The parties to this agreement freely and voluntarily express their conformity with and their acceptance of the content of the preceding clauses and state for the record that they hereby bring to a close the dispute before the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights over the international responsibility of the State for violating the rights of Mr. Angelo Javier Ruales Paredes.

V. DETERMINATION OF COMPATIBILITY AND COMPLIANCE

10. The Commission determined that the settlement agreement transcribed above is compatible with the provisions of Article 48(1)(f) of the American Convention.

11. On June 15, 1999, the Police District Court upheld on appeal the three-year prison sentence for officers Luis Ernesto Cocha Tucán and Rafael Lahuasi Aldas for torture. Officer Fernando Delgado Arias was acquitted in 1997, when his involvement in the events investigated was disproved. In the second appeal on November 8, 1999, the Court of Justice of the National Police upheld all parts of the judgment being appealed and dismissed the officers from the National Police.

12. The State complied with one very important obligation—it punished the perpetrators—however it has yet to fulfill its commitment to compensate the petitioner.

VI. CONCLUSIONS

13. The Commission reiterates its appreciation to the Ecuadorian State for its willingness to resolve the case through compensatory measures, including measures needed to punish the perpetrators of the alleged violation. The IACHR also reiterates its appreciation to the petitioner for accepting the terms of this friendly settlement agreement.

14. The IACHR will continue to monitor compliance with Ecuador’s commitment to pay compensatory damages, which it has not done to date.

15. The IACHR confirms that the friendly settlement mechanism set forth in the American Convention allows for a non-contentious end to individual cases and has proved, in cases involving different countries, to be an important vehicle for settling alleged violations that can be used by both parties (the petitioner and the State).

THE INTER-AMERICAN COMMISSION ON HUMAN RIGHTS,

DECIDES:

1. To acknowledge that the State punished those responsible for the violation but has failed to pay the US$15,000 in compensation.

2. To urge the State to take the necessary steps to fulfill the pending commitment regarding payment of the compensation.

3. To continue to monitor and supervise compliance with the friendly settlement agreement and, in this context, to remind the State, through the Office of the Attorney General, of its commitment to report to the IACHR every three months on compliance with the obligations assumed (by the State) under this friendly settlement.

4. To publish this report and include it in the Commission’s Annual Report to the General Assembly of the OAS.

Done and signed at the headquarters of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, in the city of Washington, D.C., October 5, 2000. (Signed) Hélio Bicudo, Chairman; Claudio Grossman, First Vice-Chairman; Juan Méndez, Second Vice-Chairman; Commissioners: Marta Altolaguirre, Robert K. Goldman, and Peter Laurie.

I. SUMMARY

1. On February 15, 1997, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (hereafter the Commission or the IACHR) received a petition accusing the State of Chile (hereafter the Chilean State or Chile) of violating the petitioners’ right to justice for its failure to investigate the death of Carmelo Soria Espinoza. Following proceedings before the IACHR, on November 19, 1999, the Commission published report 133/99 in which it found that the State of Chile had violated Articles 1, 2, 8 and 25 of the American Convention on Human Rights (hereafter the American Convention), and made certain recommendations.

2. On January 21, 2003, the Commission received a commitment signed by the State to comply with the recommendations of the IACHR, as well as a statement on the part of the petitioners accepting that commitment. In this report, the Commission reproduces the contents of both documents, ratifies the terms of the agreement, and urges the State to comply with the recommendations formulated by the IACHR in its report 133/99.

II. FACTS OF THE CASE

3. Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza, 54 years of age and of dual Spanish and Chilean nationality, was working as chief of the editorial and publications section of the Latin American Demographic Center (CELADE) in Chile. CELADE is an agency of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) and part of the United Nations (UN) system. Accordingly, Mr. Soria had the status of international official. On July 14, 1976, as he was leaving work, he was kidnapped by security agents of the Dirección de Inteligencia Nacional (DINA) and subsequently murdered. His body and car were left in a stream. The Chilean courts determined that State agents participated in the crime and their identities were established. However, pursuant to Decree Law Nº 2.191, known as the self-amnesty law, criminal prosecution was dismissed, allowing the crime committed by these agents to go unpunished.

III. PROCEEDINGS BEFORE THE COMMISSION

4. On February 15, 1997, Carmen Soria González Vera, the victim’s daughter, assisted by the attorney Alfonso Insunza Bascuñán, filed a petition with the Commission, dated January 31, 1997. The petitioners accuse the State of violating the right of access to justice in the case of Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza and they request that the Commission declare the Amnesty Law incompatible with the obligations of Chile under the American Convention. On February 24, 1997, the Commission transmitted the petition to the State, thereby initiating the corresponding proceedings in accordance with the rules of procedure of the IACHR.
5. Upon completion of proceedings, on May 5, 1999, the Commission adopted Report 79/99 on the present case, based on Article 50 of the American Convention. In that report, the Commission recommended that the State establish the responsibility of the persons identified as guilty of the murder of Carmelo Soria Espinoza by due process of law; that it comply with the provisions of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, in order for human rights violations committed against international officials entitled to international protection to be appropriately investigated and to effectively punish those responsible, or that otherwise the Chilean State must accept the authorization of universal jurisdiction for such purposes; that it repeal Decree Law No. 2.191 enacted in 1978 in order that human rights violations committed by the de facto military government may be investigated and punished; and that it make reparations to the victim’s family for physical and non physical damages, including moral damages.

6. The report was transmitted to the Chilean State with the pertinent recommendations, giving the State two months from the date of transmission to report on its compliance. The Chilean State submitted its observations on September 29, 1999. On October 18, 1999, the Commission approved Report 110/99, pursuant to Article 51 of the Convention, and transmitted it to the State with a period of one month to present information on its compliance with the recommendations. On November 19, 1999, the Commission decided to publish the above-mentioned report.

7. On January 21, 2003, the Commission received a commitment signed by the State to comply with the recommendations of the IACHR, as well as a statement by the petitioners accepting that commitment.

IV. COMMITMENTS SIGNED BY THE PARTIES

8. The commitment signed by the State reads as follows:

In order to comply with the recommendations established by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) in its report 133/99, in the case of reference (case 11.725), the Government of Chile is pleased to submit the following proposal of compliance, prepared in accordance with the rules accepted before that body.

The proposal incorporates both material and symbolic aspects consistent with the spirit and the possibilities of the government to provide a satisfactory solution to the affected party.

I. Background:

1. In its report 133/99, the IACHR concluded, after analyzing the judgment of May 24, 1996, by the Supreme Court of Justice of Chile, that agents of the State “violated, in the case of Carmelo Soria Espinoza, the right to personal liberty, the right to life, and the right to personal integrity enshrined in Article I of the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man”. The Commission concluded that the judicial dismissal of criminal proceedings initiated concerning the detention and disappearance of Carmelo Soria Espinoza affected the petitioners’ right to justice, and that consequently the Chilean State violated its international commitments enshrined in Articles 8 and 25, 1(1) and 2 of the American Convention.

The Commission added that Decree Law 2.191 is incompatible with the American Convention, ratified by Chile in 1990, and that consequently the judgment of the Supreme Court of Chile declaring the Amnesty Law constitutional and of mandatory application violated Articles 1(1) and 2 of the Convention.

The Commission further declared that the Chilean State has not complied with Article 2 of the American Convention, in that it has not adapted its domestic laws to the provisions of the Convention.
The Commission also considered that the State has failed to comply with the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons as a result of having adopted the Amnesty Law and because its competent organs for the administration of justice failed to punish the crimes committed against Carmelo Soria Espinoza.

2. The IACHR recommended that the Chilean State take the following measures:

- To establish the responsibility of the persons identified as guilty of the murder of Carmelo Soria Espinoza by due process of law, in order for the parties responsible to be effectively punished and for the family of the victim to be effectively ensured the right to justice, enshrined in Articles 8 and 25 of the American Convention.

- To comply with the provisions of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, in order for human rights violations, committed against international officials entitled to international protection, such as the execution of Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza in his capacity as an officer of ECLAC, to be appropriately investigated and to effectively punish those responsible. Should the Chilean State consider itself unable to fulfill its obligation to punish those responsible, it must, consequently, accept the authorization of universal jurisdiction for such purposes.

- To adapt its domestic legislation to reflect the provisions contained in the American Convention on Human Rights in such a way that Decree Law No. 2.191 enacted in 1978 be repealed, in order that human rights violations committed by the de facto military government against Carmelo Soria Espinoza may be investigated and punished.

- To adopt the necessary measures for the victim’s family members to receive adequate and timely compensation that includes full reparation for the human rights violations established herein, as well as payment of fair compensation for physical and non physical damages, including moral damages.

3. The family of Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza has declared its interest in concluding judicial proceedings initiated before the Chilean courts to pursue the extracontractual liability of the State.

II. Objectives and scope of the Chilean government’s proposal for compliance with the recommendations:

The proposal that the Government of Chile submits to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights is an agreement between the parties (government and petitioners), that has the following objectives:

- To put an end to international action, in particular the measures adopted by the Commission pursuant to the recommendations contained in Report 133/99.

- To lay the basis for terminating judicial proceedings to pursue the extracontractual liability of the State for the death of Carmelo Soria, in the case "Soria con Fisco" ("Soria vs the State Prosecutor") now before the Fourth Civil Court of Santiago under case Nº C-2219-2000.

- To obviate further judicial action for State liability, whether in connection with action of its agents or for physical or non physical damages, including moral damages.

III. Elements of the compliance proposal:
a) The family of Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza (hereafter the petitioner) will terminate action before the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights and expressly declares that all the recommendations contained in the Commission's report 133/99 have been complied with.

b) The petitioner accepts the symbolic reparation measures offered by the State of Chile, consisting of:

- A public declaration by the Government of Chile recognizing the responsibility of the State, through the action of its agents, for the death of Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza.
- That same declaration offers to erect a monument of remembrance to Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza in a location designated by his family in Santiago.

c) The petitioner will desist from the suit for extracontractual liability of the State, in the case "Soria con Fisco" now before the Fourth Civil Court of Santiago under case Nº C-2219-2000, declaring that it agrees to terminate judicial proceedings initiated, that the reparations agreed before the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights are all that will be demanded of the State and that, consequently, the family will not pursue further judicial action for State liability, whether in connection with action of its agents or for physical or non physical damages, including moral damages. An authenticated copy of the judicial decision approving the withdrawal of action must be presented before the Commission by the petitioner, for purposes of demonstrating compliance with this agreement.

d) The State of Chile undertakes to pay a single lump sum of one million five hundred thousand United States dollars as compensation to the family of Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza, which payment will be made ex gratia through the offices of the Secretary General of the United Nations, by virtue of an agreement to be signed between the Government of Chile and the United Nations.

e) The Government of Chile declares that Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza had the status of an international official of the United Nations, assigned to the Economic Commission for Latin America, ECLAC, as a senior staff member, and that he therefore had the status of a senior international staff official.

f) The Government of Chile will present before the Courts of Justice of Chile an application to reopen criminal proceedings that were initiated to prosecute those who killed Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza.

The proposals presented by the Government of Chile to comply with the recommendations of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights have the sole objective of putting an end to the dispute that currently exists between the Chilean State and the family of Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza, expressed in case 11.725.

9. The commitment signed by the petitioner, and addressed to the IACHR, declares:

We, Carmen Soria González Vera, assisted by the attorney Alfonso Insunza Basuñan, respectfully declare before you:

We are aware of the proposal for compliance with the recommendations of Report 133/99 presented by the Government of Chile to the Commission, and we expressly understand it in all its parts, which read textually as follows:

a) The family of Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza (hereafter the petitioner) will terminate action before the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights and expressly declares that all the recommendations contained in the Commission's report 133/99 have been complied with.

b) The petitioner accepts the symbolic reparation measures offered by the State of Chile, consisting of:

- A public declaration by the Government of Chile recognizing the responsibility of the State, through the action of its agents, for the death of Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza.

- That same declaration offers to erect a monument of remembrance to Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza in a location designated by his family in Santiago.

c) The petitioner will desist from the suit for extracontractual liability of the State, in the case "Soria con Fisco" now before the Fourth Civil Court of Santiago under case Nº C-2219-2000, declaring that it agrees to terminate judicial proceedings initiated and that the reparations agreed before the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights are all that will be demanded of the State and that, consequently, the family will not pursue further judicial action for State liability, whether in connection with action of its agents or for physical or non physical damages, including moral damages. An authenticated copy of the judicial decision approving the withdrawal of action must be presented before the Commission by the petitioner, for purposes of demonstrating compliance with this agreement.

d) The State of Chile undertakes to pay a single lump sum of one million five hundred thousand United States dollars as compensation to the family of Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza, which payment shall be made ex gratia through the offices of the Secretary General of the United Nations, by virtue of an agreement to be signed between the Government of Chile and the United Nations.

e) The Government of Chile declares that Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza had the status of an international official of the United Nations, assigned to the Economic Commission for Latin America, ECLAC, as a senior staff member, and that he therefore had the status of a senior international staff official.

f) The Government of Chile will present before the Courts of Justice of Chile an application to reopen criminal proceedings that were initiated to prosecute those who killed Mr. Carmelo Soria Espinoza.

With respect to this proposal, we express our absolute conformity and acceptance, because it complies with the recommendations of the Commission's Report 133/99.

THEREFORE:

We request the Executive Secretary to accept in full the proposal of the Chilean government on compliance with Report 133/99.

VI. CONCLUSIONS

10. The Inter-American Commission recognizes the willingness of the Chilean State to resolve this case by complying with the recommendations contained in Report 133/99, including payment of compensation for damages suffered, and prosecution and punishment of those responsible for the death of Carmelo Soria.

11. In accordance with its powers under the Convention and its Rules of Procedure, the Commission will continue to monitor compliance with the recommendations in that report.

THE INTER-AMERICAN COMMISSION ON HUMAN RIGHTS,

DECIDES:

1. To take note of the terms of the commitment assumed by the State of Chile and accepted by the petitioners in the present case.

2. To welcome the willingness shown by the government to comply with the recommendations of the IACHR.

4. To continue monitoring compliance with the agreement reached by the parties and the recommendations made by the Commission.

5. To make public this report and to include it in the Annual Report to the General Assembly of the OAS.

REPORT Nº 69/03
PETITION 11.807
FRIENDLY SETTLEMENT
JOSÉ ALBERTO GUADARRAMA GARCÍA MEXICO
October 10, 2003

I. SUMMARY

1. On August 25, 1997, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights ("the Inter-American Commission" or "the IACHR") received a communication from the Center for Justice and International Law and Christian Action for the Abolition of Torture ("CEJIL" and "ACAT"; hereinafter jointly "the petitioners") claiming that Mr. José Alberto Guadarrama García was abducted on March 26, 1997, in the town of Emiliano Zapata, Morelos state, by a group of four armed individuals who got out of a vehicle while he was waiting for a bus on the street, in the company of his mother, Elvira García Avelar. The petitioners report that Mr. Guadarrama García’s mother identified José Luis Velásquez Beltrán, an officer of the judicial police, as one of the individuals who had abducted her son and reported the incident to the Public Prosecution Service that same day. She was later told that the officer in question belonged to the Antikidnapping Group, and that he had already given a statement; however, he was never brought before Mrs. García Avelar for her to identify him, and he continued his regular employment. On April 11, 1997, the Morelos authorities reported that Mr. Velásquez Beltrán had left his job; and, although a warrant for Velásquez Beltrán’s arrest was later issued, to date he has not been detained.

2. The complaint alleges that the United Mexican States ("the State") is internationally responsible for violating the following rights protected by the American Convention on Human Rights ("the American Convention"): the right to life (Article 4), to humane treatment (Article 5), to personal liberty (Article 7), to a fair trial (Article 8), to privacy (Article 11), and to judicial protection (Article 25). The petition also claims that the State violated the general obligation of respecting and ensuring those rights set forth in Article 1(1) of the American Convention.

3. The parties signed an agreement containing the ground rules for beginning a friendly settlement procedure on October 30, 1999, and they reached a final friendly settlement agreement on February 27, 2003. In this report, adopted under Article 49 of the American Convention, the IACHR summarizes the allegations, describes the agreement reached by the parties, and resolves to publish it.

II. PROCESSING BY THE IACHR
4. On September 30, 1997, the Inter-American Commission conveyed the relevant parts of the complaint to the Mexican State and asked it to furnish the corresponding information. The State’s reply was forwarded to the parties, and the exchange of information and comments described in the American Convention and in the Commission’s Rules of Procedure began. On October 7, 1997, the petitioners requested precautionary measures on behalf of the mother of José Alberto Guadarrama García, who had received threats following a press conference at which she revealed that a complaint had been lodged with the IACHR; these precautionary measures were granted on October 17, 1997.

5. Following the hearing on the case held on October 16, 1998, the Inter-American Commission suggested to the Mexican State the text of an agreement pursuant to Article 48(1)(f) of the American Convention. The State sent its comments on the draft agreement on October 20, 1998, and the Inter-American Commission forwarded it to the petitioners on October 26. After the agreement was signed on October 30, the parties and the Inter-American Commission held numerous meetings and hearings, which are listed below (Section IV: Compliance with the Agreement).

III. FRIENDLY SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

6. The agreement signed on October 30, 1998, setting the bases for the friendly settlement, reads as follows:

ONE
This friendly settlement agreement in the case of José Alberto Guadarrama García, No. 11.807, currently being processed by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (“the Commission” or “the IACHR”), is entered into by and between the United Mexican States (“the State” or “Mexico”) and the organizations representing the victim’s family in the processing of this case before the IACHR: Christian Action for the Abolition of Torture (ACAT) and the Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL) (hereinafter “the petitioners”).

TWO
The parties agree to begin a friendly settlement procedure in Case No. 11.807, which deals with the forced disappearance of José Alberto Guadarrama García, under investigation by the Office of the Attorney General for Justice of Morelos state (“the PGJM”). This friendly settlement procedure will be assisted by, in representation of the State, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of the Interior, the Office of the Attorney General of the Republic, and the National Human Rights Commission, through the regular monitoring of the PGJM’s investigations, in accordance with their respective legal powers. The petitioners will be represented by the Guadarrama García family, ACAT, and CEJIL, who will participate in the procedure.

THREE
The objectives of the friendly settlement procedure are the following:

a. Arresting José Luis Velásquez Beltrán, pursuant to the judicial arrest warrant already issued.

b. Identifying all those who plotted and carried out the crimes committed against José Alberto Guadarrama García.

c. Prosecuting all the plotters and perpetrators, so they can be duly punished by the competent judicial authorities.

d. Locating José Alberto Guadarrama García.
e. Providing the Guadarrama García family with redress, compensation, and reparations for the incident, to which end the State and the petitioners may agree on the source and terms of compensation for the relatives of Mr. José Alberto Guadarrama García, without prejudice to the legal action they may be required to pursue in accordance with Mexican law.

FOUR
The parties will provide the IACHR with regular reports on the pursuit of the objectives set forth in Paragraph Three of this agreement.

FIVE
The deadline for meeting the objectives of this agreement shall be February 13, 1999, the date on which the IACHR’s next regular session is to begin and during which a hearing, to be attended by the parties, may be convened. This deadline may be extended by the IACHR, in light of the contributions furnished by the parties.

SIX
In accordance with Article 48(1)(f) of the American Convention on Human Rights, the IACHR shall oversee this procedure until such time as the objectives set forth in this agreement have been met in full.

IV. COMPLIANCE WITH THE AGREEMENT

7. The petitioners and the State reported, respectively, on November 3 and 13, 1998, about their progress in complying with these points and the meetings they had held in Mexico. On December 1, 1998, a friendly settlement meeting was held at the headquarters of the Mexican Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Mexico City, attended by representatives of the parties, the chairman of the Inter-American Commission at that time, and the Executive Secretariat lawyer responsible for the case. At that meeting, the parties agreed to continue their implementation of the agreement and to report back to the IACHR prior to its February 1999 session.

8. On March 1, 1999, a meeting was held at the headquarters of the Inter-American Commission for following up on the friendly settlement agreement in the case at hand. On that occasion, the parties reported on the steps taken as a part of that procedure. On March 16 and May 6, 1999, the State and the petitioners held meetings in Mexico to deal with the case; they reported on those events on June 9, 1999.

9. On October 4, 1999, a working meeting attended by the parties was held at the Inter-American Commission’s headquarters. On that occasion the Commission agreed to locate an independent expert to conduct an expert analysis of the skull found on April 27, 1997, in Jojutla, Morelos, in order to determine whether or not it belonged to Mr. Guadarrama García. The petitioners wrote to the IACHR on November 12, 1999, with respect to this matter and, on November 29, 1999, the Inter-American Commission presented experts Robert Kirschner and Robert Bux with the proposal. The former wrote on January 13, 2000, to say that he agreed to carry out the expert analysis, and this fact was reported to the IACHR.

10. On March 9, 2000, the Inter-American Commission informed the Mexican State that Dr. Robert Kirschner, an expert at the University of Chicago’s Center for International Studies, had agreed to review the evidence available in Case 11.807 relating to the identification of Mr. Guadarrama García. In the same letter it asked for high-quality copies of the victim’s dental records and the technical laboratory documents describing the DNA tests. On May 5, 2000, the Mexican State reported that it had sent Dr. Kirschner “the expert studies carried out by Mexican agencies on the remains allegedly belonging to Mr. Guadarrama García.” Dr. Kirschner submitted his report to the Inter-American Commission on September 16, 2000. In it he stated that: “While many of the findings in these reports are consistent [with] a positive identification, there are both contradictory results and uncertainty in the DNA testing that preclude positive identification at this time.”[1]

11. On October 11, 2000, another working meeting was held at Commission headquarters, which studied the current level of compliance with the friendly settlement agreement. On that occasion the State agreed that it would ask the Office of the Attorney General for Justice in the Mexican Federal District (PGJDF) about the possibility of the mitochondrial DNA analysis being performed in that country, and, if the reply was negative, to study the possibility of entrusting the test to an “external independent expert.”

12. On February 26, 2001, during the Inter-American Commission’s 110th session, another working meeting was held in connection with Case 11.807. The State accepted Dr. Kirschner’s presence at the independent expert analysis to be performed in Mexico City and reported that the skull had already been handed over to the PGJDF. The petitioners agreed to take charge of the logistic arrangements and the expert’s traveling expenses. The representatives of the government of Morelos in attendance at the meeting agreed with the petitioners that they would continue to work together “to exhaust the investigation of the case” and that they would meet again in Morelos at a later date.

13. On February 27, 2001, the IACHR informed Dr. Kirschner of the invitation the parties had extended for him to attend the PGJDF’s procedure and asked him to propose a date. The petitioners told the Inter-American Commission that they had spoken with the expert on the telephone, and that he had explained that “although he was qualified to review the results of the expert analysis, he was not an expert in DNA studies; he therefore recommended they contact other university professors with expertise in the field, such as Dr. Mary Claire King of the University of Seattle,” to attend the aforesaid procedure.[2] In response to that proposal, in a communication of March 16, 2001, the Mexican State noted that “it had no problem whatsoever with Dr. Mary Claire King attending the expert analysis and reviewing its results.”

14. The petitioners reported on May 8, 2001, that they had been unable to locate Dr. King, and had therefore contacted Dr. Luis Fonderbrider of the Argentine Forensic Anthropology Team. The petitioners suggested holding a meeting with Dr. Fonderbrider during a trip he was to make to Mexico City in May 2001 to participate in technical activities with the Office of the High Commissioner of the United Nations. On May 29, 2001, a letter was received from the Mexican State in which it stated “its complete willingness” to attend the proposed meeting with Dr. Fonderbrider.

15. In addition, the petitioners presented the government of Morelos with a proposal for compensation; in response, the government asked them for an additional 45 days in which to present its reply, as noted in the communication from the Mexican State dated July 20, 2001. On November 14, 2001, another working meeting attended by the parties in this case was held during the Inter-American Commission’s 113th session. On November 23, 2001, the Mexican State and the petitioners met at the headquarters of that country’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs:

The meeting studied the compensation proposal submitted by the petitioners. For each item, the Office of the Attorney General offered its counterproposal, in accordance with the guidelines of the inter-American human rights system.

With respect to the compensation, the Office of the Attorney General said it could deposit the amount in a lump sum within five working days following its acceptance by the petitioners, or it could create a trust fund whereby the Guadarrama family would receive regular payments of money.

The petitioners noted that they would reply to the Attorney General’s offer no later than the following week, after discussing it with the rest of the Guadarrama family.

The petitioners remarked that the next meeting could discuss the issue of the scholarship they had requested on behalf of one of Mrs. Elvira García Avelar’s grandchildren, that they would make a specific proposal in that regard, and that the same meeting would readdress the question of the symbolic redress.[3]

16. The petitioners submitted their compensation proposal; this was answered by a State counterproposal “based on the guidelines set down by the inter-American system,” which the petitioners accepted.[4] On March 1, 2002, the victim’s family was awarded the amount of MXN $1,083,957.00 (one million, eighty-three thousand, nine hundred and fifty-seven Mexican pesos) to cover consequential damages, future losses, and nonmaterial damages. On October 18, 2002, another working meeting with the parties in this case was held at the Inter-American Commission’s headquarters.

17. The Mexican State sent a communication on December 23, 2002, summarizing the formalities pursued during the friendly settlement procedure and noting that a meeting had been held with the petitioners in Mexico City on December 4, 2002. In that note the State emphasized its position regarding its compliance with the points of the agreement, including the steps taken to complete the arrest of José Luis Velásquez Beltrán and all the plotters and perpetrators of the crimes committed against José Alberto Guadarrama García as set forth in Preliminary Inquiry No. EZ/089/97-03.[5] In spite of this, the State explains that at the time it was unable to sign an agreement of compliance with the procedure on account of differences with the petitioners regarding the publication of its recognition of responsibility for the facts of this case[6]. Based on this, the State holds that the matter is closed and asks the Inter-American Commission to issue the deed of compliance with the friendly settlement of the case.

18. On February 6, 2003, the State submitted a communication enclosing copies of the newspapers published in Morelos with the recognition of responsibility signed by the governor of the state.[7] The State added that it was “studying the possibility of issuing a “specific press release from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs” with the aforesaid public recognition of responsibility and that the local authorities would continue their investigations to locate José Luis Velásquez Beltrán and would report back regularly to José Alberto Guadarrama García’s family on the case’s progress. The State repeated its request that the agreement of compliance with the friendly settlement in this case be issued and that the Inter-American Commission “acknowledge the political willingness with respect to human rights displayed by the government of Morelos state.”

19. On February 26, 2003, the parties once again went to the headquarters of the Inter-American Commission and held a working meeting at which they reviewed all the steps taken during the friendly settlement procedure and discussed the points for the signing of a final agreement.

V. FINAL FRIENDLY SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

20. On February 27, 2003, at the IACHR’s headquarters, a document called “Final Friendly Settlement Agreement” was signed. In it, the parties agreed as follows:

This agreement is signed, on the one hand, by Christian Action for the Abolition of Torture (ACAT) and the Center for Justice and International Law (CEJIL) (hereinafter “the petitioners”), representing the Guadarrama García family, and, on the other, the Mexican State (hereinafter “the State”), represented by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
Background

The petitioners and the State signed a friendly settlement agreement in the present case on October 30, 1998, the objectives of which were defined in section three of the agreement.

The petitioners and the State have held numerous working meetings in order to make progress with the different points contained in that agreement.

The parties recognize the efforts made by the different players in pursuing compliance with the stated objectives, in consideration whereof they execute this final friendly settlement agreement, taking into consideration the following actions:

(a) The identification of a portion of Mr. José Alberto Guadarrama García’s remains has been possible through the different expert analyses conducted in Mexican institutions and by the Argentine Forensic Anthropology Team.

(b) Several agents of the State who participated in the abduction and subsequent killing of Mr. José Alberto Guadarrama García have been charged and arrested and are being prosecuted.

(c) The Guadarrama García family has received compensation in accordance with criteria established by the inter-American system for the protection of human rights.

(d) The Mexican Federal Government and the government of Morelos state have extended a public recognition of their responsibility in the facts of this matter.

As agreed at the working meeting held at IACHR headquarters on February 26, 2003, the State will carry out an analysis of the declaration referred to by the petitioners on that occasion and will report back to the IACHR as appropriate.

The State also agrees to continue pursuing the formalities necessary to serve the arrest warrant that is still pending.

VI. CONCLUSIONS

21. The Inter-American Commission has closely followed the development of the friendly settlement reached in this case. The information above shows that the agreement has been implemented according to the terms of the American Convention.

22. During its processing, the parties made considerable efforts to pursue the agreement’s different items. The IACHR warmly applauds the contributions of all the individuals who made this friendly settlement possible, and it holds the direct and active participation of the representatives of Morelos state to be highly positive, in accordance with the terms of Articles 1, 2, and 28 of the American Convention. In addition to the specific achievements attained in this case, that attitude is sure to set an excellent example for the authorities of other regions and countries.

23. Based on the foregoing factual and legal considerations,

THE INTER-AMERICAN COMMISSION ON HUMAN RIGHTS,

DECIDES:
1. To approve the friendly settlement agreement signed by the parties on October 30, 1998, together with the final friendly settlement agreement signed on February 27, 2003.

2. To monitor the points of the agreement that have not been met in full.

3. To publish this report and to include it in its Annual Report to the General Assembly of the OAS.

Done and signed at the headquarters of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights in the city of Washington, D.C., on the 22nd day of the month of October, 2003.

(Signed): José Zalaquett, President; Clare K. Roberts, First Vice-President; Susana Villarán, Second Vice-President; Robert K. Goldman and Julio Prado Vallejo, Commissioners.

[1] The report ends with the following paragraphs:

Conclusions
Based on the available evidence, excluding DNA testing, the results of the forensic investigation into the identity of the skull thought to be that of Jose Alberto Guadarrama Garcia are highly consistent with such an identification. This is based primarily on comparison of the antemortem and postmortem dental x-rays, supplemented by the testimony of Sr. Guadarrama Garcia's dentist, Dra. Bustos Hernandez. In addition, other anthropologic findings in this case are consistent with such an identification. However, the contradictory and incomplete results from the DNA testing prevent positive identification with 100% certainty, which is the standard in forensic cases. This uncertainty must be resolved.

Recommendations:
1. The DNA testing should be repeated by an independent, highly skilled forensic DNA laboratory capable of performing mitochondrial DNA analysis.
2. If available, a molar tooth should be used as the source for the DNA, since tissue from the root of a tooth is more likely to yield DNA that is not degraded or contaminated.
3. Mitochondrial DNA analysis should be performed. It is less likely to be degraded than nuclear DNA, and because it is maternally inherited (i.e., only from one's mother), the issue of paternity does not arise.

[5] The State explains:

The investigations yielded results sufficient to indicate the probable responsibility of Gilberto Domínguez Romero, Francisco Peña Hernández, Armando Martínez Salgado, and José Luis Velásquez Beltrán, who were referred to the local courts for the crimes of abducting and murdering José Alberto Guadarrama García (and, with respect to the last named criminal, as has already been stated, no information is available about his legal situation).

[6] The State explains that the petitioners "demanded, in addition to what had already been agreed upon and accepted by the representatives of the Mexican government, the publication of said public recognition in a national daily newspaper." The State reported that it had chosen to "comply with what had previously been accorded: to wit, two publications in the top selling dailies in Morelos state, with the comments thereon made by the petitioners." Ibid., p. 3.

[7] After summarizing the facts of the case and the steps taken in compliance with the friendly settlement agreement, the publication, signed by Mr. Sergio Alberto Estrada Cajigal Ramírez, Governor of the state of Morelos, reads as follows:

We have thus worked to build a different, open government, one that always acts within the legal framework prevailing in the state. In this way we are preventing, fighting, and punishing acts of corruption and impunity and, at the same time, we are designing government practices that are helping us regain credibility and society's trust. In order to assume our responsibilities, the government of the state is setting the commitments it has acquired, aware that a democratic government that does not respect the basic rights of all humans is an unthinkable proposition.

REPORT Nº 105/05
PETITION 11.141
FRIENDLY SETTLEMENT
VILLATINA MASSACRE COLOMBIA

I. SUMMARY

1. On March 12, 1993, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (hereinafter the Commission) received a petition presented by the Héctor Abad Gómez Human Rights Committee, today known as the Interdisciplinary Group for Human Rights (Grupo Interdisciplinario por los Derechos Humanos—GIDH) (hereinafter the petitioners), against the Republic of Colombia (hereinafter the State, the Colombian State or Colombia) for violation of the right to life (Article 4), the right to human treatment (Article 5), and the rights of the child, as well as the generic obligation to respect and guarantee the rights recognized in the American Convention on Human Rights (hereinafter the American Convention) to the detriment of the following children: 8-year-old Johana Mazo Ramírez, 17-year-old Johny Alexander Cardona Ramírez, 17-year-old Ricardo Alexander Hernández, 15-year-old Giovanny Alberto Vallejo Restrepo, 17-year-old Oscar Andrés Ortiz Toro, 16-year-old Ángel Alberto Barón Miranda, 17-year-old Marlon Alberto Álvarez, 17-year-old Nelson Duban Flórez Villa, and Mauricio Antonio Higuita Ramírez, a 22-year-old young man (hereinafter the victims).

2. On July 29, 2002, the Colombian State and petitioners, through the good offices of the CIDH, agreed to sign a friendly settlement agreement in conformity with the procedure set forth in Articles 48 and 49 of the American Convention. After monitoring material compliance with the terms of the agreement, the IACHR adopted a report in accordance with Article 49 of the American Convention in which it describes the friendly settlement process and the joint efforts of the parties to remedy the damage that was caused, in the light of the State’s recognition of its responsibility and the purpose and objective of the American Convention.

II. SUBMITTAL OF PETITION TO THE COMMISSION AND PROCESS OF REACHING A FRIENDLY SETTLEMENT

3. On April 8, 1993, the Commission processed the petition submitted by the GIDH, under Case No. 11.141, in accordance with the instructions of the Rules of Procedure in force up to April 30, 2001. On September 7, 1995, in the framework of the Commission’s 90th session, the parties initiated a process to reach a friendly settlement in conformity with the provisions of Article 48(f) of the American Convention. As a result of the exchange, the parties signed an understanding envisaging the establishment of a Committee to Promote the
4. The mandate of the Promotion Committee consisted of: (1) advocating due process of law in the performance of judicial and disciplinary actions; (2) identifying evidence on the events being dealt with and promoting their processing by the judiciary; (3) promoting the protection of witnesses and, if necessary, and judiciary and disciplinarian officers that conduct the investigations; (4) supporting not only the due exercise of the right of trade unions to defense but also the rights and activities of the civil party; (5) promoting, when deemed advisable for the investigative work, the transfer of proceedings to another jurisdiction and the creation of special units of the Office of the Prosecutor and the Technical Investigation Unit; (6) advocating the reparation of damages produced by the events being dealt with; (7) submitting a report to the IACHR in its next regular session on the exercise of the functions set forth in the previous items and on the results of the respective negotiations, indicating the factors that, in its judgment, might have exerted an impact on the success or failure of the above.

5. The Promotion Committee submitted its final report on February 23, 1996 at a meeting held in the framework of the Commission’s 91st regular session. In its report, the Promotion Committee formulated a series of recommendations on the case and on other general issues. In general, it pointed out that:

The Committee as a whole has indicated that theoretically full reparation to victims of severe violations of human rights should envisage the following: (1) prevention of violations, investigation of the facts, identification, trial, and punishment of those responsible; (2) restitution, if possible, of the violated right; (3) compensation to the victims, understood in the broad sense of the term, such as compensations for material and moral damages; (4) reparation for the consequences produced by the violation in the communities that the victims belong, or belonged, to, by means of economic, social, and cultural actions.

The Promotion Committee recommended that the State should recognize its responsibility for the Villatina case to the Commission and issued a series of recommendations on the adoption of measures of promotion, especially those involving criminal, disciplinary and administrative proceedings, in order to establish the facts and individual responsibilities. It also agreed that a series of measures should be adopted to ensure individual and social reparation and to commemorate the victims.

6. On February 23, 1996, the parties agreed to continue with the friendly settlement process for which purpose they established a Follow-up Committee to monitor the recommendations made by the Promotion Committee (hereinafter the Follow-up Committee). The mandate of the Follow-up Committee, set forth in a document of understanding consisted of: (a) looking for, gathering, centralizing, and transmitting to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights information on the measures agreed upon to develop the functions of the Promotion Committee; b) presenting periodical reports to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights on the development of these functions and the result of these functions; (c) reporting to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, whenever necessary, about the obstacles that it encounters in the exercise of its functions; (d) submitting a report to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights at its next regular session on the exercise of the functions it was entrusted with and on the results of its negotiations, with an indication of the factors that, in the judgment of the Committee, would have led to the success or failure of these functions.

7. The Follow-up Committee submitted its evaluation on compliance with the recommendations formulated by the Promotion Committee on October 7, 1997 at the Commission’s 97th session. In this evaluation, the Follow-up Committee indicated that, although there was progress in applying disciplinary sanctions on the State agents involved in the massacre and in determining social reparations, the Commission should continue with the procedure envisaged in Article 50 of the Convention. In view of this situation, on October 16, 1997, the Commission issued a resolution whereby it evaluated and adopted the general recommendations included in the report of the Follow-up Committee and urged the parties to inform, by December 1, 1997, whether they were willing to continue the friendly settlement process or not.

8. On January 2, 1998, the State expressly acknowledged its international responsibility for Case 11.141 and accepted responsibility for the involvement of its agents in the death of the victims. On July 29, 1998, the President of the Republic publicly recognized the State’s responsibility for the action or neglect of public servants in the events of Villatina and handed to the families of each victim a document as a testimony of moral redress and atonement.

9. Despite the efforts made by the parties to promote the friendly settlement process, on October 5, 1998, they decided to terminate it, because most of the agreements drawn up during the different stages of the negotiations failed to be met. During the hearing held in the framework of the Commission’s 100th session, the State and the petitioners agreed to request the Commission to rule on the substance of the case with due recognition of the partial implementation of the recommendations made by the committees established in the framework of the attempt to reach a friendly settlement. On March 2, 1999, at the hearing held in the framework of the Commission’s 102nd session, the parties reported on the status of the compliance with the agreements drawn up in the framework of the Follow-up Committee.

10. On November 16, 2001, the Commission approved Report No. 123/01 pursuant to Article 50 of the American Convention and duly notified the State of this approval. In its report, the Commission establishes its competence to rule in the matter, refers to the attempt to reach a friendly settlement, and reviews the State’s responsibility for violation of Articles 4, 8, 25, and 1(1) of the American Convention in the light of its recognition of its responsibility. Likewise, in its Report 123/01, the Commission expressed its recognition of the effort made by the petitioners and the Colombian State to resolve the case by a friendly settlement process and regrets that this process has failed due to noncompliance with the commitments that were made to ensure justice and social reparation by historically commemorating the victims. In view of the information that was gathered during this process, recognition of responsibility by the Republic of Colombia, and the preceding considerations, the Commission concludes that the Colombian State is responsible for the violation of the right to life of the children Johanna Mazo Ramírez, Johnny Alexander Cardona Ramírez, Ricardo Alexander Hernandez, Giovanny Alberto Vallejo Restrepo, Oscar Andrés Ortiz Toro, Ángel Alberto Baron Miranda, Marlon Alberto Alvarez, and Nelson Duban Florez Villa and its obligation to provide them special protection by virtue of their status as children pursuant to Articles 4(1) and 19 of the American Convention, as well as the right to life and personal integrity of the young man Mauricio Antonio Higuita Ramírez, as set forth in Article 4(1) of the same Convention. Likewise, the Colombian State has failed to fulfill its obligation to duly provide for the right to fair trial and legal protection for the victims and their families pursuant to Articles 8(1) and 25 of the American Convention and its obligations to safeguard the guarantee provided in Article 1(1) of the same Convention.

11. On February 25, 2002, in view of the recommendations made by the IACHR, the Government of Colombia expressed its willingness to start up talks again with the petitioners in order to make progress in reviewing those commitments that have not as yet been met and to proceed with their implementation, as well as coordinate those aspects where, regarding this topic, there are differences between the parties. On February 26, 2002, the representatives of the State and the petitioners signed a document in which they testify to the intention of restarting the process of friendly settlement, on the basis of the following terms:
1. The parties agree to review the current status of the criminal investigations and to analyze the issue of the right to protection and fair trial and to include the results, in the light of the considerations of the Promotion Committee and Report 123/01, as part of the Agreement.

2. As for individual compensation for the persons who have not yet received it, the Government pledges to analyze once again the applicability of Law 288 of 1996.

3. As for social reparation, the parties agree to promote negotiations along the adequate channels to:

   a) build a monument of atonement;
   b) implement a new productive project that is operational and profitable;
   c) place a memorial plaque of the Villatina health center; and
   d) implement a nonformal education project.

The activity stemming from the document of February 26, 2002 led the parties to renew their intention to reach a friendly settlement pursuant to Article 49 of the American Convention.

12. Finally, on July 29, 2002, the parties signed a friendly settlement agreement in which a series of commitments specified below was established. Since then, the parties, with the good offices and supervision of the IACHR have made joint efforts to fulfill the commitments that were made to remedy the damage caused.

III. THE FACTS OF CASE 11.141: THE VILLATINA MASACRE

13. On November 15, 1992, at about 8:30 p.m., while several inhabitants of the barrio of Villatina in the city of Medellín were returning home from a religious service, about 12 men in three privately owned cars and carrying firearms used exclusively by security forces stopped at a street corner in the district, got out of their cars, ordered the children and young people who were there to lie down on the ground, and opened fired on them. As a result the following children died: 8-year old Johanna Mazo Ramírez, who had a leg in a cast because of a recent accident, Johnny Alexander Cardona Ramírez, Ricardo Alexander Hernández, Giovanny Alberto Vallejo Restrepo, Oscar Andrés Ortiz Toro, Ángel Alberto Barón Miranda, Marlon Alberto Álvarez, and Nelson Dubán Flórez Villa, all of who were between 15 and 17 years of age, and the young man Mauricio Antonio Higuita Ramírez, who was 22 years of age.

14. The attack against the children and young people came to a halt when a National Army patrol arrived on the scene, which triggered a brief confrontation without any deaths or arrests. The child Nelson Dubán Flórez Villa at first survived the assault and was transferred alive to the closest Intermediate Health Unit, where he eventually died. While he was being carried to the health care center, Nelson pointed out that he had recognized among the killers members of the National Police Force, companions of one of his relatives. The testimony of those who accompanied Nelson is consistent with the ballistic tests, which indicate that the bullets used in the massacre belonged to the Departmental Police Force and the National Army.

IV. THE FRIENDLY SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

15. On July 29, 2002, the representatives of the State and the petitioners signed a friendly settlement agreement. This document accepts the terms of the agreement signed on May 27, 1998 in a first attempt to reach a friendly settlement in this matter. The agreement recognizes the State’s responsibility for violation of the American Convention, the right to fair trial, and individual reparation to the families of the victims, as well as a social reparation.
element with health and education components and a productive project. The Report envisages the installation of a park with a monument in the city of Medellín to serve as a historical commemoration of the victims. Likewise, the Commission observes that the provisions of the agreement reflects the recommendations of the Committee to Promote the Administration of Justice, as well as those included in Report No. 123/01 of the Commission.

16. The agreement includes a mechanism to monitor fulfillment of the commitments, which consists of informing the Commission jointly at each regular session on the progress achieved, without detriment to ongoing information and communication that the parties will maintain during the implementation of the commitments, through periodical meetings that make it possible to conduct a specific follow-up of its implementation.

17. Before providing a detailed report of the commitments that were made in the agreement of July 29, 2002 and their degree of fulfillment, the Commission wishes to express its satisfaction at the terms of this agreement and to express its sincere appreciation to the parties for their efforts in reaching a friendly settlement based on the purpose and objective of the American Convention.

A. Recognition of responsibility and right to justice

18. In the friendly settlement agreement, the State recognized international responsibility for violating the American Convention in the following terms:

The State reiterates the contents of its communication of January 2, 1998 addressed to the Commission and publicly announced by the President of the Republic on July 29, 1998, recognizing its responsibility for the violent events in which the following children were killed: 8-year-old Johanna Mazo Ramírez, 17-year-old Johny Alexander Cardona Ramírez, 17-year-old Ricardo Alexander Hernández, 15-year-old Giovanny Alberto Vallejo Restrepo, 17-year-old Oscar Andrés Ortiz Toro, 16-year-old Angel Alberto Barón Miranda, 17-year-old Marlon Alberto Álvarez, 17-year-old Nelson Duban Flórez Villa, and the 22-year-old young man Mauricio Antonio Higuita Ramírez; and therefore, in the framework of the Inter-American Convention on Human Rights, it accepts its responsibility for these serious crimes.

19. As for the right to justice of the victims, their families, and society, the agreement provides that:

Taking into account that the criminal investigation for the serious crimes that led to the death of the children, previously remained under investigation for more than two years, the Committee to Promote the Administration of Justice was instructed, among other things, to guarantee due process of law in the performance of the judicial and disciplinary proceedings, as well as to identify evidence and promote its processing in the judiciary.

Despite the efforts made by the Follow-up Committee to monitor the recommendations made by the Promotion Committee, the investigations conducted in the criminal courts of law were not an effective mechanism to secure justice and to avoid the atrocious crime from remaining unpunished.

Partly because various pieces of evidence that were recommended by the Promotion Committee did not yield the results that they could have produced if they had been processed on time and in part because irregularities appeared, as pointed out by the Follow-up Committee itself[6] and the Surveillance Unit of the Office of the Attorney General of the Nation.[7]
On the basis of a review of the current status of the investigations, it was found that, although on November 14, 1994 the Office of the Prosecutor General of the Nation confirmed the first-instance decision of the Office of the Prosecutor in Charge of Human Rights whereby an order was issued to dismiss the three active members of the National Police Force for their participation in the massacre of the children, the Fourth Specialized Criminal Trial Court of Medellín issued a judgment of acquittal on April 30, 2002 in the proceedings that had been filed against one of these persons for covering up the crime. This judgment is now being appealed with the Superior Court of Medellín.

Because of the above, the Government and the petitioners adopted as part of the agreement the review on “Judicial Protection and Guarantees” that the Inter-American Commission made in its Report No. 123/01 of November 2001, which points out, among other matters:

54. Article 25 of the American Convention establishes the obligation of States to guarantee access to justice and to provide due judicial protection to persons under their jurisdiction.” (...)

55. The American Convention obliges the States to prevent, investigate, identify, and punish the perpetrators of, and those covering up, violations of human rights, especially when they affect the fundamental rights such as life. In those cases where the violation of a protected right has as a consequence the committing of a criminal act in the framework of domestic law, the victims or their families are entitled to have a regular court, rapidly and effectively, identify those responsible, try them, punish them accordingly, and effectively enforce the punishment.

56. As indicated by the Inter-American Court:

"Article 25, with respect to Article 1 (1), obliges the State to guarantee all persons access to the administration of justice and, in particular, to simple and prompt recourse so that those responsible for the violations of human rights can be tried and the damaged suffered can be compensated for. As indicated by this Court, "Article 25 is one of the fundamental pillars not only of the American Convention but also of the rule of law in a democratic society according to the Convention."[8]

The contents of Article 25 are closely related to Article 8(1) which enshrines the right of all persons to be heard in a fair trial and within a reasonable amount of time by an independent and impartial judge or court and grant to the family of the victims the right to have the death of their loved ones effectively investigated by the authorities, that legal proceedings be brought against those responsible, that they be punished accordingly, and that damages suffered be repaired. [9]

(...) in the present case, despite ballistic evidence, the testimony of the child Nelson Duban Flórez before his death, the testimonies of those living in Villatina and the State’s own recognition of responsibility, almost one decade has elapsed without those responsible being brought to trial or punished.

58. In the present case, the delay has not only deprived the families of the victims of an effective action to obtain justice and reparation for a decade, it has also contributed to undermining the possibility of bringing those responsible to trial on the basis of existing evidence and continues to generate risks for the lives of the witnesses and the families of the victims.
62. In view of these considerations, it should be concluded that, in the present case, the State has not secured the necessary means to fulfill its obligation to investigate the extra-judicial execution of the victims, to bring to trial and punish those responsible, and to provide reparation to the families of the victims. The execution of the victims in the present case remains unpunished, which, as indicated by the Court, "promotes the chronic repetition of violations of human rights and the total defenselessness of the victims and their families.

On the basis of the above, the State recognized that, despite the results of the disciplinary investigations, it has not fulfilled its obligation to provide due judicial guarantees and protection to the victims and their families pursuant to the provisions of Articles 8 (1) and 25 of the American Convention and expressed its will to continue investigating the facts that would enable them to identify, bring to trial, and punish those responsible.

B. Measures to repair the damage caused to the victims and their families

20. As part of the measures for full reparation, the agreement includes measures aimed to repair the damage individually and collectively in its different aspects. As for pecuniary compensation, the agreement points out that:

Considering that the Government of Colombia recognized its international responsibility for the serious crimes committed on November 15, 1992, the National Police Force, in compliance with the recommendations of the Promotion Committee, reached an agreement with the families of the victims who filed timely proceedings for compensation for damages with the Administrative Court of Antioquia. This conciliation was approved by means of a ruling issued on March 12, 1998.

Taking into account that the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, in Report 123/01, declared that the State was responsible and made recommendations, which include that of:

"2. Providing full reparation to the families of the victims in conformity with the commitments made for compensation (...) during the attempt to reach a friendly settlement.

Taking into account also that the Rapporteur for Colombia of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights addressed the Minister of Foreign Affairs last May 16th and indicated that this recommendation comes under Law 288, for those who, according to what was ascertained during the proceedings with the Commission, did in fact suffer damages as a consequence of the events that took place in Villatina in November 1992.

The Government of Colombia, as a result, through the Committee of Ministers established by Law 288 of 1996, ruled that the matter was with merit by means of Resolution 06/02 for compliance with Report No. 123/01 of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, in the terms and for the purposes of Law 288 of 1996; so that, according to the Committee, there are the factual and legal grounds as envisaged in the Political Constitution and in applicable international treaties.

In this regard, the Government, in addition to enforcing Law 288 of 1996, by means of the corresponding proceedings, pledges to estimate the amounts for the reparation of damages, applying for this purpose the parameters that were used in the case of Trujillo, in view of the commitments made in the Promotion Committee, recognition of the State’s responsibility, the Commission’s recommendations, and precedents of law.

Resolution number 06/02 of July 22, 2002 of the Committee of Ministers established by Law 288 of 1996 and the commitment of the Director General of the National Police Force to estimate by conciliation the amounts of the compensations for the families of the victims who have not been fully compensated are part of the present friendly settlement agreement.

The Commission has learned that substantial progress has been made in the process of estimating and paying the compensatory amounts due to the families of the victims.

21. As for the measures of collective reparation involving health, the agreement points out that:

We the parties agreed, in February 1996, on the development of a project aimed to improve basic health care for the inhabitants of Villatina, which has been materialized with the building of the Health Center that is currently functioning in the neighborhood.

As part of the obligation of the Colombian State to commemorate the victims and make moral amends and provide reparations to their families, the State pledged to place a memorial plaque in the Health Center, which shall be installed prior to the next regular session of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, with the following text:

The Colombian Government publicly recognized its responsibility to the OAS Inter-American Commission on Human Rights and to Colombian society for the violation of human rights in these serious crimes, chargeable to agents of the State. Likewise, it expressed its feelings of solidarity and condolences to the families of the victims.

This action of moral redress and atonement will not be enough to ease the pain that this crime has caused, but it is an obligation of the State, a fundamental step to do justice and so that crimes of this nature do not occur again.

Medellín, (date)”

The plaque will not bear the name of any national, departmental or municipal authority and will be installed during a public ceremony attended by representatives of the National Government and local government, the families of the victims, and the petitioners.

The Commission has learned that measures aimed at installing the plaques to the memory of the victims in the health center have been taken.

22. Regarding the collective reparation measures related to education, the agreement points out that:

In fulfillment of the commitments made in February 1996, the Government of Colombia pledged to remodel the San Francisco de Asís Primary School so that it could also provide basic secondary education services. This project has been developed gradually since 1999, as a result of which the physical premises have been satisfactorily refurbished and classes have been gradually opened.

The Government of Colombia, in compliance with the recommendations contained in Report 123/01 of the Inter-American Commission, pledges to continue without interruption the process of opening grades up to eleventh grade.

23. Regarding the collective reparation measures involving the implementation of a productive project, the agreement establishes that the parties agreed to start up a new project on the basis of the following terms:

The parties agreed in February 1996 that the National Government would draw up, submit, and promote among public institutions in charge of this matter, along with the respective feasibility study, a project for creating jobs especially aimed at the neighborhood’s young people. Afterwards, at the request of the families of the victims, it was determined that the project would be aimed at the affected families and a process started up to install a center for storing building materials, which ended up by being grocery store.

In the development of the productive project of the storage center, administrative irregularities seem to have occurred and they need to be clarified through the corresponding legal mechanisms so that the competent authorities can determine what occurred and, if the facts warrant it, those found to be responsible can be punished.

Because of the above, the parties agreed to start up a new productive project, taking into account the factors that led to the failure of the previous one. At the suggestion of the Secretary of Government of Medellín, we the parties have agreed to include the new productive project in the PARE Program headed by the Archdiocese of Medellín.

On May 29, the petitioners informed the Government that the families of the victims had indicated their decision to implement a project aimed at setting up and running a sewing shop.

On the basis of this information, the Administrative Department of the Office of the President and National Planning confirmed that resources had been obtained to implement this project. In addition, the DAPRE specified that it would carry out the due and necessary legal procedures so that it would be that central entity that would give the money to the Archdiocese of Medellín and would oversee the agreement drawn up for this purpose. It was also agreed that both the movables and real estate assets that the Municipality of Medellín had purchased for the previous project would be for the sewing shop.

On July 22, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Administrative Department of the Office of the President of the Republic, and the Interdisciplinary Group for Human Rights met with the Archdiocese of Medellín and some of the mothers of the victims to discuss the terms whereby the PARE Program will serve as a support for the implementation of the productive project chosen by the community. At this meeting, the Archdiocese accepted to collaborate and granted the parties the means within its reach to fulfill the commitments as specified by the petitioners and the Government.

Taking into account that one of the commitments acquired by the Government in the framework of the friendly settlement was to draw up and implement a nonformal education program aimed at the community and that this commitment has still not been implemented, we the parties have agreed that the initial phase of the productive project, that is, the one involving participatory planning, in which the mothers of the victims receive training on community projects and participate in the formulation of their own projects, shall be funded without the involvement of resources allocated for the project by the National Government. Regarding this, the Government has reached a solution by involving the collaboration of the FIEL Institute in the city of Medellín, which has expressed its readiness to take up this first stage in coordination with the Archdiocese of Medellín.

Finally, the parties agree that the petitioners to the IACHR, representatives of the families of the victims, will be able to supervise at any time implementation and execution of the productive project.

On August 13, 2004, the petitioners reported that, at the end of the year 2003, when the Productive Project was starting up commercial production and about 30% of the funds given to the UNDP had still not been implemented, the National Government ordered reimbursement of these funds to the General Department of the National Treasury.\[11\] The petitioners claim that, because of this measure, the company came to a standstill, several of the obligations that were accepted failed to be fulfilled, and the premises that had been remodeled had to be returned to their owner for default. On August 17, 2004, the Commission requested information from the State on compliance with item (c) of the friendly settlement agreement signed on July 29, 2002 and granted a 15-day deadline for the State to reply. On September 23, 2004, the State presented its communication to the Commission in which it recognized that, at the request of the Ministry of Finance and Public Credit, it was necessary to reimburse 30 million pesos to the National Treasury, adding that, thanks to efforts by the Presidential Program of Human Rights and International Humanitarian Law, 40 million pesos had been allocated to replace the amount that was repaid to the State.\[12\]

On March 01, 2005, the Colombian State and the petitioners presented to the IACHR a joint report from February 17, 2005, informing about the contents of the commitments implementation concerning the support to the productive project, including the payment of damages for the standstill above mentioned. Likewise, in that document both parties required the approval and publication of the friendly settlement agreement, in accordance of Article 49 of the American Convention.\[13\]

24. As for the collective reparation measures to commemorate the victims, the agreement established that:

The National Government and the petitioners wish to reiterate, in this friendly settlement agreement, that the purpose of building a work of art is to commemorate the children, as well as make moral amends and provide reparations to the families of the victims. Therefore, any project that is developed in this direction should count on the support and interest of the community, the families, and the petitioners to IACHR.

The parties recognized that, in the first stage of looking for a friendly settlement, conditions were suitable for implementing and erecting a monument, including the corresponding budget appropriations, but for different administrative reasons that should be the target of an investigation by the competent authorities, they decided that the project could not be carried out.
Because of the above, after identifying the matters that prevented this commitment from being fulfilled in the past, we the parties agree to define the following items regarding the building of the monument, after the National Government discussed it with the Municipality of Medellín:

(1) The monument will be built in one of the three parks of the city of Medellín: Parque del Periodista (Maracaibo & Girardot), Parque San Antonio (Av. Oriental) or Plazuela del Teatro Pablo Tobón Uribe (Av. La Playa). The Municipality of Medellín shall choose from among these alternatives. The Office of the Mayor of Medellín, in turn, has five days as of the date of the signing of the inter-administrative agreement to obtain the necessary permits issued by Municipal Planning.

(2) The petitioners and the Office of the Mayor of Medellín shall each submit two names of artists to invite them to present proposals, in accordance with the terms of reference that the Administrative Department of the Office of the President will be providing in due time.

(3) The parties agreed that the petitioners would have the right to suggest some parameters in the terms of reference for hiring the artist. In conformity with the above, the petitioners have requested that the following be taken into account: a) that the work of art be made of bronze, b) that the work of art be comprised of 9 elements which should be clearly identifiable as the 9 victims, c) that the project include the complete remodeling of the public space that will be used, and d) that the artist have some personal or professional experience in the field of human rights or in similar or related areas. The parties agree that the Ministry of Foreign Affairs shall transmit to the DAPRE the suggestions of the petitioners, which shall be taken into account in due time, as part of the contracting process.

(4) The contracting process will be conducted directly by the Administrative Department of the Office of the President, which will also supervise implementation of the contract, without detriment to the collaboration of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the petitioners in the latter activity. In this hiring process, on the basis of what was agreed, a proposal evaluation committee will be set up with the participation of a person designated by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, one by the petitioners in coordination with IACHR, and one by the Office of the President of the Republic.

The National Government confirms that the resources that were earmarked to build the monument commemorating the killed children have been approved and appropriated.

As for the text that should appear on the plaque of the monument, we the parties have agreed on the following:

"To the memory of Johanna Mazo Ramírez (8 years old), Giovanny Alberto Vallejo Restrepo (15 years old), Johny Alexander Cardona Ramírez (17 years old), Ricardo Alexander Hernández (17 years old), Oscar Andrés Ortiz Toro (17 years old), Angel Alberto Barón Miranda (16 years old), Marlon Alberto Álvarez (17 years old), Nelson Duban Flórez Villa (17 years old) and Mauricio Antonio Higuia Ramírez (22 years old), killed on November 15, 1992, in the district of Villatina in Medellín.

The Colombian Government recognized its responsibility to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights of the OAS and to Colombian society for the violation of human rights in this serious crime, chargeable to State agents.

This monument is a way to commemorate the victims, make moral amends and express atonement to the families, and although it is not enough to ease the pain produced by this action, it has become a fundamental step for justice to be done and to remind Colombians that crimes of this nature cannot be repeated.

The plaque will not bear the name of any national, departmental, or municipal authority and it will be installed during a public ceremony attended by representatives of the National Government and local government, the families of the victims, and the petitioners.

As for the implementation of this measure, the Commissioner at that time, Robert K. Goldman, who was a member of the jury to select the project of the monument envisaged in the agreement, expressed his viewpoint on the different proposals on the basis of the terms of reference issued by the Administrative Department of the Office of the President of the Republic of Colombia on December 30, 2002. Likewise, on May 12, 2003, the Commission requested the good offices of the Mayor of Medellín to speed up the negotiations that had yet to be done. Finally, on July 13, 2004, the ceremony to unveil the monument was held in the Plaza del Periodista in the city of Medellín. The ceremony was attended by the mothers of the victims, the Archdiocese of Medellín, the Vice-President of the Republic, the Minister of Defense, the Director of the National Police Force, authorities from the Office of the Mayor of Medellín, the petitioners in case 11.141 and the IACHR, represented by Commissioner Susana Villarán[14]—who replaced Robert K. Goldman as rapporteur for Colombia in January 2004—and the Executive Secretary, Santiago Cantón.

26. The agreement envisages its publication and distribution on the basis of the following terms:

Taking into account that the present Friendly Settlement Agreement contributes substantially to full reparation for the victims of the violations of human rights, and constitutes as well a mechanism to promote in the future the speedy, timely, and effective implementation of judicial investigations to prevent crimes of this nature to remain unpunished, we the parties agree that the National Government shall publish and disseminate, in coordination with the petitioners, five hundred copies of the complete text of the agreement, including the documents that are part of it and its annexes.

In view of the characteristics of the agreement and the joint work of the parties to agree on its terms in conformity with the purpose and objective of the rights protected in the American Convention, the Commission highlights the importance of this commitment and its fulfillment.

V. CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

27. On the basis of the preceding considerations and by virtue of the procedure set forth in Articles 48(1)(f) and 49 of the American Convention, the Commission wishes to reiterate its satisfaction at the signing of the friendly settlement agreement in the present case, its compatibility with the purpose and objective of the American Convention, and also to highlight the efforts of the parties to reach an agreement and implement it.

28. The Commission wishes to highlight the State’s fulfillment of the substantive part of the commitments made in the agreement. At the same time, it calls upon the State to continue to fulfill the remaining commitments that were made and to cooperate in the corresponding follow-up process.
29. By virtue of the considerations and conclusions set forth in the present report,

THE INTER-AMERICAN COMMISSION ON HUMAN RIGHTS,

DECIDES:

1. To approve the terms of the friendly settlement agreement signed on July 29, 2003.

2. To urge the State to take the necessary measures to fulfill the commitments that are pending, particularly the obligation to provide the right to a fair trial and judicial protection to the victims and their families according to Article 8(1) and 25 of the American Convention by continuing with the facts investigation, which will allow to identify, judge and sanction those responsible.

3. To continue supervising the fulfillment of the commitments made to ensure a historical commemoration of the victim and access to justice.

4. To publish the present report and include it in its Annual Report to the General Assembly of the OAS.

Done and signed at the headquarters of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights in Washington, D.C., on the 27th day of October 2005. Signed: Clare K. Roberts, First Vice-President; Susana Villarán, Second Vice-President; Commissioners Evelio Fernández Arévalos, Paulo Sergio Pinheiro, Freddy Gutiérrez and Florlentín Meléndez.

In addition, it invites them to take into account, in the efforts to draw them up, the evidence and information known by the Committee itself and collected by any judicial or disciplinary instance or received by the Committee or by the parties from any other source. It clarifies that, because the contract with UNDP ended on June 30, 2004, the Office of the President has been obliged to implement directly the resources and indicates that it expects to sign contracts for the implementation of available resources during the last week of September 2004. The State has indicated that the resources available in the amount of the 40 million will be disbursed as follows: 30 million pesos for a contract to be signed with Mercaferro EAT, a company comprised of mothers (for inputs and maintenance) and 10 million pesos for a supervision contract to exercise control and surveillance over the project.

[14] At the ceremony, Commissioner Villarán stated: “On November 15, 1992, in the barrio of Villatina Caycedo, here in Medellín, members of the National Police Force executed the children Johana Mazo Ramírez, who was 8 years old, Jhonny Alexander Cardona Ramírez who was 17, Ricardo Alexander Hernández who was also 17, Giovanny Alberto Vallejo Restrepo who was 15 years old, Oscar Andrés Ortiz Toro who was 17 years old, Ángel Alberto Barón Miranda who was 16 years old, Marín Alberto Álvarez who was 17 years old, Nelson Duban Florez Villa who was 17 years old, and the young man Mauricio Antonio Higuita Ramírez, who was 22 years old. Most of these children belong to a group called "Builders of the Future." The future was violently taken away from them, they died before their time, and thus their dreams and life ambitions were cut down. In 1995, the representatives of the victims met with the government at an IACHR session to pave the way for a friendly settlement that culminated in the establishment of a Committee to Promote the Administration of Justice, which was set up in this city on September 29, 1995. Various years passed, agreements on justice and reparation were signed. It was not easy, it was not just matter of having the Colombian State recognize its international responsibility, which was done publicly by the President of the Republic on July 29, 1998. Not all the agreements materialized and the friendly settlement process ended in 1998. In November 2001, our Commission issued a report with very concrete recommendations: among them, guarantees for an investigation that would identify, try, and convict the perpetrators, full reparation for the families, and the pronouncement of guarantees that actions as atrocious as this one would never occur again. In 2002, the friendly settlement was taken up again on the basis of the State’s responsibility, the right to justice, individual reparation, social reparation in health, education, a productive project and a monument that we are unveiling today. I repeat, it has not been an easy going, but today the Commission congratulates itself for having fulfilled the mission that was entrusted to it by the American Convention on Human Rights. And it does so to recall that it has no meaning other than that of remembering these children to the heart of this society. It is also doing it to send a message through this monument: it involves human beings, children that the State should have provided special protection to and did not. On the contrary, it violated their right to life, denied their families for a long time their right to justice and reparation, adding defenselessness to the pain of an irreparable loss. The message is that, as of today, the children of Medellín will be effectively and especially protected. The IACHR is happy that both the families and the government have trusted in international mechanisms for the protection of human rights and have found effective solutions despite the difficulties that were encountered on the way. Nine persons, eight of them children, were executed. We should not be counting them, each one is unique and impossible to duplicate. When we refer to the victims, we should not count them, out of respect for their inherent dignity and humanity, we should only recite their names and by doing so return them symbolically to the lives of their families and to society as a whole. May this be the occasion to redouble our commitment to life and long-lasting peace for this dearly beloved people of Colombia. We owe it to Johana, to Jhonny, to Ricardo, to Giovanny, to Oscar, to Angel, to Marion, to Nelson, and to Mauricio. RESPONSE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO INTER-
AMERICAN COMMISSION ON HUMAN RIGHTS REPORT 85/00 OF OCTOBER 23, 2000 CONCERNING MARIEL CUBANS (Case 9903)

The United States rejects Commission Report 85/00 of October 23, 2000, in its entirety. The United States respectfully requests that the Commission publish the following Response of the United States in the next Annual Report of the Commission, if Report 85/00 is published.

INTRODUCTION

In response to the petition of April 10, 1987 in the above-referenced case, the United States has submitted four lengthy and detailed written filings to the Commission dated:

October 9, 1987
January 19, 1988
July 29, 1988
March 22, 1999

In addition, the United States has participated vigorously in hearings before the Commission, notwithstanding the Commission’s disregard for the consistently stated objections of the United States to the convening of those hearings and to the Commission’s overall manner of proceeding in this case.

More than thirteen years after the petition against the United States Government was filed in this case, the Commission issued Report 85/00 on October 23, 2000 setting forth the following conclusions:

1. The Status Review and Cuban Review Plans do not constitute effective domestic remedies within the meaning of Article 37 of the Commission’s Regulations, and, therefore, their continuing availability to Petitioners does not bar consideration by the Commission of their claims.

2. The United States has violated Articles I, II, XVII, XVIII, and XXV of the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man.

In accordance with these conclusions, the Commission proceeded to make the following recommendations to the United States in Report 85/00:

1. For all Petitioners remaining in custody, status reviews should be conducted “as soon as is practicable” to ascertain the “legality” of their detentions under “the applicable norms of the American Declaration.”

2. Laws, procedures, and practices should be reviewed to ensure that all aliens who are detained, including aliens who are considered “excludable” under immigration laws, are afforded full protection “of all of the rights established in the American Declaration, in particular Articles I, II, XVII, XVIII, and XXV.”

For the United States, the objectionable nature of the Commission’s handling of this case was most recently demonstrated by the Commission’s April 4 decision (communicated to the United States in a letter of April 9, 2001) to publish its report without the courtesy of further consultations and coordination with the United States. This action was taken by the Commission notwithstanding its knowledge that the United States had for several months been carrying out in good faith the very difficult task of attempting to compile complete and accurate factual information on the most relevant individual cases identified either by the Commission in its report or in recent submissions to the Commission.[1]

Moreover, in its January 29, 2001 extension request letter, the United States alerted the Commission to the fact that its consideration of this case might be barred by its own Rules of Procedure, specifically the article on Duplication of Procedures (Article 33 in the Rules effective on May 1, 2001).

Since the United States has now determined that Article 33 does indeed bar Commission consideration of this case, the Commission could have avoided embarrassment and damage to its credibility by delaying publication of Report 85/00 until after consideration of the forthcoming United States response, or at least by inquiring of the United States as to the substance of the claimed duplication.

For the record, the United States did request an extension of time to reply, but was granted only a short extension by the Commission. In the view of the United States, the Commission’s arbitrary and heavy-handed procedural conduct throughout this case raises very serious questions concerning the Commission’s impartiality.

From the outset of this case, more than a decade ago, to the present, it is the position of the United States Government that the written submissions of the United States and its presentations at hearings of the Commission have established overwhelmingly that the Commission should immediately have declared the petition inadmissible or, in the alternative, should have promptly dismissed it if the petition were somehow found admissible.

SUMMARY OF RESPONSE

Article I.

1. The United States disagrees with the conclusions of the Commission in this case, rejects the Commission’s conclusions, and requests that the Commission withdraw, and refrain from publishing, Report 85/00.

2. With regard to each implication or direct assertion in the Commission’s report that the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man itself accords rights or imposes duties, some of which the United States has supposedly violated, the United States reminds the Commission that the Declaration is no more than a recommendation to the American States. Accordingly, the Declaration does not create legally binding obligations and therefore cannot be “violated.”

3. With regard to the substantive legal and policy aspects of this case, the United States maintains all of the points made repeatedly to the Commission in the four major written submissions cited above, and during hearings before the Commission in this case. The United States will not reiterate all of those points in full here, but asserts the continuing validity of all points previously made, and refers the Commission to the record in this case.

The United States will emphasize in this submission, as concisely as possible, certain fundamental and irrefutable arguments by the United States that should have been decisive in persuading the Commission to find the petition inadmissible, or to dismiss it, long ago. Regrettably, the Commission failed to give adequate weight to these points, which, to say the least, are not reflected or adequately acknowledged in the Commission’s report.

4. With regard to the facts of as many as possible of the individual cases mentioned either in the Commission’s Report or the March 22, 1999 submission of the United States, updated reports are set forth in the Addendum to this Response.

5. From a review of the Commission’s Report, it is the impression of the United States that virtually the entire decision rests on, or flows from, the Commission’s unsupported and insupportable assertion that there exists in international human rights law a rebuttable presumption that everyone has a right to freedom, in whatever country he is located and no matter what his legal or immigration status in that country. The Commission cites no legally binding international instrument to which the United States is a Party or any other source of widely accepted or respectable authority for this proposition. In fact, the Commission has fashioned this so-called international human right out of whole cloth. No such right exists.

6. In addition to the arguments previously made for a finding of inadmissibility or dismissal of the petition, the United States wishes to inform the Commission that the petition duplicates the work of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, and therefore must be dismissed in accordance with Article 33 of the Commission’s regulations.

   In particular, Article 33 provides that the Commission shall not consider a petition if its subject matter “essentially duplicates” a petition “already examined and settled by another international governmental organization of which the State concerned is a member.” The issues raised by the petition in this case and the petitions (or “communications”) submitted to the UN Commission on Human Rights in a so-called 1503 process case resolved on April 7, 1997 are essentially identical in all significant respects. This is particularly true with respect to the issues of detention of Mariel Cubans and their claim to have a right to be admitted into the United States.

   If this Duplication of Procedures prohibition against Commission action has any meaning whatsoever, the exceptions stated in Article 33 cannot be interpreted (or in any way “stretched”) to apply in this case. In short, Article 33 applies to this case, and the Commission is barred from further consideration of the petition.

   The United States has not raised the duplication issue previously because, like this Commission’s process, the 1503 process of the United Nations is confidential.
Consequently, the United States did not wish to mention the 1503 proceedings of 1997 in this case at all.

   In addition, however, the United States also did not do so because the United States considered it unnecessary. The United States could not have imagined that the Commission would not only disregard the case for inadmissibility and dismissal, but would purport to create international human rights that do not exist, and never have.

   At this stage, therefore, the United States has no choice but to invoke Article 33 and to inform the Commission that a superior body, the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, voted on April 7, 1997 to discontinue consideration of a Mariel Cuban case that “essentially duplicates” (using the key term in Article 33) the petition in this case. The margin of decision by the UN Commission on Human Rights was 45 to 2, with 4 abstentions.

7. The most relevant provision of international (treaty) law binding upon the United States is Article 12, paragraph 1, of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), which declares:

“Everyone lawfully within the territory of a State shall, within that territory, have the right to liberty of movement and freedom to choose his residence.” (emphasis added)

However, this right and the right to leave any country, including one’s own, are subject to the potential restrictions set forth in paragraph 3, even for those lawfully in a State’s territory. Those restrictions must be provided by law and be consistent with the other rights recognized in the ICCPR, but nevertheless give the State broad authority and discretion, since restrictions may be based on national security, public order, public health or morals, or the rights and freedoms of others. Only paragraph 4 of Article 12 articulates a right that is absolute and can fairly be considered customary international law:

It is exclusively Cuba’s failure to respect this international norm that has placed the petitioners in the situation about which they complain, not any act or omission by the United States. The fact that Cuba has not submitted to the jurisdiction of this Commission does not justify the Commission focusing its attention on the only other available target in this case, the United States.

8. With regard to Article 12(1) of the ICCPR cited above, it is unchallenged that petitioners have never been lawfully in the territory of the United States. Their presence has been unlawful from the outset. Put differently, they have never had a lawful basis for being in the United States. It is absurd to claim that people who have no legal right to be in a country, whose presence there is not lawful, and who have unquestionably shown that they pose a danger to the community, nevertheless somehow have a right to be at liberty in that country, or at the very least enjoy a rebuttable presumption in favor of being at liberty.

GENERAL DISCUSSION

The petitioners are approximately 367 Cuban nationals who arrived in the United States in 1980. Many of them were taken from Cuban jails and sent here during the mass exodus of more than 125,000 undocumented aliens who illegally came to this country when Fidel Castro opened the Port of Mariel to Cubans who wanted to leave that country (“Mariel Cubans”).

The petitioners claim that they are entitled to be admitted into the United States, despite their serious and repeated violations of this country’s criminal laws, and despite the sovereign right of the United States, shared by all other nations, to regulate its borders. They also aver that they are being unlawfully detained, although few of the petitioners are even in custody at this time. All of the petitioners have been paroled into the United States one or more times, and the vast majority presently enjoy that status, many having been released after committing new crimes even while their petition was pending before this Commission.

As noted above, the United States has previously responded in detail to the Petition, and reiterates its consistent position, restated in recent correspondence, and in the four major submissions previously cited that: (1) the Petition is inadmissible because Petitioners failed to exhaust their domestic remedies and the Petition fails to raise any significant issue.
under the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man ("American Declaration"), or any other rule of international law; and (2) it fails to articulate any ground for action by this Commission because the detention of criminal aliens lawfully denied admission to the United States is not inconsistent with, and does not "violate," any provision of the American Declaration, which as a non-binding instrument cannot be "violated" in any event.

The Commission's Report (at ¶ 249) acknowledges the serious problems forced upon the United States by the unprecedented influx of the undocumented aliens who illegally traveled to this country in the 1980 Mariel boatlift, compounded by the continuing, unreasonable and unlawful failure of the Government of Cuba to accept the return of all of its nationals. The Report also acknowledges the extraordinarily generous treatment by the United States afforded to the Mariel Cubans, the vast majority of whom have been extended the opportunity for lawful status in this country and, for many, citizenship through a variety of legislative acts.

Likewise, the United States' treatment of the petitioners-inadmissible aliens who committed violent and other serious new crimes in the United States after their arrival in the Mariel boatlift--can also only be characterized as generous. The Report's conclusions that the petitioners have been subjected to arbitrary detention or unfairly burdened by inadequate custody review procedures cannot be reconciled with the facts of petitioners' own cases. Most have been released within the United States, despite their clear ineligibility to enter or reside lawfully in this country, and despite the dangerous criminal conduct with which they have repaid this extraordinary hospitality. The Report's conclusion that the fundamental authority of the United States to exclude dangerous aliens is somehow diminished, or that it is compelled by Cuba's irresponsible and unlawful actions to assume the risk of hosting dangerous aliens in its communities, is not supported by any article of the American Declaration. Indeed, the suggestion that such aliens are presumptively entitled to liberty because of the unlawful failure or refusal of their own government to honor its obligations to its nationals, and irrespective of such aliens' individual failure or refusal to comply with the host country's civil and criminal laws, squarely conflicts with several provisions of the same instrument, including Articles VIII, XIX, XXVII, XXIX, XXXIII.

At best, as mentioned above, the Report suggests a heretofore unknown rule of international law, to which no nation subscribes.

In addition to the discussion that follows in response to some of the Report's findings, the United States incorporates by reference here, and respectfully refers the Commission to, its previous responses in opposition to this petition. This exhaustive and informed analysis clearly demonstrates that the actions of the United States in relation to the uninvited and inadmissible aliens who arrived here during the Mariel boatlift have been, and continue to be, entirely consistent with domestic and international law. These actions fully respect the human rights of the petitioners and other Mariel Cubans, all of whom have access to a variety of administrative procedures and independent judicial review to ensure that they are treated justly and humanely.

Moreover, in that the United States continues in its efforts to persuade the Government of Cuba to repatriate Mariel Cubans who cannot or will not live lawfully in the United States, the United States finds the Report (and the decision to publish it) particularly objectionable because of its potential to affect adversely and impermissibly ongoing diplomatic initiatives by the United States to resolve the current impasse with Cuba about repatriation of individuals such as petitioners, as well as efforts by officials of both governments to deter future illegal migration.

The Report's irresponsible assertion that, once here, even illegal migrants are entitled to liberty in the United States, can only encourage further unlawful, inherently dangerous attempts to migrate to the United States, with more loss of life in the process. Without justification, the Commission's Report also represents an inappropriate and significant intrusion into United States domestic matters, in that it has the potential to hamper, if not actually undermine, efforts by the United States to promote orderly immigration and contain serious concerns related to the illegal presence and removal of dangerous criminal aliens.

Subsequent events, including recent decisions of the United States Supreme Court, among them Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. __, 121 S. Ct. 2491 (2001), and the September 11 terrorist attacks in New York and Washington, D.C., underscore the validity of the objections of the United States to the Commission's Report.

These events clearly demonstrate that foreign nationals, including criminal aliens, are afforded meaningful avenues of judicial review in the United States, and provide additional grounds that should compel the Commission to withdraw its novel suggestion, to which no nation subscribes, that one country can force another to admit undesirable or dangerous aliens.

SPECIFIC REPLY POINTS

I. THE CONTINUED DETENTION OF MARIEL CUBANS WHO HAVE NO RIGHT TO ENTER THE UNITED STATES DOES NOT VIOLATE INTERNATIONAL LAW.

A. A State Has No Obligation Under International Law

To Admit Aliens Into Its Territory Whose Presence It Deems To Be Harmful

The detention of dangerous aliens who have committed serious crimes or who otherwise pose a danger to themselves or the community is a lawful exercise of the sovereign authority of the United States to regulate the entry and presence of aliens within its borders. It is well settled in international law that a State has no obligation to admit aliens into its territory whose presence is not in its national interests or is potentially harmful to its public safety. Rather, every nation enjoys the fundamental sovereign power, essential to self-preservation, to forbid the entrance of foreigners, and to admit them only under such conditions as it may see fit.

There certainly is no known principle of international law, let alone any binding obligation, that compels one nation to accept the dangerous criminals of another, even when they have been expelled and effectively exiled by their own government. A sovereign State has the right to protect its society, and to do so through the exclusion of aliens from its territory, for economic, political, social and other reasons it deems critical to the well-being of its citizens and lawful residents.\(^2\)

In fact, the only internationally recognized right that is being violated (under customary international law for non-Parties to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights such as Cuba) in the petitioners’ cases is the right of everyone to return to his country of nationality. As noted above and repeatedly in previous submissions, this right is being violated by the Government of Cuba, not the United States.\(^3\) The United States reiterates that the petitioners’ complaint and the Commission’s concerns should be addressed to Cuban officials, not the United States.

No reasonable reading of the American Declaration in general or the particular articles cited in the Report contradicts these principles, or supports the conclusion that an alien has a presumptive right to liberty in any country other than his own, or the contention that a foreign government may effectively dictate the admission of its undesirable and dangerous citizens by unlawfully expelling and exiling them to another State.

As exhaustively demonstrated in the previous submissions by the United States in this matter, detention of dangerous, illegal migrants does not violate international human rights law or any other universally accepted principle of international law. Instead, detention is a recognized, legitimate means, under both domestic and international law, of enforcing a State’s inherent sovereign right and power to regulate immigration into its territory.

Nonetheless, detention is neither the goal of United States immigration law, nor the only means of enforcement when an alien cannot be promptly returned to his own or a third country. Less restrictive alternatives are permitted under the immigration statute, including discretionary parole or other supervised release into the community to await repatriation. Such alternatives, however, are reasonably conditioned upon the lawful conduct of the alien when released. Where less restrictive measures have proved unworkable, or inadequate to prevent the resumption of violent or recidivist criminal conduct, detention is an appropriate means of enforcement in order to prevent the very harm to which the regulation of immigration is addressed.

Court rulings that have sustained the authority of the Attorney General under the immigration laws to detain Mariel Cubans who are lawfully excluded, but who are stranded here by the human rights violations and otherwise unlawful actions of their own government, and who cannot be safely released into the community, are not inconsistent with the American Declaration. The articles cited in the Report do not define liberty in abstract or absolute terms, but must be understood in light of the competing right of a State to restrain individual liberties. They do not purport to guarantee admission or release of aliens lawfully excluded under that State’s existing laws. (See U.S. submission Jan. 19, 1988).

The Supreme Court of the United States has found detention to be lawful when there is a reasonable apprehension of harm to the community by aliens who have been denied admission and are awaiting their removal to another country.[4] The Court also held that the Government’s objective of protecting the community from the threat of harm posed by aliens lawfully denied admission to the United States is a legitimate objective that outweighs the aliens’ interest in securing release from detention.[5]

The United States accordingly disagrees with the Report’s finding (at ¶ 216) that the detention of the petitioners “violates” the American Declaration, particularly in view of the fact that the Declaration cannot be violated, as explained above. The United States reiterates that the Declaration does not establish binding legal obligations that can be violated by anyone.

Even if the Declaration were a legally binding instrument, the United States would not be in violation of it. None of the articles cited, including Articles I and XXV of the Declaration, can be construed to suggest that criminal or other undesirable aliens must be admitted to any country they choose, or to dilute the authority of the country to which their own government has unlawfully expelled them to enforce its own laws or promote those interests protected through the regulation of immigration.

The petitioners – aliens who have never been eligible for admission to the United States, and have been ordered excluded based on their convictions of serious crimes – cannot force the United States to admit or release them into its territory. Neither the intransigence of their own government, nor the petitioners’ illegal presence in this country, changes this analysis or confers on them the entitlement they claim to be at liberty in American society.

Just as the Declaration does not create legal duties, it cannot create rights. The United States nonetheless has provided generous alternatives to detention through the immigration parole statute. Insofar as the government of Cuba has refused, in violation of international law and basic principles of human rights, to accept the return of its citizens, however, it has left the United States with no reasonable alternative except to detain those who pose an unacceptable risk to the communities into which they would be released.
Nor can even an expansive reading of Articles I and XXV displace competing State interests or existing procedures of law in the circumstances presented here. The Supreme Court of the United States has held that, because the alien’s presence in this country is illegal, an alien denied admission likewise lacks an enforceable right to be released into the United States, where such release would pose an unacceptable risk of harm to society. The petitioners remain in this country only because their orders of exclusion have not yet been effectuated. At most, they are entitled to a proportionate, constitutionally adequate procedure for determining whether they should be detained or released pending efforts to secure their repatriation, or further consideration for release. The current custody review procedures meet or exceed this standard.

The petitioners have not established that they have been denied adequate administrative or judicial process. Rather, all of the petitioners have been released or paroled into the United States one or more times under the very procedures they label inadequate. That parole afforded each of them an opportunity to reside in society, and was forfeited because of the aliens’ own unlawful conduct, including violations of the conditions under which they were released to the community by their commission of additional, serious and violent crimes in this country.

Nonetheless, if detained, they are afforded automatic, periodic and meaningful opportunities, at least annually, under the comprehensive immigration parole review procedures for Mariel Cubans established at 8 Code of Federal Regulations § 212.12 (2000), to seek further release within the United States.

These procedures are separate from and in addition to administrative hearings and appeals afforded every alien to determine whether he is eligible to enter or remain in the United States. The allocation of proof under the regulations, moreover, is consistent with the statutory and constitutional allocation of proof applicable to any alien who seeks to be admitted even temporarily into the United States. As evidenced by the petitioners’ own cases, and those of the thousands of other Mariel Cubans who have been paroled under 8 C.F.R. § 212.12 (none of whom has a lawful right to resume their illegal presence in this country, but many of whom have been approved for parole into the United States multiple times), these procedures are clearly sufficient.

Mariel Cubans also have access to judicial oversight of their administrative proceedings, including habeas corpus proceedings to test the legality of their detention and to insure that they are not detained in violation of the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States. Importantly, they are also guaranteed the same rights under law, including the Fifth and Sixth Amendments of the Constitution, as a citizen or any other criminal defendant, before they can be convicted of or punished for a crime.

In providing these procedures, the United States has complied with its obligations under international law to protect the liberty interest of every foreign national on its soil. It is not, as the Report acknowledges, required to treat citizens and aliens identically in every context. In particular, nothing in the American Declaration or any other rule of international law confers on aliens an absolute right to reside in a country to which they have not been lawfully admitted, or even a qualified right to be released from immigration custody when their release poses an unacceptable danger or risk of harm to the interests of that country. Again, the Commission therefore erred in finding such a right to exist, and the continued detention of the petitioners to be arbitrary or otherwise objectionable under the American Declaration.

B. The Detention of Excludable Mariel Cuban

Aliens Pending Their Removal Does Not Violate Principles of Equal Protection.
The detention of the Mariel Cubans is consistent with Article II of the American Declaration and its principle of equal protection under the law. Immigration detention, particularly in light of the comprehensive custody review procedures for Mariel Cubans in 8 C.F.R. § 212.12, is reasonable and proportional to the governmental objectives of promoting orderly immigration, protecting the community, and insuring enforcement of immigration laws. These objectives require the exclusion of criminal aliens who have no legal claim or other right to live in American society.

Detention for the purpose of enforcing the immigration laws that require the exclusion of inadmissible criminal aliens is not arbitrary, punitive, or in violation of due process. Before they are ordered excluded from the United States, aliens in the petitioners' circumstances are afforded full hearings before an immigration judge, in which they may be represented by counsel, confront the immigration charges against them, proffer evidence in rebuttal, apply for such relief or protection from removal for which they may be eligible, and submit any other relevant information in support of their applications for admission. They also may appeal adverse orders of the immigration court to the Board of Immigration Appeals, and have the same opportunity for judicial review of their immigration orders as do other similarly situated aliens.

In addition, if detained, the Mariel Cubans are afforded, in separate administrative proceedings, automatic, periodic reconsideration for parole from custody under the comprehensive procedures at 8 C.F.R. § 212.12. These reviews, during which they may be assisted by counsel or other representatives, provide Mariel Cubans with individualized determinations based on the relevant facts of their particular cases, including any information submitted or developed during annual, face-to-face personal interviews with the review panels.

At the end of each review, the aliens are given a written decision, translated into Spanish, explaining the decisions in their individual cases, and providing reasons for the decisions. Importantly, while an alien's criminal record may have immigration consequences, immigration proceedings are not criminal proceedings, but are civil proceedings. An alien in the United States who is accused of a crime is afforded the same statutory and constitutional safeguards as any other defendant arrested or tried for a crime. Immigration officials do not retry or otherwise go behind the findings or conviction records of the criminal courts. Mariel Cubans nonetheless may test the legality of their immigration detention in federal court by petitioning for writs of habeas corpus.

As demonstrated, here and in previous submissions in response to the petitioners' complaint, detention is recognized by nations as a permissible means of enforcing a state's inherent power to regulate immigration. U.S. immigration law, however, does not mandate detention in every instance of unlawful migration, but authorizes the Attorney General to release aliens in lieu of detention when appropriate pending removal proceedings and repatriation. The Attorney General, relying on his statutory immigration parole authority, has unquestionably and generously exercised his discretion with respect to Mariel Cuban criminals who cannot be promptly repatriated. Parole under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5) is not a lawful admission to this country, and therefore does not change the alien's legal status from that of an applicant for admission. It nonetheless permits an alien not lawfully present in the United States to reside in the community, and to enjoy many of the same benefits (and obligations) of residence in this country, pending proceedings to determine if he is admissible, and pending arrangements to enforce his departure if he is not.

The statute provides for the temporary, conditional parole of inadmissible aliens "only on a case-by-case basis for urgent humanitarian reasons or for significant public benefit." These concerns generally include public safety and risk of flight to avoid removal. The special regulations for Mariel Cubans are fully cognizant of the aliens' unique circumstances, and as such allow release of aliens who would normally be removed rather than paroled into the United States. For the same reasons, the regulations at 8 C.F.R. § 212.12 speak to related concerns, including an alien’s own welfare once he is released into the community, and the likelihood that he may resort to new criminal conduct if he is released without such basic resources as housing and income.

The regulations thus reasonably condition release on the availability of a sponsor, and on the alien’s willingness to agree to other reasonable limits, such as complying with civil and criminal laws, or the rules of any transitional halfway house program to which he may initially be released, and subsequent periodic reporting to immigration authorities to ascertain his whereabouts and renew his employment authorization. The Report’s implicit criticism of the sponsorship requirement is shortsighted from both the perspective of the petitioners and the United States.

The Report also erred as a matter of law in concluding that Mariel Cubans are subject to detention solely because of their status as inadmissible or excludable aliens. See Report at ¶ 241. This finding is based on the Commission’s belief that the United States relies on a legal "fiction" to justify detention of excludable aliens at the border, while deportable aliens are allowed to go free within the United States.[18] See Report at ¶ 233. The petitioners, and Cubans in general, are in no way discriminated against by the United States in the enforcement of the immigration laws. The relevant U.S. immigration law applies to all similarly situated aliens, and all dangerous, illegal aliens are liable to detention for purposes of enforcing the immigration laws, irrespective of their nationality, or their prior immigration status.

Contrary to the Report’s finding, the so-called “entry doctrine “ is consistent with basic due process principles, and international law. The doctrine recognizes that aliens who have been admitted and have lawfully resided in the United States are entitled to additional procedural protections before they may be deprived of that status, and the expectancies that go with it, and expelled from the United States.[19] Neither prior admission nor illicit entry, however, entitles aliens to be free of detention contrary to the interests of the United States pending their removal.[20]

The Supreme Court has construed the immigration statute to implicitly limit under certain circumstances the duration of post-order detention of aliens who have been admitted to the United States.[21] The Court, however, has not found any statutory, constitutional, or other rule of law under which other nations could in effect force this country to accept or even temporarily host dangerous aliens by sending such individuals here and refusing to take them back.[22]

Even then, as demonstrated by the petitioners’ own cases, the parole statute and regulations permit the release of inadmissible aliens within the United States, despite their unlawful arrival or presence. The United States’ treatment of the petitioners thus conforms with and indeed exceeds this country’s obligations under international law,[23] and is fully consistent with the Declaration.

There also is no evidence that the United States has used its detention authority under civil immigration law to punish or mistreat the petitioners or other Mariel Cubans. All classes of aliens are protected under the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution against inhumane and punitive treatment that violates recognized human rights, and the courts are open to any who protest the legality or conditions of their confinement.[24] Furthermore, the procedures governing the detention of Mariel Cubans, which are discussed further below, are similar to the procedures governing the detention of other groups of aliens.[25]
In a related point, the United States also objects to the Report's reference (at ¶ 251) to its "on site visits in this matter," and challenges the Commission's resulting conclusion that detained Mariel Cubans are not provided the same "programs of reform and rehabilitation" that are available to sentenced criminal offenders. This comment again fails to distinguish between the State's interests in criminal and immigration law, including its greater obligations to its own citizens and lawful residents, both those who are leaving prison, and those who live in the communities to which sentenced offenders will necessarily return upon their release from prison.[26]

Further, the noted concern is an inaccurate description of the resources that are available to Mariel Cuban detainees, particularly those who are housed in Federal Bureau of Prisons ("Bureau") facilities. In such facilities, detainees are permitted (but, unlike sentenced inmates, cannot be required) to work, and likewise are encouraged to participate in available educational programs. The vast majority of detainees are housed in the general population, are involved in work and educational programs with other inmates and detainees, and are allowed to move about the institution independently.[27]

In addition, the Bureau funds and/or staffs a number of programs solely directed to Mariel Cubans, including a comprehensive residential substance abuse treatment program at Englewood, Colorado, for detainees who are approved for immigration parole, and it oversees the placement of detainees in halfway house programs established for Mariel Cuban parolees and other similar programs willing to accept or sponsor parolees upon their initial release from custody.[28]

The Bureau also expends significant resources to address such special needs presented by this population, providing bilingual staff and educational services, including English as a Second Language, high school equivalency degree programs, general educational development, drug education and behavior therapy, as well as thorough medical care, and counseling and occupational therapies to Mariel Cubans diagnosed with significant mental health problems.

In this respect, again, the Report's observations cannot be reconciled with its apparent criticism of 8 C.F.R. § 212.12(f), regarding the halfway house and sponsorship requirements when an alien is paroled. The halfway house programs provide paroled Mariel Cubans with housing, health, counseling, employment and other vital services critical to their successful transition from institutional to community living. Aliens released directly to their own custody or even to that of their families rarely access comparable resources. In short, the American Declaration neither contemplates that a government will release dangerous criminal aliens into its communities, nor does it question the authority of the United States in this case to determine how best to allocate its resources and where to spend them in its efforts to address the complex and difficult problems related to the release of criminal aliens who should but cannot be removed from its territory.

Accordingly, there is no basis for the Commission's finding (at ¶ 241) that the treatment of excludable Mariel Cubans is discriminatory and denies them equal protection of the law.

The treatment of the Mariel Cubans subject to detention has been both responsible and humanitarian, as well as reasonable and proportionate in relation to the Government's interests.

The detention is not an end in itself, but rather it is to ensure that the Attorney General is able to fulfill his statutory authority to exclude or decline admission to dangerous aliens whose illegal presence is not in the public interest. The United States does not accept the proposition that it has an obligation or a duty under its own laws or the American Declaration to admit individuals whom no other country, including the petitioners’ country of origin, is willing to accept, simply because such persons have managed illegally to arrive or remain in the United States. Nevertheless, it affords the petitioners procedures that are clearly fair, adequate and effective, and substantially identical to the process afforded other similarly situated aliens, through which they may obtain (and have obtained) their release.

For these reasons, the detention of the petitioners does not deny them equal protection under domestic or international law. While a different, perhaps even more generous policy might be possible, the Commission should refrain from attempting to impose a different policy choice in the form of recommendations that not only discount the sound policy and procedures already in place, but would impair the inherent authority of the United States to protect its borders, and enable foreign governments to compel this country to admit undesirable aliens by the simple expedient of sending them here and refusing to take them back.[29] The Report’s cursory treatment of the latter, sensitive issue in particular is unpersuasive and irresponsible, and suggests a view not shared by the United States or other nations.

II. THE PETITIONERS’ DESIRE FOR LIBERTY IN THE UNITED STATES IS SUFFICIENTLY PROTECTED BY PAROLE REVIEW PROCEDURES THAT PROVIDE A REGULAR AND MEANINGFUL OPPORTUNITY TO SEEK RELEASE FROM DETENTION.

A. The United States Already Provides Significant Custody Redeterminations for Mariel Cuban Detainees.

The Cuban Review Plan at 8 C.F.R. § 212.12 is described in detail in the previous submissions of the United States (see, e.g., July 28, 1988 Submission, at 8-11). Through the comprehensive procedures and extensive, individualized review available under Section 212.12, the Cuban Review Plan serves its purpose of providing an effective, and humanitarian, resolution to a longstanding, complex problem that implicates sensitive foreign relations as well compelling domestic concerns. The review procedures allow the Attorney General to identify Mariel Cubans who can be paroled without posing an unacceptable risk to the community. The effectiveness of this effort is absolutely demonstrated by the release of literally thousands of detained Mariel Cubans since the current review procedures were implemented beginning in 1987, and by the significant overall reduction of the number of Mariel Cubans held in detention today.[30]

Even when parole has been determined to be against the public interest in an individual case, detention of excludable Mariel Cubans has never been properly characterized as unlawful or even “indefinite.” The United States has constantly sought the agreement of Cuba, consistent with that government’s obligations under international law, to accept the return of those detainees who have serious criminal records or severe mental problems. Like every other criminal alien who is lawfully removed from the United States, where possible and appropriate, this country promptly removes Mariel Cuban detainees who can be repatriated to Cuba.[31] In addition, the United States has always been willing to permit any detained Mariel Cuban who could obtain admission to a third country to depart.[32] The evident unwillingness of third countries to accept these detainees further illustrates the reasonableness of the United States’ position and its unwillingness to release all of them into the community.

For those who cannot be repatriated, the Attorney General’s custody review procedures provide automatic, periodic reconsideration for release, and clear guidelines for the exercise of his discretion under the regulations. When properly viewed in this light, such detention is neither indefinite nor unlawful, but subject to periodic reconsideration, affording at minimum an annual opportunity to demonstrate that release on immigration parole would not be contrary to the public safety or interest.
Indeed, although an alien’s parole may be revoked under these regulations because he has violated the conditions of his release, the Attorney General may (and often does) decline to resume custody, if he determines, upon review of the alien’s particular case, including the nature and severity of the violation, that on balance revocation is not warranted. [33]

B. The Cuban Review Plan Meets Prevailing Standards of Fairness and Impartiality.

The United States disagrees with the Commission’s finding (at ¶¶ 220-230) that the Cuban Review Plan at 8 C.F.R. § 212.12 is procedurally deficient. The United States also, of course, rejects any assertion that it “violates” Article XXV of the American Declaration, which cannot be violated as discussed above. Article XXV merely requires that a deprivation of liberty be in accordance with “procedures established by pre-existing law,” and that detainees be given a right of judicial review of the legality of detention in a court of law. Id. at 17. It does not disturb or address the grounds of exclusion, burden of proof, delegation of authority, or frequency of custody reviews under the immigration statute. The Report's assessment of these factors are not supported by the articles it cites, and reflect a flawed analysis of U.S. law and the extant custody review procedures applicable to Mariel Cubans. [34]

The review procedures at Section 212.12 allow the Attorney General to identify and release Mariel Cubans who can be paroled without posing an unacceptable risk to the community. As a remedy from the petitioners’ perspective, and that of other Mariel Cubans, the Cuban Review Plan speaks for itself. As noted, it cannot be disputed that thousands of detained Mariel Cubans have been released since the current review procedures were implemented beginning in 1987, and that there has been a significant overall reduction of the number of Mariel Cubans held in detention today. [35]

1. The American Declaration does not require the United States to implement additional, trial-like procedures.

The Cuban Review Plan is entirely consistent with basic principles of due process and with the balance of interests to be accommodated. In one of its most significant decisions on procedural due process, Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 335 (1976), the United States Supreme Court provided a balancing test for determining the sufficiency of a particular procedure for purposes of due process. While Mathews may be drawn from non-immigration jurisprudence, its approach would not require additional procedures even if applicable here:

Due process generally requires consideration of three distinct factors: First, the private interest that will be affected by the official action; second, the risk of an erroneous deprivation of such interest through the procedures used, and the probable value, if any, of additional or substitute procedural safeguards; and finally, the Government's interest, including the function involved and the fiscal and administrative burdens that the additional or substitute procedural requirement would entail.

Here, the balance clearly tips in favor of assuring fairness without exhaustive, adversarial proceedings. [36] The private interest at stake is the desire of criminal aliens who have been ordered excluded and who have no right to be released within the United States while they await repatriation. That interest must be balanced against the Government's countervailing obligation to protect the public welfare and its absolute sovereign right to control the presence of aliens within its territory. When both of these interests are properly weighed, it becomes clear that the risk of wrongful detention is minimal, for under neither domestic nor international law do aliens illegally present in the United States enjoy an unhampered right to be members of American society despite their lawful exclusion.

On the other hand, the Government's interests in detention are weighty. The United States is already providing automatic, periodic, time-consuming and individualized consideration to Mariel Cubans who seek parole. Furthermore, the Cuban Review Plan focuses on the difficult task of predicting future conduct if released, not on retribution for past conduct.

The Plan nonetheless meets if not exceeds the provisions of the American Declaration, in that it features many of the protections required by civil proceedings in general, and immigration proceedings in particular, such as the right to legal representation by counsel at no expense to the government, the right to present evidence in support of the aliens' suitability for parole, the opportunity to review and rebut any adverse evidence against them, and the right to judicial review of the legality of their detention by habeas corpus proceedings. No additional procedures are contemplated by Article XXV of the American Declaration, under Mathews, or any other domestic or international standard of due process.

2. The existing custody review procedures for Mariel Cubans state the grounds for detention and release with sufficient clarity.

The United States also disagrees with the Report's finding that the immigration statute and present parole review procedures do not identify the particular grounds for detention. Ample notice of the factors for decision making in this realm is provided to the Mariel Cubans and all other aliens by the statute and implementing regulations, including the events that will require an alien’s exclusion or expulsion from the United States, and the scope of the Attorney General’s detention and release authority. The principles stated in the American Declaration do not suggest more; they do not suggest that the United States should admit dangerous criminal aliens, or adopt a precise formula essentially eliminating discretion or prescribing an entitlement to release of such aliens within its borders.

The regulations published at 8 C.F.R. § 212.12 provide in general that Mariel Cuban detainees may be granted immigration parole when it is not contrary to the public interest. Specifically, the regulations provide that parole may be granted if the alien is presently non-violent, is likely to remain non-violent, is not likely to pose a threat to the community following his release, and is not likely to violate the conditions of his parole.[37] The regulations also provide guidance by setting forth specific factors relevant to making this determination, including the detainee’s: criminal history; psychiatric and psychological history; disciplinary infractions while in detention; participation in work, educational and vocational programs; ties to the United States including family ties; and any other information probative of a particular detainee's ability to adjust to life in a community, and not abscond, engage in future acts of violence or criminal activity, or violate the conditions of parole.[38] Detainees are also regularly counseled regarding the program.

These procedures afford more than sufficient guidance to Mariel Cubans regarding the conditions they should meet in order to obtain parole, and the opportunity to show that they have done so, and accordingly merit parole. The result is not arbitrary, even insofar as it takes into account historical or other facts that may not be within the power of an individual to change.

Rather, it affords the detainees individualized consideration of the facts or combination of facts presented each time their specific cases are reviewed. An alien with a serious criminal history may be approved for release if, for example, his present review reflects a combination of such facts as favorable institutional adjustment, participation in educational or work programs, or other evidence of rehabilitation, and community support.

No regulation, particularly one that is directed at assessing likely future conduct, can exhaustively list every possible factor that may be relevant in a particular case to the exclusion of all others, and the instant regulation necessarily preserves the Attorney General’s authority to weigh external factors, domestic and foreign, in assessing an alien's need or suitability for release within the United States.\[39\]

These procedures are applied uniformly to all detainees, to ensure fairness and consistency in the decision-making process. The review given to each detainee is an individualized determination of his suitability for release, including an assessment of his danger to the community. Each determination is subject to several layers of review, in order to insure that the detainees receive full and fair consideration for parole. Further, by centralizing the final layer of review, the regulations promote consistency in parole determinations. These provisions, plus the expertise of the senior officers assigned to the Cuban Review Plan, the product of particularized training and years of experience administering the program, adequately safeguard against the generally unsupported and unfair charges of ambiguity, inconsistency, and speculation leveled by the Report (see, e.g., ¶¶ 222, 224).\[40\]

Moreover, contrary to the Report's findings (at ¶¶ 219-222), the procedures do not create a presumption against release leading to the denial of parole in most cases. This conclusion is unsupported by the record before the Commission, and contradicted by the facts of the petitioners' own releases on parole, and the sheer number of other Mariel Cubans who have been paroled into the United States, one or more times depending on their personal conduct, since their arrival in 1980. While the immigration statute expresses Congress's clear preference for removal and detention pending removal of potentially dangerous aliens, it also includes the exception of discretionary parole or release for those cases in which removal cannot be promptly enforced. The parole regulations for Mariel Cubans provide a vehicle for release, require a case-by-case review of the custody status of each detainee, and a decision based on updated and accurate information provided by and about the detainee in the course of his case review.

3. The regulations lawfully place the burden of proof on an alien who seeks parole within the United States.

The custody review procedures are not deficient because they place the burden on Mariel Cuban detainees to demonstrate that they merit release. See Report at ¶¶ 220, 228. This allocation of the burden of proof is consistent with the immigration statute specifically, with civil proceedings generally, and with the discretionary nature of the benefit sought. The Report's conclusion to the contrary is based on its incorrect conclusion that the petitioners are being deprived of a right to liberty, irrespective of the interests and laws to the contrary of the host nation in which they find themselves. See Report at ¶ 215; but see Section I A, supra. Importantly, while all of the petitioners are criminal aliens, and thus inadmissible to the United States, their complaint does not concern their criminal proceedings, or the statutory and constitutional safeguards afforded them during their criminal trials.

Rather, it concerns their desire to reside in a territory other than their own. The result suggested here, by the Commission's Report, would require an extraordinary reversal of law. Neither the American Declaration, nor any rule of international law, contemplates such a result. The onus is clearly and reasonably upon the alien who seeks to reside abroad to prove to the satisfaction of the foreign state that he merits the privilege he desires, or at the very least that his liberty within that country will not be harmful to its society.

The United States has a fundamental obligation to protect its own citizens and lawful residents, an obligation that clearly outweighs the petitioners' narrow interest, or desire to be enlarged despite their lawful exclusion from the United States, and commission of serious crimes when previously accorded the same privilege.\[41\]

Nor are the petitioners or other Mariel Cubans materially prejudiced by the allocation of proof in their administrative custody reviews. They perhaps know better than anyone else the extent of their criminal conduct in this country and elsewhere, and they are afforded the opportunity during the review process -- in personal interviews, through written submissions, and with the assistance of their representatives -- to inform the panel of their accomplishments or any other facts which support their request for parole. Again, as clearly evidenced by the facts of the petitioners’ own cases, the Report’s findings also lack empirical support.

Clearly, the existing procedures are not so onerous as to prevent the petitioners from being able to satisfy their burden of proof, as evidenced by the release determinations in their favor.

4. The parole authority is properly vested in the Attorney General and his delegates.

Nor are the immigration parole review procedures for Mariel Cubans deficient simply because they commit the ultimate decision-making authority to the Attorney General. See Report at ¶¶ 217-225. The return of dangerous aliens to American society despite their lawful exclusion from the United States, or their crimes in this country when previously released, is by nature an exercise of discretion on the part of the sovereign.

Congress has committed that discretion to the Attorney General, the executive official charged with administering the immigration laws. This congressional delegation of authority is permissible under the U.S. Constitution and does not violate due process or international law. The simple combination of investigative and adjudicative functions under one agency does not, without more, violate any standard of due process. Further, the administrative decision-makers, the Attorney General and his delegates, are entitled to a presumption of honesty and integrity in carrying out their statutory and regulatory duties.[42] There has been no showing that this complex and difficult program has been operated under any lesser standard.

Although discretionary, the exercise of the Attorney General's detention and parole authority is guided by the statutory and regulatory criteria published at 8 C.F.R. § 212.12, which prescribe the procedures for conducting custody determinations, the relevant factors to be weighed in the case reviews, the conditions for release within the United States, and the circumstances under which the aliens may be returned to custody. These guidelines are applied uniformly to all Mariel Cubans liable to detention in the United States, and insure consistency in the decision-making process.

Contrary to the Commission's Report (at ¶¶ 213, 218), a trial or a full-blown adversarial hearing is not required or even practicable to determine if discretionary immigration parole is warranted in a particular case. Again, the extant procedures have resulted in the parole of most of the petitioners, and greatly reduced the number of Mariel Cubans taken or retained in custody. There is no reason to believe that an administrative judge or the numerous federal courts would make better or more consistent judgments about the likelihood that a detainee could successfully integrate into the community, or that the additional burdens on the courts, and the attendant delays for the petitioners as well as other criminal and civil litigants, would result in additional releases or better safeguard public safety and order.

Indeed, such measures as have been implemented, including extensive training to officers involved in the review process, and centralizing the final layer of decision-making, have demonstrably safeguarded prompt, uniform decision making, and promoting the development of necessary expertise.

Lastly, the American Declaration does not compel the United States to vest the parole authority in the judicial branch. As a non-binding instrument, the Declaration cannot oblige the United State to invest individuals with an overriding right to liberty or otherwise diminish the authority of the United States to exclude undesirable criminal aliens.
Further, the principles contained in Article XXV of the Declaration, specifically, do not suggest that detained Mariel Cubans should be given trials or adversarial hearings before law judges to determine whether or not they should be released into U.S. society. At most, they suggest that they be allowed to contest the legality of their detention before a judge, a procedure which they already have under this country’s law. Any further decision whether to release or detain Mariel Cubans properly is a matter of discretion for the United States.

5. The regulations provide for prompt, periodic reconsideration of detention status.

Custody reviews under 8 C.F.R. § 212.12 are not so infrequent as to make detention arbitrary. See Report at ¶¶ 229, 230. The existing procedures provide Mariel Cubans with automatic, periodic reconsideration for immigration parole at least annually. In addition, the regulations permit the scheduling of reviews at shorter intervals where warranted by a detainee’s particular case, or because of a material change in his circumstances in the interim. [43]

Further, the review process itself is a complex undertaking that occurs over a period of weeks or even months from the time the interviews are first scheduled, requires numerous time-consuming steps, commits significant personnel and resources, and affects all of the responsible agencies.

The current procedures themselves are far from cursory; each case is reviewed by a panel of senior officers, who also conduct a personal interview with the alien, and prepare a written report with their findings and recommendation. That report is forwarded to the Director of the Cuban Review Plan, and again reviewed before a decision is rendered by the Associate Commissioner for Enforcement.[44] Before this process even occurs, time must be allowed for arrangements with the institutions where the detainees are located and the panel interviews conducted, for the selection and travel of the panel members, for notice to the detainees ahead of time, as well as for providing necessary records to the reviewing officers, and for inspection by the detainees and their representatives.

The Commission’s Report does not appear to consider the extent of the process involved, nor does it explain how the additional burdens of requiring more frequent custody reviews in every case would materially improve the decision making process.

6. The petitioners are afforded an effective right to judicial review of the legality of their detention.

The United States also disagrees with the Report insofar as it finds (at ¶¶ 232-235) that the judicial review procedures available to Mariel Cubans are too limited in nature and scope to be effective. As have other detained Mariel Cubans, the petitioners may test the legality of their detention by filing petitions for writs of habeas corpus in federal court under 28 U.S.C. § 2241.

There is no time limit for judicial review under the habeas corpus statute, and the scope of review is sufficiently broad to reach constitutional and statutory challenges to a petitioner's custody. A court may order the release by writ of habeas corpus to any individual detained in violation of the Constitution, laws or treaties of the United States.[45]

Judicial review of immigration detention is therefore not limited to determining whether the detaining officials have complied with the procedures, as the Report found, but also extends to the legality of the detention itself. The scope of review may nonetheless vary with the nature of the right at issue.

Under our system of government, reviewing courts owe substantial deference to the Legislative and Executive Branches with respect to matters involving, in particular, foreign relations, including the formulation, administration and enforcement of immigration policy.\[46\] The Commission’s apparent view (at ¶ 233) that judicial review cannot be effective unless the United States recognizes an obligation to admit all excludable Mariel Cubans into this country is simply wrong. Under neither domestic nor international law do aliens illegally present in the United States enjoy an unhampered right to liberty, irrespective of their crimes or potential for harm to others.\[47\]

Notwithstanding the Commission’s report, the courts of the United States have engaged not in limited review of the authority for the petitioners’ custody, but in thorough, exhaustive examination of the custody challenges brought by detained criminal aliens, including Mariel Cubans, on statutory, constitutional, and international law grounds.

The majority of courts have held that under the existing Cuban Review Plan sufficient procedures are in place for excluded Mariel Cubans who seek release within the United States pending continued efforts to return them to Cuba. Any further doubt about the sufficiency of the procedures is contradicted by the fact that the vast majority of Mariel Cubans were paroled under the immigration parole statute at 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A), and thousands more have been released from immigration custody pursuant to the current custody review procedures since the instant Petition was filed in 1987, many of them more than once.

The only petitioners who are now detained have engaged in serious, violent, and/or repeated criminal conduct when paroled into the United States. They are nonetheless reconsidered every year to determine if they can again be paroled into the community under 8 C.F.R. § 212.12. In light of their criminal conduct when previously released, including such offenses as manslaughter, assault, drug offenses, and sexual crimes against children, the revocation or denial of immigration parole pending repatriation to Cuba, or further reconsideration for release into the United States in a year’s time, is eminently reasonable.

7. The petitioners are not excused from continuing to exhaust available domestic remedies.

The United States further disagrees with the Commission’s conclusion that exhaustion of domestic remedies would be futile. See Report at ¶ 212. The petitioners cannot demonstrate that they fall under any of the four exceptions to the exhaustion requirement set forth in the Regulations of the Commission because they have been given full access to the Mariel Cuban parole procedures.

If indeed still detained, the petitioners should not be excused from their continuing duty to exhaust those procedures that afford them a new opportunity to seek release every year.

At most, due process guarantees the petitioners fair and effective procedures by which they may seek to be released temporarily while awaiting their removal. The United States has established such procedures.

The regulations at 8 C.F.R. § 212.12 afford a comprehensive, effective and humane process under which Mariel Cubans who have failed to gain admission to this country are nonetheless able to obtain meaningful consideration for release, even after they have engaged in further dangerous criminal conduct that has injured this country and its lawful population.\[48\] Exhaustion here cannot be characterized as futile, when compared to cases of the petitioners and other Mariel Cubans who have been released after undergoing some form of custody review procedures.

In view of the generous procedural protections afforded to the Mariel Cubans that permit them an opportunity to seek release from detention every year, it cannot be said that their detention has become indefinite or arbitrary. On the contrary, the periodic review of their detentions, coupled with an opportunity for judicial review of any adverse decisions, provide the petitioners with a more than adequate process that they must exhaust before seeking relief from the Commission.

For these reasons, the United States also disagrees with the Commission's finding at ¶ 189 that the petitioners have fully pursued and exhausted their domestic remedies.

[1] The updated record information about the petitioners that was secured is attached (Addendum). This record survey both refutes any claim that Mariel Cubans with minor infractions or insignificant criminal records are being detained, and demonstrates that the existing procedures in the Cuban Review Plan provide the petitioners with an effective vehicle for release. All of the petitioners, and all other Mariel Cubans presently in custody, have been paroled one or more times since their arrival. Of the original 367 petitioners, less than 20 appear to be in custody at this time and, of those paroled, most were released under the current procedures between 1987-89, and have not returned to custody.

[9] See Zadvydas, 121 S. Ct. at 2497 (“[T]he primary federal habeas corpus statute, 28 U.S.C. 2241, confers jurisdiction upon the federal courts to hear these cases,” citing 8 U.S.C. 2241(c)(3), which “authorize[s] any person to claim in federal court that he or she is being held 'in custody in violation of the Constitution or laws [or treaties] of the United States.'”).

[10] Indeed, the United States has struck an exemplary balance between its own rights and obligations to its own citizens and the desire of the Mariel Cubans to live in the United States. Of the 125,000 Mariel Cubans who came to this country in 1980 without any legal right to enter, approximately 123,000 were promptly released into the community, including aliens who admitted to having criminal records in Cuba, and all but a very few were eventually paroled. The vast majority have become productive, law abiding members of their communities and have become eligible for U.S. citizenship. See October 9, 1987 Submission, at 4.

Highly secure placements are ordinarily reserved for detainees who have physically attacked and injured prison staff, other inmates, or other detainees. All detainees are housed in the least restrictive setting possible, taking into account their criminal and institutional behavioral histories, and all detainees housed in the secure units are evaluated on a regular basis for placement in less restrictive housing. Mariel Cubans in local and state contract facilities who are denied immigration parole are referred to the Bureau for placement.

Many of these functions were performed by the United States Public Health Service and the Department of Justice's Community Relations Service before they were consolidated under the Bureau.

See Jean, 727 F.2d at 975.

Joint Communique Between the United States of America and Cuba, T.I.A.S. No. 11057, available at 1984 WL 161941 (signed at New York, December 14, 1984, with Minute on Implementation), under which agreement the United States has repatriated 1530 Mariel Cubans.

As noted in our March 22, 1999 Submission, at 7, between June 1994-December 1998, detainers were reviewed for 3,948 Mariel Cubans whose immigration parole was subject to revocation because of criminal activity in this country. Parole was not revoked in approximately half (1,972) of those cases given the nature of the crimes and other relevant factors in each case. In nearly 38% of such cases so considered for parole revocation between January-October 1998, the aliens had been paroled since 1988.

The Commission found, in particular, that the Plan (1) fails to identify with particularity the grounds for detention; (2) places the burden on the detainee to justify release; (3) gives too much discretion in the Attorney General; and (4) fails to provide for detention reviews at reasonable intervals.

The majority (123,000) of the Mariel Cubans were paroled under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A) shortly after their arrival in 1980. Another 2,040 were released under the Attorney General's Status Review Plan, which was adopted in 1981, when Cuba's refusal to allow repatriation created the undesirable possibility of prolonged detention for the small number (1,800) who were not initially paroled because their criminal backgrounds or serious medical and psychiatric problems posed an unacceptable risk to the community. The Attorney General's Status Review Plan was terminated in February 1985, in the expectation that the Cubans then in detention would be repatriated to Cuba under the terms of the agreement reached between the two governments in December 1984. In May 1985, however, Cuba unilaterally suspended the 1984 agreement for unrelated reasons after only 201 Mariel Cubans had been repatriated to Cuba. Between 1985 and promulgation of the current review procedures in 1987, approximately 1,300 Mariel Cubans were paroled under normal immigration procedures that are applicable to all aliens. Approximately 7300 excludable Mariel
